Draft May Be Junked, Johnson Says

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson ordered a sweeping study Saturday of military manpower policies to determine whether the draft can be eliminated in the 1970s.

Johnson made the announcement at his second news conference in three days, this one a 35-minute session in his office, not announced in advance.

The President said Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara will undertake the one-year study to "consider alternatives to the present draft selection system including the possibility of meeting our requirements on an entirely voluntary basis in the next decade."

Asked if this foreshadows a cutback in military strength, the chief executive said: "I wouldn't want to anticipate the results of that study. Of course, it is the hope of everyone that tensions in the world can ease, that we can bring about disarmament, that we can take part of the resources that are now going into military production and protection" and "spend them on a better society and a greater society."

Draft calls this year have run between 16,000 and 12,000 monthly.

Politics again figured prominently in Johnson's give-and-take with newsmen. In response to one question, Johnson seemed to concede that Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona is the front-runner for the Republican presidential nomination.

Johnson related that he talked Friday to a man "very knowledgeable in public affairs" who thought Goldwater "might go into the GOP nominating convention in July with some 632 votes and that more than 500 votes "looked like a pretty solid figure."

Referring to Goldwater, Johnson said: "I think he will be up there pretty high."

Presidential News Conference Text on P. 3-F

Declining to announce his own candidacy for election, the President said: "I try to keep as far away from partisanship and campaigning as I can. I try to keep my political speeches restrained."

The chief executive said he wants to "be president of all the people and do what I think is best for all the people, not just best for Democrats, but best for all Americans."

He said it is "very damaging to the American nation to have opposition for opposition's sake and to have blind opposition." He said "it grieves me" to see party-line opposition to measures "calculated to benefit all Americans" but he did not go into specifics.

The chief executive said he would have something to say "about the responsibility of the candidates" when he addresses the annual luncheon of The Associated Press in New York on Monday.

Johnson said his speech will encompass "a very general statement of our foreign policy," notably with respect to American-Soviet relations, Cuba, Communist China, Viet Nam and Latin America.

Johnson opened his news conference by saying he has seen what he termed a "very inaccurate" published report that his Monday speech will announce plans for a cutback of 45 per cent in the production of fissionable materials for nuclear weapons.

Reading at a rapid clip, Johnson began the conference with a series of statements and announcements, one of them reciting encouraging economic statistics.

The President reported increases during March in farm prices, housing starts, new auto sales, and industrial production and a drop in wholesale prices — "very good news."

He also reported a year-to-

Roofers Accept New Two-Year Work Contract

About 500 members of Roofers Local No. 41 in four states will go back to work Monday. They reached an agreement Saturday morning with the Associated Roofing Contractors of Colorado.

The roofers went on strike April 1 after bargaining efforts failed to produce a contractural agreement, favorable to both union and management.

At a membership meeting Saturday morning in Denver the roofers accepted an offer for a 10-cent per hour pay increase now, 10 cents on Oct. 1, and 20 cents on April 1, 1965, according to Archie Topping, financial secretary of Local 41.

Topping said the contractors had agreed to changes in the wording of the contract requested by the roofers.

The strike affected a number of important projects in the Pikes Peak Region, including the construction of a hangar at Ft. Carson, a new junior high school, and others. All of Colorado and sections of Wyoming, Nebraska and South Dakota were affected by the walkout.

There were no picket lines set up by the roofers.

The roofers had originally asked for a 45-cent per hour wage increase and were offered 25 cents by the contractors. A later offer of 15 cents per hour now and another 15 cents a year from now on a two-year contract was also rejected by the roofers union.

Local members of the contractors negotiating committee included Harold Heyse and F. M. Prosser.

SMALL HAND HOLDS SMALL BOY'S LIFE—Danny Nowell, 12-year-old boy who helped hold this balloon just before take-off at Mill Valley, Calif., didn't let go in time. Here he dangles from the line hundreds of feet in the air, being dragged 3,000 feet into the air before the balloon pilot discovered the boy's plight. The pilot made an immediate descent and saved the boy's life. This picture was made by a watcher, Al McDuffy, using a Graflex camera. (AP Wirephoto)

12-Year-Old Survives 3,000-Foot High Ride Holding Balloon Rope

MILL VALLEY, Calif. (AP)—A 12-year-old boy, dangling from a rope, was carried to a height of 3,000 feet by a balloon Saturday before the pilot realized the youngster's plight.

The pilot, William Berry, 36, of Concord, Calif., then put the hot-air balloon into a rapid descent and landed the boy safely.

The lad, Danny Nowell, of Tennessee Valley, had volunteered with others to hang onto restraining ropes until the pilot was ready for his ascent.

Berry gave the signal. All cast the lines away except young Nowell. He had wrapped his rope around his left wrist.

As the lad was jerked into the air 75 horror-stricken spectators screamed. Some women knelt in prayer.

Berry, sitting in the balloon basket, could not see Nowell dangling directly below him.

At a height of 3,000 feet Berry sensed that something was amiss.

He saw the boy and at once cut off the fans that forced hot air into the 50-foot-high balloon.

Berry descended gently in the back yard of Robert Dewalt, two miles from the launching.

Danny was taken to a general hospital where his left hand, badly discolored from loss of circulation, was treated.

Race Group May Tie Up Opening Of World's Fair

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A civil rights group has announced that a plan to tie up the opening of the New York World's Fair Wednesday with an automobile "stall-in" will be carried out unless Negro demands are met.

Marshall C. England, chairman of the Manhattan chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality, said the demonstration would emphasize Negro demands for better housing, schools, job opportunities and an investigation of what he called police brutality.

In Washington, a group of Negro leaders issued a statement denouncing the "stall-in" as an act that could harm thousands and would not serve the broad interests of Negroes.

The proposal to block the fair opening was called irresponsible by Jackie Robinson, Negro baseball star and a leader in the civil rights movement. Robinson sent a telegram from Detroit to floor managers of the civil rights bill in Congress, stating that such action might spark a white counter revolution.

In New York's Harlem district, about 75 residents engaged in a pitched battle with police after officers tried to arrest two teenagers who were accused of overturning a fruit peddler's cart. Four patrolmen and a social worker were injured, none seriously.

A school boycott protesting alleged segregation in Gary, Ind., brought differing reports on absentee pupils. School Supt. Lee R. Gilbert said about 16,000 boycotted classrooms and the one-day demonstration. Spokesmen for the Civil Rights Coordinating Committee said at least 19,000 of the 47,376 pupils enrolled turned out for a series of 30 "freedom schools." Pickets, led by Dick Gregory, Chicago Negro comedian, demonstrated in front of the school board office.

In Cleveland, Harold B. Williams, coordinator of the United Freedom Movement, said a team of doctors would sign excuses if necessary for pupils who take part in a school boycott

49 Die, Including 23 Americans in Airliner Crash

By ALEX SMITH

BAHREIN ISLAND (UPI) — A Middle East Airlines jetliner with 49 persons aboard, including 23 Americans, was found Saturday in the Persian Gulf where it had crashed in 18 feet of water while trying to land at Dhahran airport in a blinding sandstorm.

Authorities feared all aboard were dead, but U.S. Navy helicopters and rescue ships searched the waters in the faint hope that some might have survived. There was no sign of life.

Most of the American passengers were employes of the Arabian American Oil Co. (ARAMCO) and their dependents, en route to ARAMCO's operating headquarters at Dhahran in Saudi Arabia.

The plane, a twin-jet French-

14 Airmen Killed As Two Flying Boxcars Collide

WILMINGTON, Ohio (UPI) — Two C119 Flying Boxcars apparently collided and crashed in a farm field about 10 miles away while approaching for a landing at the nearby Clinton County Air Force Base Saturday night, killing about 14 of the 19 airmen and Army paratroopers aboard.

Three men were reported injured, two critically, and two were unaccounted for several hours after the crash. Air Force officials speculated they might have parachuted and gotten lost in the darkness.

Identification of the 19 was withheld by the Air Force.

The planes were reported returning from a night mission, which was cancelled because of bad weather in the Midwest. The wreckage plumeted down onto the Flint farm along U.S. 22 about five miles east of here in south-central Ohio.

An explosion was heard by area residents, and one plane burst into flames which prevented police and Air Force investigators from getting inside the aircraft imediately.

Portable lights were set up at the scene to aid rescuers and investigators.

Heavy rains during the day had made fields very muddy, causing ambulances, police cruisers and cars to get stuck along the country roads and in the field at the crash scene. Wreckers had to be dispatched to pull the vehicles out.

The sheriff's office said all its men were out to aid at the scene and to direct traffic, which was congested in the area. A newsman said "everything is highly confused at the scene."

Investigators first thought only one plane had crashed and burned, but later found the other battered Flying Box Car lying in the pitch darkness.

The base spokesman said the planes carried 10 Air Force reservists on weekend training and nine Army paratroopers out of Fort Campbell, Ky. He said the extent of the casualties was not officially known, as he had received no word from the investigating team at the scene.

A newsman at the scene said there were 14 dead, and that 17 of those aboard had been accounted for. Three servicemen were reported injured, two critically, and taken to the Wilmington Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Paul Bennett, a farmer living about a quarter of a mile from the crash scene, about five miles from here, said he was sitting in his kitchen when he heard "a terrific explosion, ran to the front door and saw flames come from one plane as it crashed to the ground."

The farmer said he ran to the telephone, called the base and ran to the crash scene where one plane burned furiously. The other flying boxcar, he said, was lying crumpled up about 100 yards away.

Bennett said the survivors were around the plane which did not burn. He said he also saw three men wearing parachutes around the planes, both demolished.

"Bodies were scattered all over the ground," Bennett said.

The highway patrol post said

2,500 Pickets Force Racial Hiring Policy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A hiring agreement for minority groups, ending massive civil rights demonstrations on San Francisco's "auto row," was announced Saturday to more than 2,500 cheering pickets.

The agreement came in response to demands that car dealers hire more Negroes as salesmen and mechanics.

The demonstrators—75 per cent white—had parade in one of six auto agencies for more than three hours while officials of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People negotiated with the Motor Car Dealers Association.

Dr. Thomas Burbridge, head of the NAACP in San Francisco, announced the agreement.

Dozens of police had stood by ready to begin mass arrests had the demonstrators moved inside the showrooms for sit-ins. On two previous Saturdays, sit-in tactics brought arrest of more than 300 demonstrators.

Coloradoans Warned About Tick Fever

DENVER (AP) — The State Health Department warned Saturday that the warm weather is bringing out the wood ticks — carriers of Colorado tick fever and Rocky Mountain spotted fever.

Dr. Roy L. Cleere, director, urged all visitors to mountainous, woody and brushy areas to watch for ticks.

The individual "must wear proper protective clothing when he is in tick-infested areas and he must search for ticks on his body and get them off before they attach," he said.

Colorado tick fever is more common in this state than the more serious Rocky Mountain spotted fever, although both diseases are transmitted by the same ticks.

Fried Chicken Fading From Cuban Scene

HAVANA (UPI) — Chicken consumption, already rationed to one fowl per adult per month will be limited in Havana to children under 7 and persons over 65 beginning May 1, it was announced Saturday.

Children will receive two fowls per month and elderly persons one. There will be no chicken available for other Havana residents unless they are under a doctor-ordered diet requiring poultry, the official radio said Saturday.

New Red-Led Revolt Breaks Out in Congo

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo (UPI)—A revolt believed to be Communist-inspired broke out against the government in Kivu province Saturday—the second such revolt against the Leopoldville government in three months.

Distress calls to United Nations headquarters here said there was rioting in the provincial capital of Bukavu with several dead and that armed leftist partisans were threatening to attack a Swedish-Norwegian Protestant mission.

First reports indicated the revolt might have been organizd by the pro-Peking Jeunesse movement. Half-naked savags with primitive weapons have terrorized Kwilu Province for three months, costing the lives of six white missionaries and countless Africans. That revolt still is smouldering.

One dispatch to U.N. headquarters said armed terrorists were reported encircling the mission at Lemera, near the Burundi border on Lake Tanganyika. The mission consists of 20 Swedes including women

White Shoppers Are Attacked in South Rhodesia

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia (UPI)—A gang of Africans attacked white shoppers in a downtown department store Saturday in an outburst of racial violence that threatened to explode at any moment into a full-fledged race war.

Lawlessness and rioting triggered by the arrest and restriction of African Nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo left the African townships in Salisbury and Bulawayo in a virtual state of anarchy with mobs hurling stones at police. Police opened fire twice with shotguns.

Tension was reported at fever pitch in the African townships which sprawl on the edges of Salisbury and Bulawayo, the industrial heart of the territory. The violence seemed

3,000 Whites Threatened in Basutoland

MASERU, Basutoland (UPI) — Anti-white leaflets threatening Basutoland's 3,000 whites with "hellfire" unless they quit the country were found Saturday on the doorsteps of all white homes and government offices in Maseru.

The distribution of anti-white leaflets came as a Basuto delegation gathered in London for constitutional talks with the British government which are expected to result in a lengthy wrangle between the two sides.

Basutoland, a small British enclave about the size of Belgium, is entirely surrounded by South Africa.

The leaflets distributed Saturday called the territory's 3,000 whites "bloodsuckers, capitalists, imperialists and betrayers." It warned them to quit the country by Monday or "face the hellfire."

Western Area Slated for Defense Test

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 14,500-square-mile air space over parts of three Western states will be restricted to military use May 17 to May 30 for a defense exercise involving 100,000 troops and 1,000 aircraft.

The Federal Aviation Agency on Friday designated the space over sections of southeastern California, northwestern Arizona and southern Nevada.

The Air Force asked for the ruling because of possible hazards to other aircraft, the FAA said.

The operation, called "Desert Strike," will include parachute drops of troops and heavy equipment, flights of target drones and of jets simulating bombing and strafing attacks.

Cuban Refugee Survives Death Of 17 Others

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A Cuban refugee who survived more than two weeks of drifting without food in the Caribbean says he buried 16 of those who died at sea. But he couldn't part with his wife.

"I embraced her and decided I would die with her," Vicente Mayans, 38, was quoted today by his sister, Francisco Mayans.

The sister, who lives here, visited him in Kingston, Jamaica, where he is recovering in a hospital.

Mayans was recovered March 20 after the craft beached at British-owned Grand Cayman Island. He was unconscious and clutched the body of his wife in a tight embrace, his sister reported.

The party, including five children and six women, drifted 18 days in the open boat without food and water after Cuban militiamen killed the captain, only person aboard who could navigate, Miss Mayans said.

Student Held For 'Wanting' To 'Kill' LBJ

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Students in a Jefferson High School English class turned in themes on the subject "What I plan to do in the summer of 1964." One sent the teacher scurrying to the dean of boys, Jose Garcia. He called police.

The 10th line of the disturbing theme read: "I'll take a trip to Washington, D.C., and kill the President."

Friday Carl Delvic was held under $5,000 bond by U.S. Commissioner Paul Game Jr., on a charge of threatening the President's life.

"That is what I would like to do," the youngster replied when asked if he still wished to kill President Johnson.

The theme also outlined plans to purge the nation of Communists, Jews and Negroes. Delvic was asked if it accurately portrayed his plans. He said, "Yes, sir."

Delvic said that he planned to spend the summer raising money to hire an assassin, but if he couldn't get the money, he would carry out the threat himself. He told Game he would try to get past the President's guards and use poison.

His mother said it would be better that he remain in custody when she was asked if she would accept responsibility for her son should he be released.

Ent Skeet Team Wins in Kingston Shoot

The Ent Air Force Base Skeet Team has just returned from a four-day shoot in Kingston, Jamaica in which they won the five-man team events in three out of four gauges, as well as individual honors.

The 410 Gauge event was won by the Jamaican Team, 457 to 436 out of a possible 500. Individual scores for Ent were as follows: George Johnson, 93; Jim Landers, 81; Carl Poston, 86; Jim Dozier, 88; and Robert Carter, 88. Johnson's 93 was good enough to win him Runner-up to Albert Seaga of Jamaica, whose 94 was top for the 410.

Starting with the 28 Gauge, which Ent won, 474 to 467, the Ent Team took command and won all gauges in the rest of the shoot. The Ent Team's individual scores were as follows: Johnson, 93; Landers, 96; Poston, 98; Dozier, 90; Carter, 97. Poston's 98 won him a tie with Albert Seaga for the 28 Gauge Championship which Poston won in the shoot-off by going 25 straight to Seaga's 24.

Although the scores were higher for the 20 Gauge, it was by the same margin of 7 birds that Ent won this event, 485 to 478. Individually the Ent Team shot as follows: Johnson 98; Landers, 98; Poston, 96; Dozier, 94; and Carter, 99. Carter's 99 won him a tie with Seaga; and in the shoot-off, Seaga bested Carter 25 to 24 to become the 20 Gauge Champion with Carter the Runner-up.

The 12 Gauge event was the most closely contested event with Ent winning it by only one bird, 493 to 492. Individual scores for the Ent Team were as follows: Johnson, 99; Landers, 98; Poston, 98; Dozier, 100; Carter, 98. Dozier's 100 straight won him only a tie for the 12 Gauge Championship as Tony Kelly of the Jamaican Team also went straight. That's the way this event stayed with Kelly and Dozier Co-Champions as darkness prevented a shoot-off.

The individual high over-all championship for all four guns was won by the little 125-pounder Albert Seaga, whose 390 out of a possible 400 was tops. Johnson's 383 won him a tie for high over-all Runner-up with Kelly from Jamaica, and because of darkness no shoot-off was held.

Negro Theater Flourishes In New York

By WILLIA MGLOVER

NEW YORK (AP)—A surge of interest in shows by, about and starring Negroes is a conspicuous feature of this theatrical season.

There have been 18 pertinent productions on Broadway and off—a record number.

Some could have come along at any time. But most of them reflect headline attention on the civil rights struggle, and aspects of violent racial dispute.

Latest of the topical group is "Blues for Mister Charlie," a first drama by novelist-essayist James Baldwin. It opens April 23 at the Anta Theater. Its theme: Sudden death of a Negro youth in a small Southern town.

Of the six ethnic presentations which have won considerable boxoffice attention, almost all are declarations of anger against the past, determination for the future.

Some are by white authors, most are produced by whites and the largest segment of attendance is white. The situation prompted the producer of "Sponono," a drama imported from South Africa, to exclaim disconsolately "Where is the Negro audience?" The show will close an abortive Broadway run Saturday night.

Another offering, "Ballad for Bimshire" — a light - hearted musical about life in Barbados — was put on under all-Negro sponsorship. It fought a losing 11-week battle. The producers have vowed to try again.

Longest-running of this season's arrivals is "In White America," an historical digest compiled by Martin B. Duberman, a Princeton professor, and performed by a mixed cast at the Sheridan Square Playhouse.

"Jerico - Jim Crow," which goes over the same basic hatter in musical terms, is another winner on a wave of critical acclaim in weekend performances at a Greenwich Village Church. "Trumpets of The Lord," a Gospel sing, is thriving at 1 Sheridan Square.

An angry young new playwright, Leoi Jones, speaks out strongly in "Dutchman," at the Cherry Lane. His focus, like the less successful effort of another first - timer, Adrienne Kennedy with "Funnyhouse of a Negro," is the distress of the Negro held in subjugation.

Although "Sponono" failed, another import from South Africa, Atholl Fugard's "The Blood Knot" is playing triumphantly at the Cricket.

On Broadway, Josephine Baker scored solidly in a limited engagement, but failed to capture further audiences during a suddenly-arranged return visit. Another bid was Langston Hughes' "Tambourines to Glory." It failed to thrive.

Indicative of today's trend was the failure of "Cabin in The Sky" in a handsomely-mounted revival. Many found its viewpoint dated.

One off-Broadway offering yet to arrive, "Sarah and The Sax," concerns a Jewish matron and a colored musician.

It is due May 4—the day when the longest - running racial drama in town, Jean Genet's "The Blacks," enters its fourth year at the St. Marks Playhouse.

MEDAL FOR CAPTAIN — Capt. William E. Henschel (right) receives the Army Commendation Medal with accompanying citation for an assignment he completed before coming to Army Air Defense Command headquarters in Colorado Springs last month. Making the presentation is Lt. Gen. Charles B. Duff, commanding general of ARADCOM. Capt. Henschel is now assigned in the G-2 (Intelligence) Section of ARADCOM. He was honored for his duty in Vietnam, where, as a member of the U. S. Military Assistance Advisory Group, he planned for the sending of Vietnamese Army officers and enlisted men to U. S. military schools. The captain is married and has three children. His family will join him here in June. (U. S. Army Photo)

I Remember

By CHARLES S. DUDLEY

C. S. DUDLEY

John A. McDougall, formerly of Colorado Springs, now a resident of Fort Collins, Colo., sheds copious tears on paper in a long letter he has sent to the Gazette Telegraph on the subject of the doomed Antlers Hotel, which it is announced is to be razed in the fall.

McDougall, a former reporter on the Evening Telegraph (1917 and 1918), a former employe of the Colorado Springs Co. (the original townsite company); a writer on John Green's former weekly Advertiser; chief deputy county clerk and recorder for several years under Charles Ozias and a member of the staff of the Colorado College Tiger, 1914-1916, sums up the history of the Antlers Hotel in a nostalgic communication.

He has written that he wishes to be remembered to "Hutch," Mrs. Morath and to me, and others still connected with the Gazette Telegraph whom he knew, and I have just finished reading his tale of regrets that the Antlers Hotel is to be no more. It seems to me that this column is an appropriate place to run it.

It is interesting. Here it is:

By John A. McDougall

"It will mark the end of an era.

"The news that the Antlers Hotel, a landmark for more than 65 years and a part of the trademark of Colorado Springs, will be closed next August 31 and be ready for tearing down, does indeed 'mark the end of an era'. But that end had its beginnings many years ago. Was it.-

"When the celebrated oil painting of Gen. William Palmer, the founder of the city, and the great builder, was taken down from its place over the big fireplace in the Antlers obby?

"When the Coffee Shop and later the Mexican Room were installed in the Antlers much against the better judgement of Mr. George A. Krause, former secretary to Gen. Palmer and at that time president of the Colorado Springs Co., the original townsite company?

"When the beautiful large dining room, which had seen so many distinguished guests, and were Chef Marcel Renault had served such wonderful seven and nine course dinners, was sub-divided?

"When the large ballroom, with its wonderful floating 'dancing floor,' and which had been the scene of so many gay and colorful formals, was turned into apartments?

"When shop additions were added to the main floor, destroying in the eyes of many the old world character of the building?

"When the late Charley MacNeal, angered at the senior Mr. Krause's criticism of the Wild West Cripple Creek party Charles has held in his leased third floor apartment at the Antlers, swore to build a hotel that would forever put the Antlers in the shade: (And he, with a few former Cripple Creek associates such as Charles Tutt and Spencer Penrose, built the original Broadmoor Hotel and opened it under the management of the renowned Charles Dunning, a former manager of the Antlers.)?

"When the ownership of the Antlers finally passed out of the control of the Palmer heirs and the Colorado Springs Company?

"Or did this "end of an era" have its beginnings in other events in the city such as,-

"When Sir Harry Lauder, the beloved Scot of half the world, stood on the stage of the Burns Theatre, which he had so often described as "the bonniest playhoose in the West," and told a cheering and weeping audience "Goodbye"?

"When a workman tore down the last heavy red velvet curtain in the old Opera House, now the site of the Woolworth Building?

"When the last electric brougham sedately rolled down Cascade Avenue and its occupants attended a great dramatic spectacle seated in a beautiful box seat at The Burns Theatre? (And the greats came there. Richard Mantel, Billy Burke, Mrs. Fiske Mischa Elman, Louise Homer, Alma Gluck, Fritz Kreisler, and not forgetting The Orpheum Vaudeville. And the boy wonder Eddie Cantor sang "Little Brown Jug" one night to a standing ovation!)

"When a stonemason with his hammer and stone chisel, as I stood and watched in 1914, cut the word "ACADEMY" from the cornerstone of the now "Cutler Hall" on the Colorado College campus? (And I little thought that at a later date I would marry a beautiful member of the last graduating class from the old Academy!)

"When the Memorial Day flood of 1935 ruined the beauty of the Monument Valley Park that Gen. Palmer had so expensively and painstakingly developed and given to the city? (And which has never after thirty years been fully restored.)

"When the beautiful Plaza Hotel, with its wonderful ballroom, became an office building?

"When the first crowbar tore the first stone from Hagerman Hall, the men's dormitory on the Colorado College Campus? (Soon to be followed by a complete alteration of the once classic and symetrical Cossitt Hall, the joy of Prexy Slocum's last days on the campus.)

"When the City Utilities Department strung a high voltage line across a part of Palmer Park? The city Park from which the General in his deed of gift to the city had excluded "automobiles until such a time as they (the cars) cease to be a public nuisance"!

"When beautiful North cheyenne Canon, sacred to hikers, horseback riders and carriages, was opened to automobile traffic?

"When lovely Bruin Inn burned down and was never rebuilt?

"When the "Sons of Abraham" synagogue on South Conejos Street became storage shed for lumber?

When General Palmer's own church, the lovely little English countryside building, Grace Episcopal Church, was dismantled and became an Inn?

When the dream of a Southern Colorado Historical Museum at Glen Eyrie died with the sudden and later fatal illness of Police Chief Hugh Harper?

"The razing of the Antlers Hotel building will, for many old timers, mark the end of a nostalgic era, and for those younger who have grown up in the traditions of "Little Lunnon," the falling of the stout brick walls will be a sad occasion.

Europe has kept and cherished many of its older buildings, even though, like the Antlers Hotel in Colorado Springs, they do not conform with modern architectural dictates. It has been suggested that Colorado Springs attempt in some small way to preserve in buildings the mementos of a lovely and gracious way of living. The memories are preserved in the hearts of older residents, who will long remember and cherish the pictures of leisurely and delightfully dining in the Antlers of yesteryear.

"The end of an era or a milestone along the beginning of a new age in Little Lunnon at the foot of grand old Pikes Peak who twice saw its chance of being made a National Monument fade away?"

Water Delivery Limitation May Be Planned

By W. JOYNES MACFARLAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The possibility that low run-off this year in the Colorado River may lead Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall to limit water deliveries downstream from Hoover Dam is being increasingly discussed here.

There are some water experts who feel that Udall should impose restrictions immediately on water released from Lake Mead, behind Hoover.

There are others who say restrictions should be considered when a final decision is reached next month on whether an attempt will be made to gain enough storage this summer at upstream GleneCanyon Dam to permit power generation this year.

From a legal standpoint, it was explained by Interior officials today, Udall probably could move to reduce deliveries to irrigation and domestic water users by invoking "reasonable use provisions" of the lower Colorado basin contracts or by using the authority he has to allocate lower Colorado river waters in years of water shortage.

Udall this week told a Senate committee he is concerned about the amount of water the downstream users are receiving under the circumstances. These users are in California, Arizona, Nevada, and in Mexico.

Reclamation Commissioner Floyd E. Dominy told the Upper Colorado River Commission at its meeting in Denver this week that a request made last August to downstream water users to reduce their requirements had not been too successful.

The Supreme Court has ruled that only the secretary of the Interior has authority, in the absence of further action by Congress, to apportion the lower Colorado River waters in years of a shortage.

Power is generated at Hoover Dam by water released through the turbines for other use down river. A Reclamation Bureau official said no water has been released there since 1960 primarily for power production, without regard to further use downstream.

Udall announced March 25 that he had ordered water released at Glen Canyon Dam from Lake Powell to be increased sufficiently to maintain storage in Lake Mead at a minimum of 14.5 million acre-feet. This is the minimum water level at which Hoover's generators can produce their rated capacity of 1.34 million kilowatts.

Udall has told a Senate committee that a final decision on whether to shut down on the releases from lake Powell in an effort to gain enough storage there for power generation in August must be reached around May 10.

Both Udall and Dominy have said that a prospective runoff of 4.7 million acre-feet or better during the months of April, May, June and July must be in sight if a decision is to be made to shut down on the Lake Powell releases. As of this week both said that much runoff was not forecast.

Red Viets Continue Gains Despite U.S. Opposition

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

GO DEN, South Viet Nam (AP)—Despite 2½ years of intensive American economic and military support for South Viet Nam, the Viet Cong enemy has gained steadily and dangerously in key areas.

Long An province, almost a suburb of Saigon, is one of them. This densely populated and agriculturally rich province has slid into almost complete Communist domination in the last year.

What has gone wrong?

The other day Earl Young, 33, an American, sifted through the wreckage of a Vietnamese defense post 15 miles from Saigon, and shook his head wearily.

"The biggest problem we face is overcoming local inertia," he said.

In a lightning stroke here the night before, Communist guerrillas had blown up a key police post on the highway to the Mekong River delta, demolished a military post, inflicted more than 100 casualties on government defenders and made off with 115 weapons. Many of the government troops died in their beds with no warning.

Once again, the Viet Cong had gotten the best of Long An province—and by extenuation, of South Viet Nam and the West.

The material stuff of victory over the Viet Cong was not lacking. Since November 1962, U.S. dollars have been pumped into the province in civil aid projects. The strategic hamlet plan launched by the Ngo Dinh Diem government with American backing was heavily emphasized in Long An.

Large army units have been operating in the province most of the time. A crash program for Long An, backed by Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, began Jan. 15. The over-all scheme was to start by securing a handful of hamlets already under government control, improving the political and social situation inside them, and expanding gradually outward.

Troops were to occupy newly cleared areas as long as necessary to rehabilitate them. At least two battalions have been on call in Long An ever since. But progress since Jan. 15 is hard to measure.

Young, an Army platoon leader in the Korean War, has been a U.S. aid mission field man in Viet Nam since October 1962. For seven months, he has been the man on the spot in Long An province.

Does he think the problem of "local inertia" can be overcome in Long An?

"If I didn't think so I would have left long ago. We're trying a combination of means. One is by bringing pressure from the Saigon level on the local officials down here, and making officials at the ministerial level aware of what the situation really is—a situation that needs their close support and supervision," he said.

"We've been trying to build out from about a dozen hamlets close to the province capital at Tan An—some of them only a few hundred yards away. We haven't gone far.

"The fantastic reshuffling of government officials that began last summer continues right up to this minute.

"There has been constant change in military and civilian functionaries and leaders, uncertainty about national policy, constant changes in Saigon, complete uncertainty about what's to be done, who will do it and how, who the province chief will be tomorrow, and so on.

"Is it any surprise that nothing gets done, that Vietnamese officials are slow to move?"

Young, a native of Port Huron, Mich., calls his home Dunkirk, Ind. His mother, his closest relative, spends much of her time in Sarasota, Fla.

Devoted to the anti-Communist struggle in Southeast Asia, he has worked for the paramilitary "Air America," which dropped supplies to anti-Communist tribesmen in Laos, and he has worked among the tribesmen of Central Viet Nam.

He sums up:

"Until we — the Vietnamese government and their American advisors—can get the Vietnamese people interested in winning this thing, it could go on forever. There's the problem. We've got to solve it."

Museum Accepts Film About Press Photos

NEW YORK (AP) — A documentary film, "Frontiers of News," produced as a tribute to press photographers who serve beyond the call of duty, was accepted today by the Museum of Modern Art as part of its film library.

The movie uses hundreds of Associated Press still pictures to tell a story of recent dramatic news events, including the racial crisis, Viet Nam and the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

It was produced by Willard Van Dyke, a leading maker of documentary films for 25 years.

Newspaper headlines are substituted for a narrator's voice, but an unusual musical score is featured.

The film will be shown publicly for the first time Monday at the annual meeting here of members of The Associated Press.

NO BATTERY TO CHANGE IN NEW HEARING AID

Recent news stories tell of cut-back in production of transistors by leading manufacturers because of the new development of micro-molecular amplifers so small that two dozen or more can be laid on the face of a penny without completely covering it!

The first hearing aid to embody many of the new techniques has just been announced by Ernest J. Tryba, certified Hearing Aid Audiologist.

This is an aid so small that it good for a year . . . or even two not only fits all inside the ear change! A permanent battery but there are no batteries to heat cell activated by body heat . . . is embedded in the aid. A aids in recharging it. A separate charger is also furnished.

Photographs and information on this new invention will be given free of charge on request. Call in person or write Ernest J. Tryba, The Hearing Aid Center, 520 North Tejon. adv.

Mine-Mill Man Sentenced On Red Charge

DENVER (UPI)—Alton Lawrence, 51, of Bessemer, Ala., a former board member of the Denver-based International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, was given two years probation Friday on Communist conspiracy charges.

Lawrence pleaded no contest in 1959 to taking part in a union conspiracy to defraud the government by filing false non-Communist oaths.

Attorney Thomas J. Mitchell asked U.S. Dist. Judge Alfred A. Arraj to grant probation on grounds Lawrence had severed all ties with the union in 1959.

Lawrence was one of 14 past or present Mine-Mill officials indicted in 1956 on the conspiracy charges. Two others received probation and six past and present officers were convicted and sentenced to prison terms and heavy fines. They are appealing.

The cases of four others were ordered dismissed and one was acquitted.

Stowaways Enjoyed His Wine Free

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—For 3½ weeks Dutch artist Fritz Meyer and his wife hobnobbed with the captain of the Dutch liner Willem Ruys. Then the skipper found out they were stowaways.

"Just imagine," Capt. Herman Van Den Heuvel told reporters Saturday. "These people introduced themselves to me at a cocktail party and I thought they were a fine couple. During the voyage I saw them at several parties. I even shared a bottle of wine with them."

The Meyers were hoping to return to Australia. They had come as immigrants in 1956 but had gone back to Holland two years later.

The shipping line wants full payment—$810 — or else it will return them to Rotterdam.

"It looks as if they will stay on board until we get back to Holland in a month's time," said the captain.

Meyer is 47, his wife 39.

Spacecraft Mechanic Dies Of Body Burns

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—A 29-year-old spacecraft mechanic lost a three-day fight for his life Friday and became the first rocket fatality in the 14-year history of this missile test center.

Sidney Dagle of Longmont, Colo., was burned over every inch of his body last Tuesday when a five-foot rocket stage ignited accidentally and showered the interior of a checkout building with blazing solid propellant.

He died about 7 a.m. in a hospital in nearby Cocoa Beach. His wife, Shirley flew here from Longmont Tuesday.

Dagle and 10 other men were burned. Two others remained critical Friday. They are L. D. Gabel, 51, also of Longmont, and John Fassett, 30, of Merritt Island, Fla., both with more than 80 per cent of their bodies burned.

Fassett was one of four injured flown to Brooke Army Medical Hospital, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., for specialized burn treatment. The other three at Brooke were in serious condition. Two others less seriously hurt remained hospitalized in Cocoa. Three were treated and released.

Dagle and Gabel worked for Ball Bros. Research Corp., Boulder, Colo., which made the orbiting solar observatory spacecraft attached to the rocket when it ignited.

The rocket was to have been the third stage of a Delta space booster scheduled to hurl OSO into orbit next Tuesday.

The spacecraft was badly damaged. The OSO launching and all other Delta firings have been delayed pending results of an investigation.

Boss of the Year Named at ADC Headquarters

What are the qualities that put a man in line for nomination by his secretary as "boss of the year"?

Col. James A. Laing, G-4 (Logistics) officer of the Army Air Defense Command, with headquarters in Colorado Springs, is the winner of this year's "boss of the year" designation made by the Columbine chapter of the American Busines Women's Association in Colorado Springs.

He was nominated for the title by his secretary, Mrs. Edwina S. Moreton, who is chapter president.

She was asked what characteristics possessed by Colonel Laing caused her to submit his name to a committee of judges composed of several civic leaders of the community.

Mrs. Moreton rated him as an "outstanding" officer with unexcelled leadership traits. As a boss, she finds him — to use terms found in her written nomination — kind, considerate, a gentleman, extremely loyal to both military and civilian personnel under him, always considerate of the individual's advancement and recognition, and sympathetic and helpful in regard to personal problems of those under him.

The secretary also noted that Colonel Laing "is extremely devoted to his family."

Mayor Harry W. Hoth, President Norman Coleman of the Chamber of Commerce, and Lee Baker, Colorado Springs realtor, were selected by the Columbine Club to serve as judges of nominations received from club members.

The trophy was presented by Coleman at a "Boss Night" celebration attended by 110 persons.

DIG UP BODY

BUDAPEST (UPI) — Construction workers Friday unearthed the mummified body of a Roman woman buried more than 1,600 years ago. Officials said the well-preserved body was buried with a plaited wreath around the head.

Outwest Art Exhibit on Display at Bank

Eight oil paintings from the Western Art Collection of the Out West Printing and Stationery Company are now on display at the First National Bank.

This is the first public showing of the valued collection according to William C. Mason, president of the local printing and office supply firm.

The eight paintings were purchased by the Out West Printing and Stationery Company between 1925 and 1951 for their famous western-theme calendars. Paintings by Winifred Owens, Jerry Soderholm, W. A. Pottle and Ruskin Williams are included in the exhibit.

The calendars with the big numbers, familiar to office workers and students throughout the state of Colorado, have been designed and printed by the "Out West" since 1902.

Until the early 1950's western paintings were commissioned annually by the "Out West" from local artists. Since then, color photographs of Colorado scenes have been used.

The "Out West" showing at the First National will continue through April. Then, the paintings will be returned to the "Out West" gallery.

UNFEATHERED FRIEND

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Bobby Bettey is a normal 12-year-old parakeet in all respects but one—he has no feathers.

He has actually been unclothed most of his life. When Mrs. Emily Bettey first spotted him as a baby in the pet shop, she noticed that when he tried to climb to the top of his cage, the mother bird kept pulling him down, and in the struggle pulled out his tail feathers. When the bird was taken to the Bettey home a few weeks later, he sported a few blue chest feathers, but these later fell out.

Despite his looks, the bird is a happy healthy little fellow with a good-sized vocabulary.

NO PARKING METERS

CLERMONT, Fla. (AP)—Nobody wants parking meters anymore. At least that's the opinion of City Clerk Albert Johnson who has searched far and wide for a buyer for the city's removed collection of parking meters. He has asked the City Council to let him get rid of them for whatever he might obtain. The Council okayed his request by telling him to dispose of them as he can.

Problems May Cause Student Dishonesty

DENVER (UPI)—A Cleveland psychiatrist believes dishonesty among college students may be the result of emotional disturbance.

Dr. Harold R. Tater of Western Reserve University said a study of eight such students showed a close correlation with recent psychological disturbances.

One of the students, he said, was expelled after turning in a report plagiarized from a professional journal to which his professor subscribed. Later examinations showed the youth's mother attempted suicide shortly before.

Tater said a coed stole several sweaters and a wrist watch from other girls in her dormitory, then wore the watch in the presence of its owner. She later said her parents had announced plans for a divorce a few days earlier.

Tater said the dishonest acts apparently were desperation attempts at self-expression.

Tater spoke to the annual convention of the American College Health Association. Friday, Dr. Leona B. Yeager of Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill., was installed as president.

Full Civil War Feared in Laos; Talks Collapse

Prabang into the temporary administrative capital in an attempt to solve Laos' year-old crisis.

Souvanna, a neutralist, came out of a field tent in which the leaders had been meeting for two days and said ,no results had been reached. He had conferred with Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, the rightist faction leader, and Prince Souphanouvong, leader of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao and half-brother of Souvanna.

Souvanna, who has been premier for 22 months, told newsmen:

"Upon my return to Vientiane (permanent administrative capital) I will make a report to his majesty the king.

"Because of my inability to solve the Laotian problem I will ask the king to relieve me from functions of coalition premier."

He looked grim, depressed and nervous. Asked if the king would accept his resignation, Souvanna replied: "I don't know."

Souvanna was scheduled to leave April 23 with the king on state visits to France and Britain. It Conference sources said Phoumi and Souphanouvong could not agree on ways to neutralize the royal capital.

If Souvanna resigns, chaos is expected to prevail in Laos and the situation could be as it was before the coalition was formed in June 1962, when this landlocked kingdom was torn by civil war.

Despite Souvanna's statement that he will submit his resignation to the king, Souphamouvong expressed hope that the three leaders will resume meetings to solve the Laotian problem because, he said, "One party cannot solve the problem alone."

Drivers Escape Death in Two Car Crash

Drivers of a two-car crash Saturday night, narrowly escaped death in a collision at the intersection of Nevada and Willamette Avenues. The accident caused complaints of back injury to one driver and damages amounting to total loss of both cars, officers said.

Robert Lee Sallee, 16, 3304 N. Prospect St., complained of pains in the back and was advised by officers to see a doctor.

A car driven by Sallee, going north on Nevada Avenue, collided with a car entering the intersection at Willamette Avenue driven by Mabel Popp, 29, 128 Pawnee Ave., Manitou Springs.

After the initial impact, the Sallee car jumped the center parkway curb, striking a tree, police said.

The woman driving the other car told officers that she had stopped for the stop sign before proceeding into the intersection.

Firemen Fight Fire In Local Garage

A garage at the residence of Mrs. Mary Estrada, 115 S. Prospect St., was destroyed by fire Saturday. The fire, the fire department report says was probably started by children playing with matches. A fire alarm was turned in at 12:51 p.m. The fire was fought by Companies 1 and 4.

Company 1, on a 1:55 p.m. alarm, put out a fire at the Western Junk Yard, 602 S. Wahsatch Ave., started by hot metal shavings. There was no damage.

year drop of 900 in federal employment, saying, "It is significant that it dropped at all because it has generally been increasing."

And he said government spending during the first three months of his administration averaged $1 million a day less than during the last three months of the administration of President John F. Kennedy.

Other opening announcements included these:

—Eugene Patterson, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, will be nominated to fill the only remaining vacancy on the Civil Rights Commission. He will replace M. Robert Storey, dean of the law school at Southern Methodist University also Harold Russell, handless paratroop veteran of World War II, will succeed the late Gen. Melvin Maas as chairman of the President's Committee Employment of the Physically Handicapped.

One of the first questions put to Johnson dealt with the White House negotiations aimed at averting a national rail strike threatened for next week.

The President said indications coming from persons familiar with progress of the talks have almost all "been encouraging and hopeful." He said, "We have had a very productive few days."

Wasson High School News

By CAROL JENSEN

Wasson High School will celebrate the 400th birthday of the English dramatist, William Shakespeare, with an original presentation, "May Day, 1606." This presentation, with script written by Mrs. Margaret Lehrer, will depict a day in London when Shakespeare's "MacBeth" first opened. The original play takes place on the banks of the Thames River in Elizabethan England and London. The events of the program begin at early morning on May Day and include jesters, folk dancers, tumblers, madrigal and ballad singers, and a Punch and Judy puppets show and accompanying music. Specific scenes from "MacBeth," selected to show Shakespeare's tragedy, will end this presentation, which will be given Tuesday afternoon for senior and junior high school students and at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the school auditorium for the pulblic There will be no admission charge.

Eric Strate is cast as MacBeth, Liz Yancey as Lady MacBeth, Jim Douglas as Banquo, and Sandra Marsters, Mary Hoffman, and Anne Peschell as the three witches in the production of the "MacBeth" scenes. Those students in the festival scenes are: jesters and tumblers — Chuck Kennedy, Dennis Berg, and Tom Casey; animal clowns — Bob Burkepile, West Wilson, and Bob Odum, jousters — Cliff Flaxbeard and Larry Conrad; and Punch and Judy, Nita Britton.

Dancers for the presentation are Becky Laughter, Jane Hoth, Marcia Mendrop, Pat Davidson, Julia Tanquary, Connie Hetzler, Sherry Williamson, Connie Fenton, Karen Orman, Gwen Reynolds, Pat Sanders and Carol Thompson.

The Elizabethan madrigals and ballads will be introduced by the Watones and the Watonettes, both local music groups. Susie Zwinger, Tom Skodack, Jim Boitos, and Serene Andriesse will portray instrumental musicians.

Many of Wasson's faculty have worked on this special production: general program chairman, Miss Marian Hollister; script writer, Mrs. Margaret Lehrer; stage director, Jerry Bridgeman; puppets and art work, Don Green; music, Charles Meeker and John Bearzi; dancing, Mrs. Helen Spaulding and Mrs. Colvin; Punch and Judy Puppet Show, Charles Atwood; and publicity, Robert Simons.

The April 16 edition of the Wasson school paper, the Thunderbolt, contained a full feature page on Shakespeare and the school's festival. Last week was a busy one at Wasson, because of student body cabinet elections. Posters decorated most of the school's walls and smaller campaign signs decorated students. Triple assemblies were held on Thursday to introduce the candidates to the student body and for the candidates to deliver their campaign speeches. Since each assembly lasted approximately 55 minutes to one hour, students were on a special schedule for classes, with third period classes omitted. Students voted Friday for the candidates of their choice for the respective offices. This voting was not compulsory, but students were urged to go to the student center room and use the authentic voting machines for the election. Last year's percentage of students voting was about 90 per cent of the entire student body. The polls opened at 8 a.m. and closed at 4 p.m.

Following the elections, the Inaugural Dance will be held next Saturday in the boys' gym. This dance will be semi-formal — long dresses are not encouraged — and is designed to celebrate the election returns. However, the entire student body is invited to attend.

Wasson's senior class had a class meeting Tuesday morning in the school's auditorium to decide where to hold the graduation ceremonies and to settle the question of cap and gown measurements. It was decided to hold the graduation exercises in the stadium this year, and palms are set tentatively for senior convocation to be held in the school's patio May 29 and commencement vespers also in the patio that Sunday. However, plans are also being made for the use of the auditorium in case of rain. Cap and gown measurements are now being taken by the business administration; the cost is $4 for the rental of the uniforms and tassels cost 50 cents. Another subject discussed was the senior trip, to take place May 28 in Denver. May 15 was designated as the final date for payment for the trip, and the students were informed that they would probably see "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World" at the Cooper Theatre in Denver.

Students wishing to take courses in summer school this year must sign up and pay the fee during the first two weeks of May. A new course in human physiology is being offered this year, if enough students wish to take it. This course will deal with quite a bit of lab work, and those students wishing to take it are urged to inform the Wasson office as soon as possible.

Wasson's Thunderbird Youth Orchestra and Band presented the annual spring concert Friday night. This concert was open to the public, but Wasson students with activity tickets and faculty members were admitted free.

Audiometer tests were again administered at Wasson Wednesday for those students who missed the first tests because of absence.

Report cards for the third quarter grading period were distributed Friday, April 10, through sponsor groups.

GOP Committee Hits LBJ Policy On Cattle Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican national committee says the Johnson administration has "slammed the door" on hopes of cattlemen for reductions in imports of beef.

Stockmen contend the imports are a big factor in the drop of meat animal prices.

In a news letter entitled "Republican Farm Roundup," the committee said recent congressional hearings on bills to impose restrictions on imports of meat were held to "take Democrats off the hook, not to correct the problem."

The administration has negotiated agreements with Australia, New Zealand and Ireland placing limitations on imports from those countries, but critics contend the restrictions do not go far enough.

"Although the Johnson administration's foreign policy is cloudy in many respects, it is crystal clear insofar as beef imports are concerned," the GOP letter said. "Nothing of consequence will be done to reduce meat imports from abroad or to strengthen livestock prices in the United States."

COOK'S TOUR

NEW YORK (AP) — A new portable gas cooking cart will enable diners at the New York World's Fair Festival of Gas pavilion restaurant to see their meals cooked right at their table.

The mobile range has four burners, which cook with infrared heat, using bottled gas as a fuel, and it includes a gas refrigerator mounted in a drawer. A chef will wheel a cart up to a table, remove whatever meat and vegetables are selected from the refrigerator, then broil, boil, grill or saute an entire meal before the diner's eyes.

The Nation's Weather

(Report furnished by U.S. Weather Bureau Station at Peterson Field)

A slow moving cold front Friday evening stretched from the coastal waters of New England to the Texas Panhandle. As the front pressed southeastward Friday evening it replaced warm, balmy weather by turning to much cooler. At Chicago, for example, Thursday's record high of 84 compared to a 48 for Friday. Upper Michigan chilled to a freezing point. The nation's capitol heeded to a summer-like 89 for the second day in a row. Cotulla, Texas, went to a hot 97. Temperature records were broken in Connecticut with Bridgeport up to 83, which broke its all time record for so late in the season. In the vicinity of the cold front, a long line of showers or thunderstorms occurred Friday evening. In general rainfall amounts were very light. Other shower activity over the Southwest in connection with a low pressure area was reported over Arizona, Utah, and parts of Colorado. A little snow fell at times in the Sierra Nevadas, and in the Wyoming and Colorado mountains.

Ohio Woman Holds Round World Record

By ADRIENNE BOSWORTH

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — It may be just Saturday everywhere else, but in Columbus it's Jerrie Mock Day.

Mrs. Mock became Friday night the first woman to fly solo around the world. She landed her single-engine Cessna at Port Columbus at 9:36 p.m., 29 days after takeoff. She descended into a throng of well-wishers.

Holding her daughter Valerie, 4, and flanked by husband, Russell, and sons Roger, 17, and Gary, 16, Mrs. Mock found herself short of words to express her reaction to the reception.

"I should get my autopilot here to talk for me," she said.

Visibly tired, Mrs. Mock, 38, seemed to hesitate a bit before proclaiming her trip "wonderful." She added, "I didn't get much sleep or food or anything."

Thousands of spectators crushed toward a flag-draped platform as state and city officials offered congratulations. A telegram from President Johnson was read over the loudspeaker system. Mayor Maynard Sensenbrenner made the proclamation formally designating Jerrie Mock Day.

Also on hand were Gov. James A. Rhodes and Air Force Gen. Richard Lassiter, an old friend of the Mocks.

A representative from the Federal Aviation Agency announced that a medal for exceptional service to aviation will be presented to Mrs. Mock when she goes to Washington.

Her official aviation records are the women's speed record for around-the-world flight and the first globe-circling flight of her plane's weight class, 2,204 to 3,858 pounds.

The 5-foot, 105-pound pilot began the final stretch of her trip from Tucson, Ariz., Friday morning. She flew southward to El Paso, Tex., to pick up extra mileage needed for the sanctioning of around-the-world flight by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale. She stopped at Bowling Green, Ky., for fuel and a candy bar before the final hop home.

built Caravelle, took off from Beirut, Lebanon Friday evening on a regularly scheduled 1,000-mile flight across the Arabian desert to Dhahran.

The pilot sent his last message to Dhahran airport at 9:30 p.m. (5:30 p.m. EST) three minutes before scheduled landing. It gave no indication that the plane was in trouble.

The wreckage was not found until noon Saturday because of a swirling sandstorm that cut visibility to less than 200 yards.

Skindivers probed the sunken fueselage in an attempt to recover bodies. The wreckage was found in the Bay of Bahrein, an arm of the Persian Gulf.

U.S. Navy officials said the pilot apparently was unable to see Dhahran airport in the blinding sand and overshot the runway. The plane plunged into the Persian Gulf 10 miles from Dhahran. The visibility at the time the pilot radioed that he was making his landing approach was about 1,000 yards.

Navy reports said navigational equipment at Dhahran airport apparently was not able to guide the plane in for an instrument landing.

In addition to the Americans, thep lane was carrying 11 Saudi Arabians, four Lebanese, a Swiss, one Syrian, one Palestinian, one Jordanian and one citizen of Bahrein — a British protectorate in the Persion Gulf off the coast of Saudi Arabia.

One of the victims was identified as Howard W. Lynch, Dhahran manager of Trans World Airlines.

Others included Robert Keith Souders, 39, Montebello, Calif., editor of the Aramco newspaper Sun and Flare, his wife, Verniz, 38, and their son, Derek, 7; William A. Scott, 39, Pittsburg, Kan., ARAMCO public relations manager at Dhahran; Ralph Henry Devenney, 48, Napa, Calif., ARAMCO's general manager of industrial relations; William Kelly Jewell, 55, San Francisco, wages coordinator, and Dr. Frank Joseph Zukoski, 48, Scranton, Pa., medical director of the Trans-Arabian Pipeline (TAPELINE) at Beirut. TAPLINE carries AR AMCO Oil.

Other Americans were Mrs. Marjorie Baumgartner, 40, San Jose, Calif., and her daughter, Jane. Mrs. Baumgartner's husband, F. L. Baumgartner, is ARAMCO's supervisor of communications. He was not aboard.

There were also three schoolteachers — Paul Arvin, of Cleveland, Ohio; Thelma Carter, 40, Detroit, Mich., and Thomas Allen, Sarasota, Fla. They were teachers in ARAMCO's school system for children of employes.

Traveling with Arvin was his wife, Sheryl Cook. They were married two weeks ago in Rome.

Allen's wife, Imogene, and their two children — Terry and Laura — were also aboard the plan.

The wreckage was found by a U.S. Navy helicopter which took off from the USS Spiegel Grove, a landing ship dock in the gulf. Marine Maj. R. E. Steed and Capt. C. W. DiPieco of Youngstown, Ohio spotted the fuselage after a 90-minute search.

Henry R. Luce Resigns as Time Editor-in-Chief

NEW YORK (AP)—Henry R. Luce, who co-founded Time Inc. more than 40 years ago, has resigned as editor-in-chief.

Hedley W. Donovan, 49, directly under Luce as editorial director, succeeds to the company's top editorial position. Luce took the new title of editorial chairman.

Luce announced his resignation Thursday at the annual stockholders meeting. The board of directors elevated Donovan to his position.

"I'm 66 years old," Luce said. "I'm in good health and eager to keep active. But I feel the opportunity has presented itself to transfer the definite, concrete responsibility."

Donovan joined Time Inc. as a staff writer for Fortune in 1945. He was named managing editor of that publication in 1953. Six years later, he was appointed second-in-command editorially for Time Inc. In 1962 he became a member of the board.

Time, first of the magazines to be published, came into being in 1923 under the direction of Luce and Briton Hadden, one of his classmates at Yale. Hadden died in 1929.

Luce said he will continue working for Time Inc., "approximately full time" but "without the pressure of the responsibility for the big decisions."

SPECIALIZED STREETCAR

OSIJEK, Yugoslavia (AP) — When Dragutin Housknebt retired after 38 years as a streetcar driver, his colleagues gave him just what he wanted for a present — an old streetcar that had been taken out of service.

He fixed it up as a house and lives there. But he left the old bell, signal lamps and even the strap handles intact, for what he said were "sentimental reasons."

District Three To Have Driver Training Course

Widefield School District (No. 3) will begin a limited driver training program with the fall semester this year, the board decided at its April meeting held Saturday.

Board member Carl Roberts was absent from the meeting. In other action, the board:

1. Agreed to have the Newman Investment Company handle the legal and financial details for the forthcoming vote on a new bond issue. Robert Newman was named as financial advisor for the board on the bond issue.

Newman said that his firm suggested that May 27, a Wednesday, be the day of the election.

He told the board that the average cost of handling the bonds would be $6 for each $1,000 bond.

For the first 100 bonds, the cost would be $8 per bond, and for the reaming 250 it would be $5.20. Total cost for the handling would be about $2,500.

Newman also pointed out that there should be no restriction to his firm bidding on the actual marketing of the bonds when that time arrives. The board agreed.

The size of the bond issue was decided at the April 10 special meeting of the board. That was approved unanimously. Board Member Roger Fay was absent from that meeting.

At that meeting, Ted Forde moved that all national brokerage firms located in Colorado Springs and Denver be invited to bid on the handling of the bonds for sale in the market. That also was approved unanimously.

Newman explained to the board Saturday that the bonds for the proposed issue, which will be voted on next month, would all have reached maturity by 1984, and that the average interest rate would not exceed 4¼ per cent according to the projected program his firm drafted. The board accepted the proposal.

2. Adopted the schedule for the next school year.

School will begin on Sept. 8, the day after Labor Day, will be out for two days, Oct. 22-23, for the annual teachers' convention, will have one day off for Thanksgiving (that Thursday only); will begin Christmas vacation on Dec. 23, and reconvene again on Jan. 4, 1965; have a spring vacation in the week before Easter beginning on Tuesday (having only one day, Monday, of school that week), and close on June 4, 1965, a Friday.

The vote was unanimous after a short discussion on any other possibilities. The other programs suggested would have had school begin earlier in the year, or run later into next year.

3. Voted unanimously to appoint a dean of women for the high school beginning with the next school year.

High School Principal Robert Poole told the board that he had sufficient organization to handle any problems that arose involving handling and discipline of boys through male members of the staff.

However, he pointed out that he did not have a similar set up for handling problems arising among the girl students.

4. Voted unanimously to buy a new school bus to replace a 1955 model that now is considered to be nearing the condition of becoming a safety hazard.

Bids will be asked soon on the bus, the board decided, and named member Fay to work with school administration officials on the bid.

5. Granted the Security Art Group permission to use the all-purpose room in the high school for two weeks in June for the annual art exhibit of the group.

It will be a sale show, and the art group will be charged a fee to cover expenses to the school during the show, it was decided.

Supt. Richard Taylor was instructed to work out the financial details with the art group.

6. Approved a year of absence for Mrs. Doris Stancato, wife of Frank Stancato, for the next school year. Stancato, former football coach at Widefield High School, has been granted leave of absence so that he can return to the University of Notre Dame to complete work on a Ph. D. degree.

The board voted unanimously in favor of the dirver training program after three of the four members present questioned the need for such a program.

Chairman Clarence Foster said, "I don't favor it. But I know we will come to it. The community wants it, and we will have it even if I don't agree. I know that."

Forde said that was in basic agreement with Foster.

The two also agreed that the school district should pay the costs for the program as it does for other parts of the curriculum in case it was adopted. This was decided after some discussion about running a non-curriculum driving school and charging tuition.

Dr. Thomas Slack asked the question, "How do we justify this as part of the school curriculum?" and then answered it for himself by saying that probably nothing is more important in modern American life today than cars.

Fay pointed out that if young people are taught to drive properly they will be better drivers. He also explained that many people had asked him when the district planned to add driver training.

Richard Aspinall, assistant superintendent, told the board that requests for driver training totaled more than all other requests made to his office by parents.

Taylor told the board that when the peolpe of the district began ipsisting on a course in the school that it was up to the district to attempt to satisfy the demand if it was reasonable.

Fay agreed. "If the people demand this, then we must try to give it to them."

Taylor said, "We are either a public institution serving the needs of the district, or we are not, and I think it is clear what we should do."

The district expects to start with one car and one instructor.

Poole recommended to the board that with only one car, it begin with a stick shift car.

White Shoppers Are Attacked in South Rhodesia

to be increasing with stone-throwing mobs increasingly bold.

In the white section of Salisbury, police with truncheons stood at every street corner, although an official police statement said there was no general alert and that law and order was being maintained. But two policemen were stabbed in Harare Township and two African were hit with shotgun pellets when police opened fire on the mobs.

Scores of Africans have been arrested in the outbreaks of violence which began Thursday with Nkomo's banishment to a remote corner of the territory.

Blacks outnumber whites in Southern Rhodesia by a ratio of 10 to 1. The government is now run by a group of white extremists who are reported considering a declaration of independence from Britain — the first such unilateral action since the American action in 1776.

The department store attack was the first such incident in Salisbury. Authorities said a gang of about 20 youths, apparently well organized and answering to commands from a whistle-blowing leader, attacked white shoppers and salesgirls.

The attack, in the O. K. Bazaar department store' came at the height of the Saturday shopping rush. Shoppers and salesgirls fought back, aided by male employes. Nine Africans were arrested after the attack, in which two young women were hurt.

there were "five or six dead men on the ground" when their officers arrived and "three were hurt, two critically."

The base spokesman said some of the paratroopers might have parachuted to safety, which would account for several of those on the planes being missing in the darkness.

The C119s normally have a five-man crew, which would be the 10 Air Force reservists from this base.

Air Force officers at the scene refused to let newsmen within a mile of the scene, preventing the gathering of details.

The base said it had not heard back from its investigators.

Reapportionment Suit Asks State Elect at Large

DENVER (UPI)— A Pueblo, Colo., labor union official filed a new legislative reapportionment lawsuit with the Colorado Supreme Court Friday, asking statewide at-large elections this year for the Colorado House of Representatives.

George J. White of the United Steel Workers Union in Pueblo, charged in the suit that the Legislature's 1963 implementation of the "Federal Plan" amendment to the state constitution was improper.

The suit did not attack the propriety of the state constitutional amendment itself, as did an earlier suit now before the U.S. Supreme Court, but said the Legislature's 1963 reapportionment act was not consistent with it.

The lawsuit was filed by Denver attorney Raymond C. Johnson. It asked restraining orders against state and local officials to prohibit them from carrying out the reapportionment.

It also asked statewide elections be ordered for the House and county-wide elections for the State Senate in counties where there are more than one senator.

Academy Veteran To Retire May 1

A career spanning more than 22-years of active and reserve service will close May 1 for T. Sgt. Nicholas J. Backhaus, NCOIC of the Pre-Cost Section of the Air Force Academy's Cadet Dining Hall.

Sgt. Backhaus enlisted in the 104th Medical Regiment, 29th Division of the Maryland National Guard July 28, 1938. He served with this organization until honorably discharged Oct. 15, 1940.

On May 29, 1944, Sgt. Backhaus was inducted into the Army. Following basic training he was transferred to the European Theater where he joined the 47th Infantry Regiment of the First Army's 9th Division in November 1944.

The sergeant took part in the capture of Stolberg and Eschweiler in Germany before his organization was returned to Belgium for re-equipping and training.

Following hospitalization, Sgt. Backhaus joined the 88th Troop Carrier Squadron in France and served with the unit until assigned as a cook with the 316th Station Complement Sq., Bad Kissengen, Germany, July 8, 1945.

After rotation to the U. S. in 1947, Sgt. Backhaus served at Andrews AFB, Maryland and Lackland AFB, Tex.

Following a tour on Okinawa the sergeant was stationed at Kelly AFB, Texas. He joined the Academy staff July 13, 1961, serving as club secretary of the NCO Club, food service supervisor, and in his present position.

Retail Selling Spring Program Set to Start

The second phase of the annual spring program for the training of high school youth for summer employment in the field of retail selling will begin late this month, according to John L. Cameron, director of vocational and adult education for the Colorado Springs Public Schools.

This program is an offering of the Adult Education Department in cooperation with the Colorado State Board for Vocational Education and the local office of the State Department of Employment.

The courses meet in the evening and are designed primarily to serve boys and girls of the region who are at least 16 years of age and want to prepare for summer employment.

Included in the course outline is instruction in how to apply for a job, selling techniques, employment legal matters, how to make change, how to figure sales tax and discounts, use of the cash register, and what the employers in Colorado Springs expect of an employee.

As an additional bonus students are given the aptitude tests and are registered by the local employment office right in the classroom, and are assisted by the employment office in their efforts to obtain summer employment after the course is completed.

Classes meet two evenings each week from 7 to 9 for a period of four weeks, a total of 16 hours. Students have their choice of a class which meets on Monday and Wednesday beginning April 27 or one which begins April 28. Students who attend 14 of the scheduled 16 hours will be awarded a certificate.

The course is open to any person in the Pikes Peak Region 16 years of age or older and those desiring to enroll must pre-register in the Adult Education Office at 406 N. Weber St. prior to the starting date of the particular class they choose. The office is open from 8 - 12 and 1 - 4 Monday through Friday and from 6:45 - 8:45 each evening Monday through Thursday.

Fee for the course is $2.00 which must be paid at the time of registration. Class size is limited and students will be registered on a first come first served basis.

Illinois College Can Be Rented During Summer

Anyone want to rent a college this summer?

Shimer College, Mount Carroll, Ill., has disclosed it is offering 45 acres and 14 buildings to corporations or other organizations looking for a place to hold meetings in a quiet, noncommercial vacation atmosphere.

Shimer president, Dr. F. J. Mullin, said that since the school plans no formal summer session it will rent its classroom and dormitory facilities and use of on-campus swimming pool and tennis courts. Also included are a near-by summer theatre and nine-hole golf course.

Shimer is one of the nation's smallest accredited four-year liberal arts colleges. It is coeducational and has 324 students.

Mullin said he decided on the idea because he felt that "Shimer's campus offers a rare combination to business or professional groups — where marketing or other meetings could be held in a setting that provided summer recreation too." Shimer, 125 miles west of Chicago, is nine miles from the Mississippi River, in an area renowned for its natural beauty.

The college president said, "If a group would like a Shimer teacher to teach a particular course — art, history, literature, music, etc. — such arrangements can also be made. It's been suggested that some corporations might like an English course to be taught along with the company's marketing seminar."

Mullin, 57, who has been president of Shimer since 1954, admits he is "also trying to be a good businessman."

"Maintenance costs go on from graduation day, May 31, until next September — whether or not the campus is used. It seems to me it would be good economics if we could pick up a little extra money by renting our facilities at a modest fee." Shimer is privately endowed.

Mullin said the rent would be based on the amount of facilities desired and the length of the meeting.

"Anyone can contact us about this by writing to me at Mount Carroll, Ill.," Mullin added.

Special Actors Cost Extra Special Fees

LONDON (AP) — American movie-makers Andrew and Virginia Stone picked up four actors for their new film at the airport and had to pay 10 per cent import duty on them because they are more than quadrupedal.

They are eight-legged British Quiana spiders, ten inches in diameter, worth $14 each. Cannibalistic, they subsist on rats and snakes.

NOW IT'S THREE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The two - car family is losing some of its status.

Auto dealers around the country, polled by the Universal C.I.T. Credit Corporation, based part of their optimistic forecast for 7.5 million or more car sales in 1964 on the rapid growth of families with three cars.

Reapportionment Suit Is Planned

GREELEY (AP)—David Miller, Greeley attorney, said Friday he intends to file suit Monday in U.S. District Court over congressional reapportionment in Colorado, unless a special legislative session is called by that time.

Gov. John A. Love said Friday he has not made a decision about a special session.

Miller said the suit would ask the court to declare the present congressional districting unconstitutional because of unequal populations.

The court would be asked to order the election of the state's four U.S. representatives on an at—large basis next fall. This means each resident would vote for four congressmen instead of one.

Miller said the proposed suit, to be filed in Denver, will be aimed at the governor and secretary of state.

Supermarket Is Planned at Leadville

LEADVILLE (UPI) — Plans were announced Friday to build a $500,000 supermarket in north Leadville this spring.

The store will be built by Joe Clark and Art Hanson, who run the Super Foods Store at Minturn, Colo., and the Dupey Equipment Co. of Denver.

Two other large grocery stores are to be built in the northern part of the city in the near future to meet the demands of the growing community.

Stop-Smoking Plan to Be Aired at Meet

Members of Pikes Peak Kiwanis Club will hear an up-to-the-minute report on the Five-Day Plan to Stop Smoking when they meet Thursday noon at the Antlers Hotel.

One or more members will be taking part in the Five-Day Plan which starts this evening at the YMCA, according to Club President Del Tolle, who said in this way the club can get a first-hand report.

Also on the program will be the doctor - clergyman team, Dr. Hubert F. Sturges and Pastor Dwight S. Wallack of the Seventh-day Adventist Church who conduct the program. They will tell about the Five-Day Plans which have been held in Colorado Springs — three of them since January, when the federal report on smoking and health was issued — and answer questions about the program.

More than 100 of some 125 persons who took the first two stop-smoking courses reported success in giving up the habit.

Registrations for the third plan, which starts at 7:30 p.m. in the Little Theater of the YMCA, may be made right up to the time the group therapy sessions begin, according to Wallack.

Other business of Thursday's Kiwanis meeting will include regular monthly reports.

George Long is program chairman.

Flying Doctor Has Another Airplane

70 Million Visitors Are Expected at World's Fair

By FRANCIS STILLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — With President Johnson heading dedication ceremonies on the inside and civil rights demonstrators trying to tie up highways outside, the billion-dollar New York World's Fair opens Wednesday to the first of 70 million or more expected visitors.

Despite strong determination of city authorities to thwart the highway demonstration, members of the Brooklyn chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality hope to create a massive jam on parkways and expressways adjacent to the fair.

They plan to do it by letting their own cars run out of gas in the fairgrounds vicinity. They also hope to enlist friends and sympathizers to do the same. Leaders have expressed belief that as many as 2,000 automobiles might be employed in such a manner.

National leaders of the CORE organization have disowned the project and suspended the Brooklyn chapter as a result of it. However, some other local chapters have signified the intention of helping push it.

The demonstration is not directed at the fair itself, but was devised as a means of calling attention to the CORE goals.

Several state pavilions inside the fair also are expected to be picketed by civil rights groups.

Meanwhile, city Traffic Commissioner Henry A. Barnes quickly put in a new regulation making it illegal to run out of gas on any parkway, expressway, bridge or tunnel. Offenders could be fined up to $50 for the first offense and considerably more for subsequent ones.

Barnes asserted that as many as 150,000 cars may be on the highways around the fair on any given day, many of them jammed with families.

"Their safety is our primary concern," he said.

Of Barnes' new regulation, Oliver Leeds, membership secretary of the Brooklyn CORE chapter, said: "If he thinks he can get that to stand up in court let him go ahead and do it."

Police Commissioner Michael Murphy said the police department was making plans to keep traffic moving despite any "stall-in" activity.

In another comment on the projected demonstration, Barnes said: "I have sympathy for the aims of these groups. But they are going to lose much of their ground if they adopt methods such as this."

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People also has disdained the "stall-in" tactics.

The fair's gates will be open at 9 a.m. Wednesday for the first of two 180-day seasons, one this year and the other next year.

President Johnson, Fair President Robert Moses, a large group of distinguished guests and a specially invited audience will gather in the 1,7000-seat Singer Bowl at 11 a.m. for formal dedication ceremonies.

DuPont's show will feature a combination of live actors and films projected onto the stage.

There are countless other unique techniques employed by the many pavilions.

A sure-fire attraction is bound to be one of the Illinois Pavilion's features. It is a life-size, highly lifelike, animated figure of Abraham Lincoln. It talks, sits, stands and displays many facial motions. The exhibitors are permitting no pictures made of it because they feel no picture can do it justice, not even movies.

The foreign nations are exhibiting their cultures, crafts, cuisine and entertainment in structures reflecting their native architecture. Many have been constructed on a lavish scale. Several will operate night-club type shows.

Nearly all the fair's major attractions are free. However, there are charges ranging from 50 cents to $6 for special rides and shows.

For those who don't wish to drive to the fair after reaching New York, there are many means of transportation available—ranging from a 15 - cent subway ride to a $6-to-$10 helicopter journey.

The helicopter is one of two brand-new modes of travel. The other is a fleet of 22-passenger hydrofoil boats which will ply between the fair, Manhattan and the Bronx.

Eating at the fair will be no problem. There'll be 113 restaurants with everything from 30-cent hot dogs to high-priced American and foreign specialties.

The visitor will need more time than money at the fairgrounds. It'll take at least a week of sightseeing, from 9 a.m. to midnight, to skim the cream, two weeks to take in the bulk of it and probably a month to see it all in complete detail.

The visitor ought to bring along his most comfortable walking shoes. There are 28 miles of walkways inside the fair. While various forms of transportation are available at varying prices on the grounds, there'll be plenty of walking to do inside the various exhibits.

During the day, the show will be televised nationally.

The giant exposition, four years in the making, is the most expensive enterprise of its kind ever undertaken and probably will be seen by more people than any other fair in history.

Its total cost is figured at a billion. Original estimates were that there would be 70 million admissions during the two years. However, more than 28 million tickets had been sold far in advance of the opening and there have been guesses that the final total might reach 100 million. They'll come from around the world.

The approximate mile-square fairgrounds, on what was once a dump heap and marsh in the Flushing section of Queens near LaGuardia Airport, will provide a lavish spectacle of architecture and exhibits, rides and entertainment features of all kinds.

Some 60 foreign nations have pavilions and exhibitions. About half the states are represented with pavilions and attractions of their own. Many of America's huge corporations have arranged some stunning exhibits and shows—all free.

The federal government erected one of the largest buildings on the grounds at a cost of $17 million. Among its many offerings is a 15-minute "You Are There" trip through the sights and sounds of American history, created by 360-degree film projection and stereophonic sound.

A simulated trip to the moon and beyond will be created in similar fashion at the travel and transportation building.

The fair, dedicated to "Peace Through Understanding," will be a wonderland of the marvels of yesterday, today and tomorrow.

At the Ford Pavilion, the visitor will board a 1964-model automobile for a trip through dinosaur-filled prehistoric times and on through succeeding ages to the present. The cars are propelled by a conveyor mechanism underneath.

At General Motors, moving chairs will carry visitors "to the moon" and then through a series of scenes depicting how man will conquer the polar areas, jungles and deserts. The ride winds up with an eye-popping "city of tomorrow."

Visitors at General Electric will be startled by the sight and sound of a controlled atomic explosion — perfectly safe in every way. Bell Telephone is using an ingenious combination of motion pictures, stage settings, lights and optical illusions to tell the history of communications.

Motion pictures are being employed in some new and astonishing ways, particularly by Johnson's Wax and DuPont.

Johnson's has a three-screen theater which will show scenes from around the world. Sometimes the three screens will display one vast-sized picture. At others, each will have a different view. The correlation of the pictures and music is a stunning show.

Students Named For Achievement Nominations

Ten junior students in District 11 high schools have been nominated for the annual Achievement Awards Program sponsored by the National Council of Teachers of English.

The nominees from Palmer High School are Valerie Carlson, Karen Cummings, Virginia Henry, Jon Mahaffy, and Linda Sansen. The Wasson High nominees are Linda Boy, Patricia Perry, Carol Roodhouse, Vicke Smith, and William Maxwell.

Local and state committees will judge the students' writing abilities and literary awareness as shown by essays and test results. NCTE will announce the winners in December 1964 and send their names to every college and university with a recommendation that they be considered for scholarships.

In six previous years of competition in the NCTE program, District 11 high schools have produced six winners and three runners-up.

The Achievement Awards Program is part of a comprehensive program to encourage improvement in English language and literature at all school levels. NCTE is also participating in Project English sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education for improving English instruction. Wasson High School is one of 100 schools selected for study in the project.

Veterans Get Social Security

Social security disability benefits are currently being paid each month to 827,000 disabled workers and to 619,000 dependents of these workers. Here in El Paso County 499 disabled workers and 282 dependents have qualified for benefits under the disability program, according to Charles W. Feldhauser, social security district manager.

The disability provisions of the law require that a worker have 20 quarters of coverage under social security in the 40 quarters which end with the date of disability. Stated more simply, we can say that this involves five years of fairly regular employment or self-employment in the 10 years up to the date of the disabling illness or injury.

To be considered disabled, a worker's condition must be severe enough to prevent him from doing any substantial work for the indefinite future. This does not mean that a disability claimant must be a hopeless invalid or at death's door. Seventy-eight per cent of those receiving checks are ambulatory and able to attend to most household activities.

Workers who believe they meet these requirements should get in touch with the social security office at 15 South Weber St., as soon as possible. A person's date of disability can be established not more than 18 months prior to the date a claim is filed. Delay in filing may mean the loss of some or all disability benefits.

Manitou News

By BETTY NORTON — 633-4122

The Manitou Springs High School Aristonians held the last dance of the season on Friday, April 17. The theme was "Swingin' Safari." Couples were asked to dress for the occasion. The club has ordered member's pins and they will arrive in time for the annual dinner in May.

The Student Council met Wednesday. Things under discussion were Student Council elections, the rewriting of the constitution, and field day. The games on Field day, May 27, will be a pie eating contest, three-legged race, potato race, bat race, shot put, 50-yard dash, egg toss, cross country race, broad jump, and high jump. Each contest has a girls and a boys division. In the afternoon a softball game between interested girls and boys will be held. The class which accumulates the most points in the contests will be the winners.

Last week was "Hell" week for the Pep Club pledges. The Pep Club is a boys organization and all of the following things are part of initiation. On Monday all pledges wore suits to school. On Tuesday Pledge Jim Davis had to dress as Lil' Abner, Pledge John Bryan as Popeye, Pledge Norman Armentrout as Superman, Pledge George Whitt as Jughead, Pledge Marvin Layman as Charlie Brown, Pledge Joe Draig as Beetle Bailey, and Gayland Owen as Prince Valiant. Cowboy outfits with real cap guns were the mode of the day on Wednesday. On Thursday, no one but the pledges knew they were being initiated because they all wore gunny sack underwear. Finally on Friday they were all thankful to be wearing suits again. In addition to all of these things the pledges had to speak to members in a very formal manner and had to have gum and candy ready for members at all times.

On Friday, a preliminary meeting of all girls interested in trying out for cheerleading was held. Head cheerleader Judy Bonke told the girls that they would have to try out in front of a faculty committee before going out for the student body and that they would have to meet all athletic requirements. Clinic, headed by the three senior cheerleaders, will begin next week.

The Booster Club talent show was held Wednesday night. The mystery guest was Larry Olsen, playing a trumpet.

Try-outs for the senior class play, under the direction of Miss Judy Sekera, were held Thursday after school. The play is "Twelve Angry Jurors." Assistant director will be Janet Reed.

Several Manitou students will represent MHS at the County Government Day May 1. Those students are Donna Davis, Kit Schorer, Fred Koster, Barbara Liby, Roger Liby, Betty Atherton and Bob Nakai.

The girls' basketball team, the Read Heads, played the Old Colts on April 14 under the sponsorship of the Green and Gold Club. The Red Heads won.

All juniors took the California Achievement tests Thursday.

Beginning Tuesday, there will be intramural basketball in the gym for girls. This program will be offered every Tuesday that the gym is available.

Editor-Author To Speak on Government Curb

Alan Barth, author and editorial writer for the Washington Post, will give a free, public speech, "The Idea of Limited Government," at 4 p.m. Thursday in the ballroom of the University of Colorado Memorial Center.

The talk is part of the University's American Heritage Lecture Series, which was established in 1962 to bring outstanding Americans to the campus to speak on forces and ideas in America's past which bear upon the moment and have meaning for the future.

Barth also will address a Friday noon luncheon opening the School of Education's 52nd annual School and University Conference, which is expected to attract some 500 Colorado schoolmen to the campus for the weekend.

Barth has written three books: "The Loyalty of Free Men," "Government by Investigation" and "The Price of Liberty." He has been with the Washington Post since 1943, he was with the Office of War Information for two years prior to that and he did his early newspapering in Beaumont, Tex.

He has been a visiting professor at Montana State University and at the University of California, Berkeley.

Approximately half of U.S. vegetable crops and nearly half of the fruit production is used for canning, the National Canners Association reports.

Two Teenage Boys Killed in Accident

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Two teen-aged Jefferson County boys were fatally injured Friday night when their car was struck by another vehicle at an intersection, the State Patrol said.

The deaths of Randal A. Rheams, 16, and Charles Linthicum, 17, brought to 104 the number of persons killed in Colorado highway accidents this year. There had been 123 such deaths at this stage of 1963.

The Rheams youth was dead on arrival at a hospital after the accident. His passenger, Linthicum, died early today in the hospital.

The patrol identified the driver of the second car as Burdette Dutcher, 20, of Arvada. She was taken to Lutheran Hospital.

The patrol said the Dutcher car struck the side of the other at a Jefferson County crossing.

Thieves Being Foiled By Supermarket Ingenuity

By DARDEN CHAMBLISS
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Why have they started sealing off the ends of wax paper rolls?

Why do they deliberately use different size packages for products that aren't different sizes?

The answer, says Julian Barksdale, vice president of the Whitman's Chocolates division of Pet Milk Co. and an expert on packaging, is shoplifters.

Supermarket managers have found that some thieves will slip small objects — tubes of toothpaste or shampoo, for instance—into the hollow rolls of wrapping paper and thereby get them past the check-out girl.

Also, says Barksdale, an attempt to standardize a line of frozen foods in convenient same-size packages raised problems. They found that some shoppers would switch products and, for instance, take home a $1.75 lobster in a macaroni-and-cheese carton with a 38-cent tag.

Barksdale said that efforts to thwart dishonesty also account for some of the hard-to-open jar tops—lid switching is common—and for the bulky sheets of cardboard on which small items are mounted—harder to pocket.

Barksdale recounted these instances in discussing the 33rd National Packaging Conference and National Packaging Exposition being held by the American Management Association starting April 20. Barksdale is an association officer and will chair several of the conference sessions.

Barksdale said that thwarting thieves is only one of many challenges package designers face.

They must also keep in mind the particular wants of warehousemen, and the fact that retailers are very jealous of their shelf space. The retailers won't stock a package that takes up too much room and they insist on loading shelves the handiest way for their purposes.

Oil Shale Case Step Blasted By Rep. Dominick

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Peter H. Dominick, R-Colo., has accused a federal legal office of using delaying tactics against more than 200 oil shale mining claims in Colorado, Wyoming and Utah.

Dominick referred to an opinion by Frank J. Barry, solicitor for the Interior Department. Barry held that most of the claimants had forfeited their interests by failing to appeal a ruling made against them by the department in the early 1930s.

The Supreme Court — late in 1935 — found that claims could not be canceled for failure to perform the annual assessment work required by mining laws. But Barry said this decision did not change the fact that the claimants should have appealed the department's cancellations long ago.

Dominick said Barry's ruling was "one more difficulty placed in the way of developing oil reserves."

It leaves open other questions concerning the applications and "is a delaying tactic that will not solve the basic question as to whether or not the patents (claims for titles) are valid," Dominick said.

Rep. Wayne Aspinall, D-Colo., chairman of the House Interior Committe, said he understood the decision was "not what most of the applicants had hoped for."

"However," he said, "after so many years of inactivity in this area, it is a move that will permit courts that will lead to a final determination."

Sen. Gordon Allott, R-Colo., said Barry's opinion "at last removed the matter of placer oil shale claims from limbo." He said if it is found that Barry's opinion was unfair he would consider introducing legislation to change the situation.

The claims involve nearly 40,000 acres.

Barry's opinion is effective immediately on 30 of the claims, all of them filed between 1910 and 1920. The owners of the other claims were given 60 days in which to file evidence that the department's cancellations in the early 1930s did not follow all required procedures.

Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall said Barry's decision helped clear the way to development of a program to use the oil shale resources of the three states.

Nixon Offers Johnson Make-Up Service for TV

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK (AP)—Richard M. Nixon, in a jocular mood at a meeting of the circus Saints and Sinners Club, offered to loan President Johnson "the make-up man who made me up for my debates."

The 1960 Republican presidential candidate, who appeared in televised debates during that campaign with his Democratic opponent, the late John F. Kennedy, was the butt of ribbing at the club affair, but took the jibes goodnaturedly.

Humorist Walter Kiernan satirized Nixon's career thusly:

"His father was a grocer and had this man (Nixon, the son) stayed out of politics, he might have had his own grocery store today."

French Foreign Aid Defended By De Gaulle

By DAVID MASON

PARIS (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle defended his program of aid to underdeveloped nations last week against critics who think he ought to spend part of the money for French schools and housing.

He also told a nationwide radio-television audience that France must continue to develop its independent nuclear force to keep from becoming an American protectorate and to dissuade a Soviet attack.

De Gaulle, 73, made no new policy declaration. His chief purpose appeared to be to reply to mounting criticism in France against heavy expenditures for nuclear weapons and foreign aid.

France is spending approximately 1.8 per cent of its gross national product on foreign aid, the highest percentage in the world and more than double the .72 per cent the United States spends. Critics protest that more money should be used at home, especially for educational facilities and housing.

France's annual birth rate increased about 300,000 between 1942 and 1946, and institutions of higher learning must turn away thousands of students for lack of room. There is a critical housing shortage.

Since he returned to power in 1958, De Gaulle said, France has boosted education spending from 10 to 16 per cent of the national budget. He said housing construction has increased from 793 to 1,000 units a day.

France's revenues have risen 30 per cent during the five-year period, De Gaulle said. Therefore, he argued, why should France renounce its own nuclear defense program and cease to aid peoples "who aspire to our civilization?"

De Gaulle, reaching out for more influence in world affairs, is bidding for leadership of a third force in politics, economics and culture to exist between the United States and the Soviet Union.

These "two hegemonies," De Gaulle asserted, "are tending to share the world so long as Western Europe is not able nor does not have the will to organize itself so that the balance may be found.

"Why then should France, which is surging forward, keep herself apart from a movement which springs in great measure from her traditional genius and on which in the final analysis depend the peace and the fate of the world?"

He told opponents of his nuclear policy that while the Soviet menace exists, "France is in danger of destruction and invasion without having any certainty that her American allies, themselves directly exposed to death, would know how to prevent this for her."

"For France to deny herself her own means of deterring the adversary from a possible attack on her, when she is in a position to have them, that would be drawing the lightning while depriving herself of a lightning rod," De Gaulle said.

De Gaulle gave no details on how France's nuclear force is developing. There is no evidence that he has a fully operational strike unit, although the government announced late last year that atomic bombs and supersonic planes to deliver them were on production lines. Plans are proceeding for hydrogen bomb tests in the Pacific within two years.

Palmer Gets Into Swing of the Political Year

COLORADO SPRINGS
GAZETTE-TELEGRAPH
SUNDAY, APRIL 19, 1964 SECTION B

Candidates Find That All Is Not Roses in Politics

Text by RAY HERST
Photos by STAN PAYNE

This is the year for politics. It comes like this only once every four years and everything is up for grabs, from the top office in the United States of America to the post of dog catcher in Podunk Holler.

And you can bet that the guy campaigning for dogcatcher is working just as hard as the Goldwaters, Rockefellers and Johnsons to get the votes of the people.

Three young men at Palmer High School have been working, as hard, if not harder, as the other gentlemen. They are neither Democrats nor Republicans, but they had to battle through ward meetings, primaries and the big general election.

Their objective: president of the student body of Palmer High School.

Friday the votes were counted and Sherm Gardner proved to be the people's choice.

And like in big-time politics, his opponents, Dale Thompson and Ted Andrews, had only the memories and excitement of the campaign to comfort them.

But the lesson they learned is more than they could have gained in four years of political science classes or an entire lifetime of voting without ever having engaged in any kind of political activity.

They learned the make-up of this country from the ground up; they learned that a man running for office cannot sit back on what he thinks are his laurels and let his past accomplishments speak for him.

They learned that the people make the politicians into officers and that it is to them they must turn for supoprt; and they learned that politics is not a game for the lazy.

The elections at Palmer High School are run the same way as any popular election is run today.

The student body is first split into two parties: Brown and White, in keeping with this country's two - party system. Then the homerooms in each of the two parties are further divided into wards.

And the wards make up the grassroots sections of high school politics. The more wards you have supporting you, the better chance you have to get onto your party's ballot in the general election.

Here is where the campaign begins; here is where the votes are; here is where the high school political aspirant wins or loses.

His first obstacle is to be nominated in the primary election and this is no easy task. He, like candidates for offices in adult life, must meet a stringent list of qualifications.

A petition announcing his intention must be filed and the potential candidate's record is carefully checked. If he is up to par, he is ready for the big ward meetings.

At these meetings, as in the big Republican and Democrat conventions, nomination speeches are read for the various candidates and the party's "wards" are polled individually. Hands are counted and the tally noted.

As each ward completes its vote, the results are rushed to a special election board which tallies the total votes and the party's candidate steps forth, ready for the political wars.

His forces gather. They begin painting signs and posters. Others work on the important speeches which are delivered before the entire student body the day before election.

But the posters come first.

A special committee passes on each sign and poster to insure they are not derogatory or in bad taste and to insure that everyone gets an equal chance for the most strategic spots in school to shout the virtues of their candidates, everyone starts at once.

In fact, the rush to post the signs resembles a Washington Day sale in Washington, D.C. Students rush up stairs and

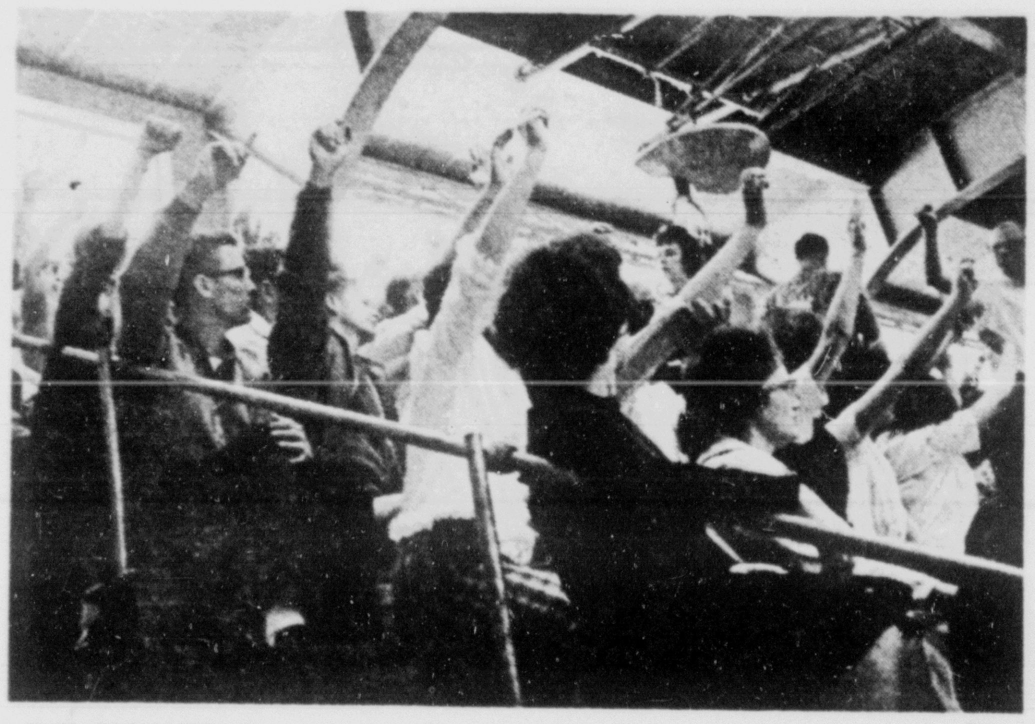
FOR

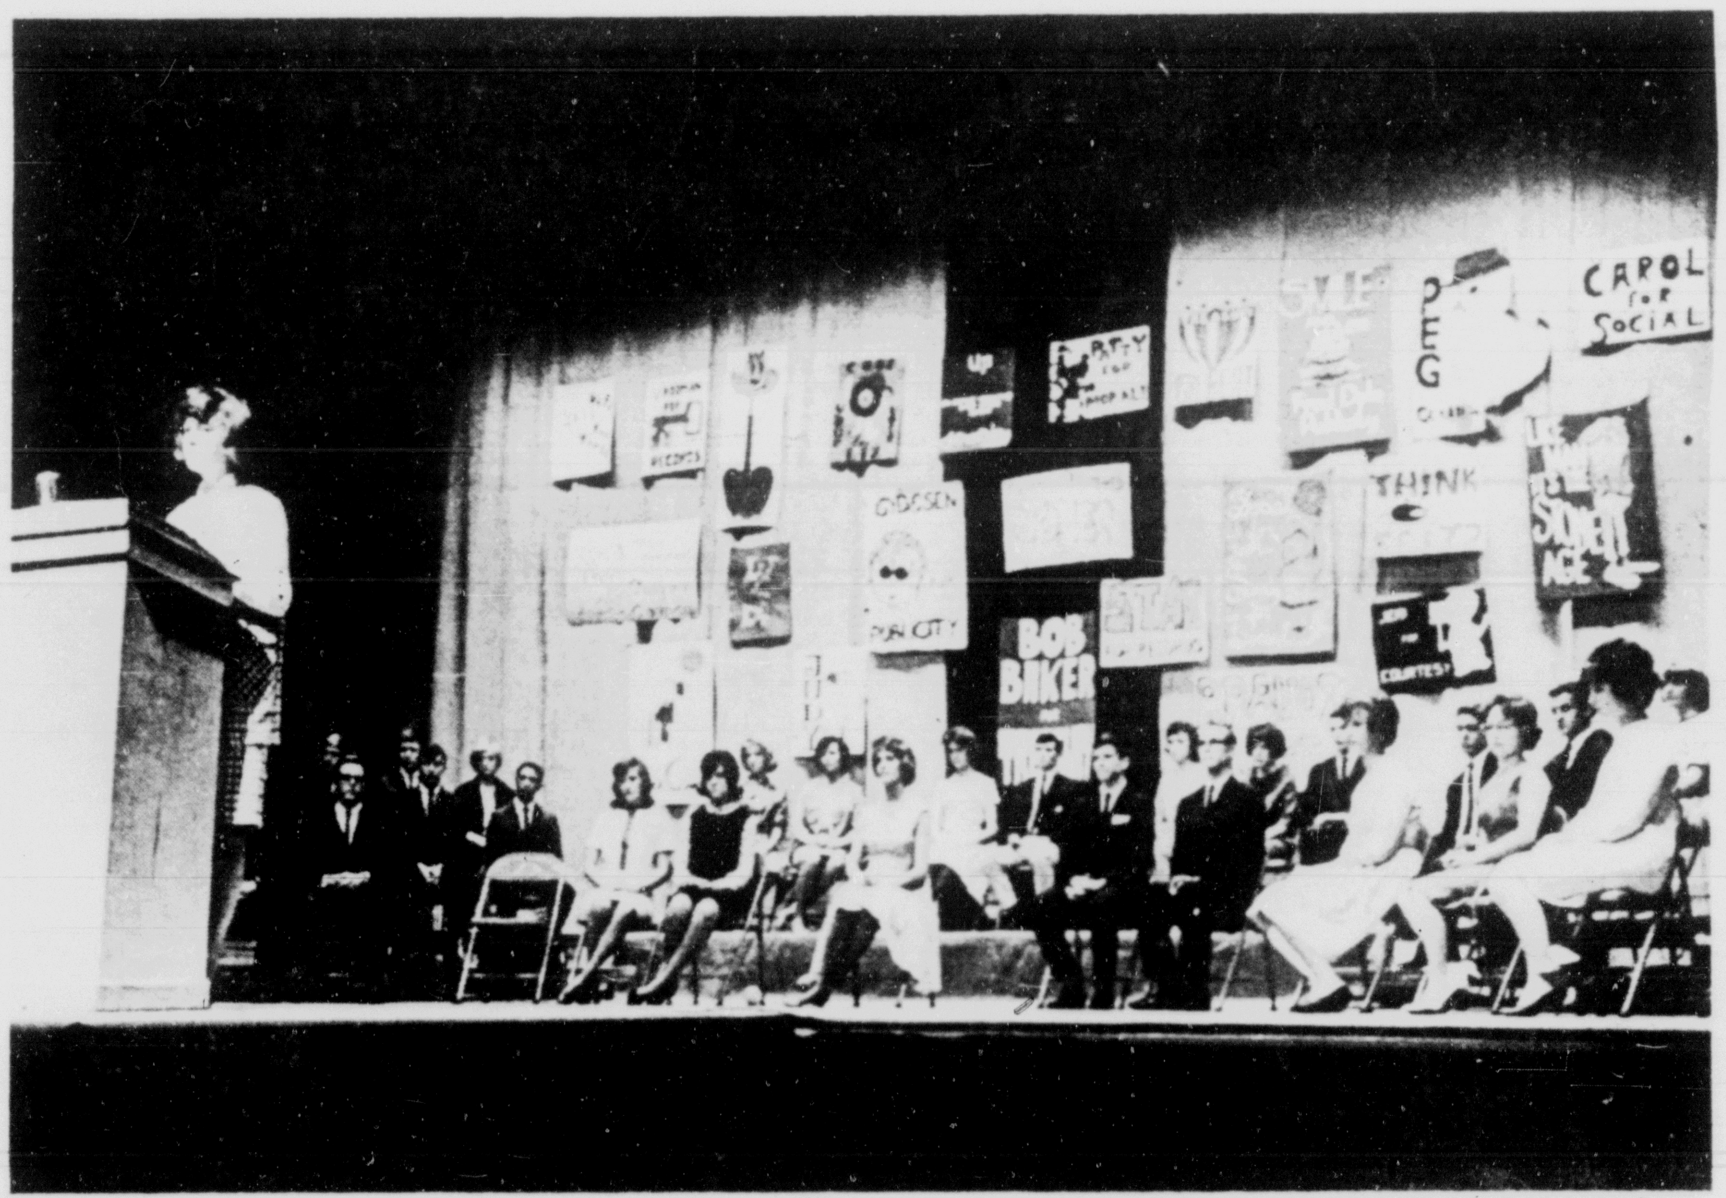
THERE'S A SPOT THERE—By the time th eopposing parties are finished, the walls of most of Palmer High School look like the billboards on the nation's highways. This happens once a year during election time when the opposing parties are permitted to put up signs calling attention to their favorite candidates. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)



THE PRIMARY—Here is where hopeful candidates start chewing their fingernails as the sponsor groups vote by ward during the party's assembly. It's the vote here that gets the name of the candidate on the all-school ballot. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

THE CRUCIAL TEST — A special committee, supervised by teacher Charles Gaul, right, student organization sponsor who oversees the election, rules on each sign and poster to be displayed during the campaign to make sure they are in good taste. (Gazette Telegraph photo)

THE TALLY—These students make up the primary election board. They tally the votes of the "wards" or sponsor groups and certify the results that will end with a candidate to head the party's slate as well as complete it. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)



THE DAY BEFORE THE BIG ONE—These are the candidates for the top offices at Palmer High School and the day before election, they have the opportunity to deliver their one and only official campaign speech. On the basis of this address, the student body determines who it wants to run the school's student activities. Election day comes with the start of school the next morning. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

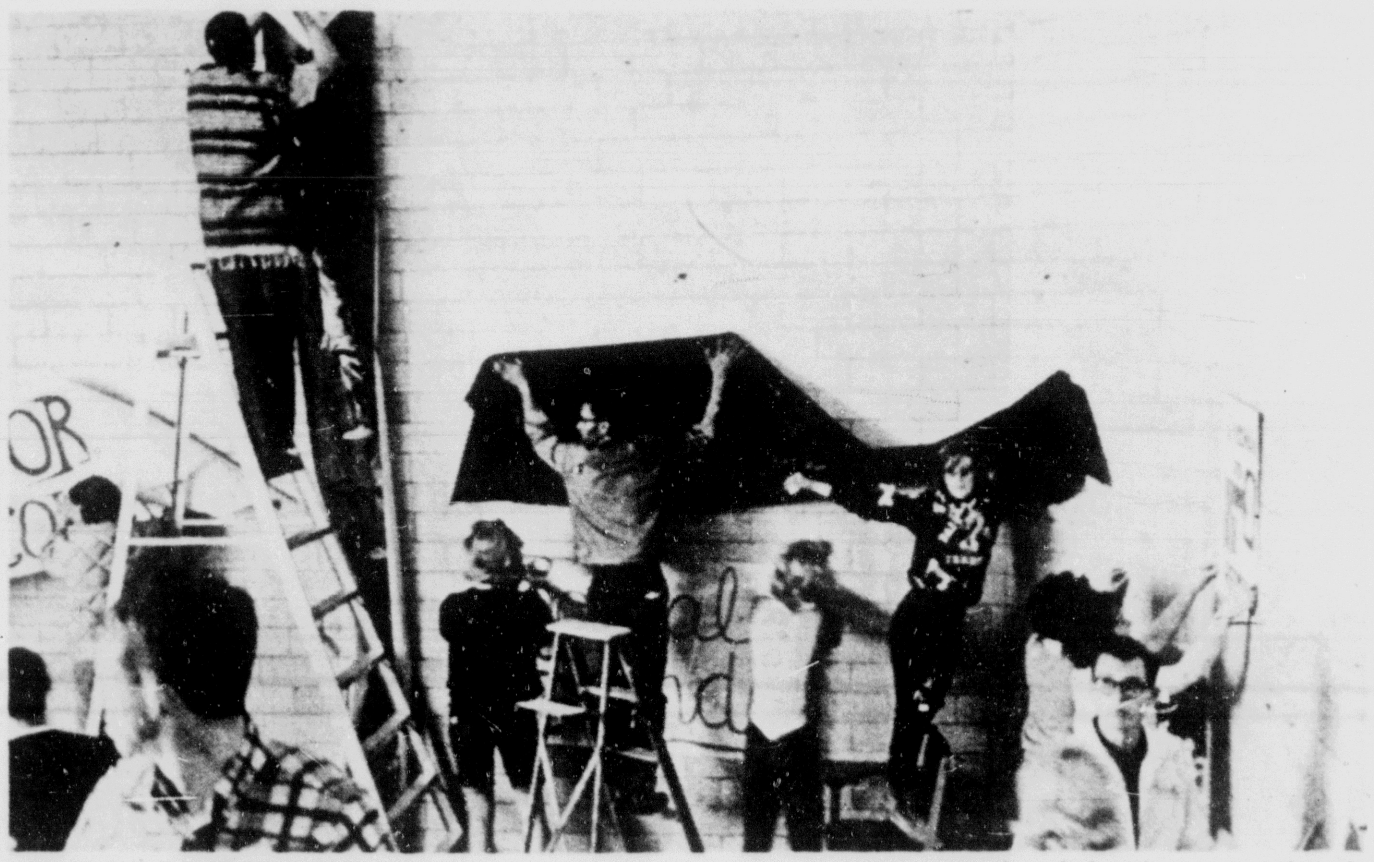
THE FIRST STEP—These young men are turning in petitions in support of their favorite candidates to an election official who makes sure that the potential candidate meets all of the qualifications necessary for the school election. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)



WORLD'S FASTEST TAPERS—They are the world's fastest because they carry the tape stuck on their clothes and because those who can stick the tape fastest get the best and most spots, to call attention to the young man or woman they feel is best suited for office at Palmer High School. This is the West Stairwell, considered one of the best spots in the entire school. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

THE RACE — Palmer has its own race for space and the students aren't shooting for the moon but for the best spots in the school to show off their candidate's names and virtues. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

College Group Will Aid Boys Ranch

On Saturday, the members of the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity at Colorado College will participate in the Fraternity's annual Community Service Day.

Each year every chapter of the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity spends at least one day working on a project which will better in some way their communities.

The members of the fraternity do not receive any wages for their work, the only rewards are the satisfaction and pride derived from the completion of a worthwhile project.

Although the members work hard, they enjoy doing it simply because it is helping the community in which they live and because it is worthwhile.

Again this year, the men feel they have a most worthwhile project — The Brockhurst Boys Ranch in Green Mountain Falls, Colorado.

The Brockhurst Boys Ranch is a ranch for boys between the ages of 10 and 16. The boys at the ranch do not have homes or are unable to live with their parents. The ranch provides the boys with guidance and understanding in order that they may live better lives in our society.

The ranch is owned and operated by the Lions Club of Woodland Park and is financed through cash payments from public agencies and gifts from individuals, industry, and foundations.

Improvements of the ranch are financed by private gifts from individuals and groups; however, some organizations do provide services instead of gifts, that is the case with the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity.

The members of the fraternity have decided to donate their time and services to the Ranch with the hope of accomplishing many of the tasks necessary to the successful operation and maintenance of the ranch. There are many jobs to be done at the reach: Chinking the cabins, painting fences, grading roads and a long list of other tasks which the competent but over worked staff nevertheless must leave to outside organizations.

After the completion of the work, the ranch staff, the boys and the fraternity will enjoy an old fashioned bar-B-que and a hootenanny with everyone participating.

The men of the fraternity are looking forward to a day well-spent in community service and the spreading of goodwill throughout the community.

Peak Region Yesterdays

By DORA FOSTER

Once upon a time, Lee Pace, who now lives in Denver, had a column in a weekly paper entitled "Mirror and Spyglass," and in that column he and a friend had agreed that when one starts reminiscing it's a sign that one is growing old." He said too that "God gave us memories that we might have roses in December."

So with those two thoughts in mind I will say this "Come along; let's gather a few roses."

Yesterday I saw a little girl about 10 years of age sitting all alone at a counter before a soda fountain, deftly stirring with a long spoon a creamy effervescing drink. After she had finished she paid for the treat as nonchalantly as a grown person might, then went ouside where she righted her bicycle at the curb and rode away.

How different, how very different, her demeanor from mine when I was a child of that same age. I, being reared on a ranch, would have been slow to enter a store by myself, not to mention having no money in my pocket or a bicycle waiting outside. And yet few of the many folk I have met can tell of a happier childhood than was mine.

I can recall the first sputtering drink that I ever had. One morning when Edith and I were "taking a walk" on what is now the edge of the Broadmoor fashionable resort, we looked across the flats, then without trees or houses, to the one little frame cottage that was the home of our Sunday School teacher, Miss Viola Virginia Kinsman.

Everybody called her "Olie." She was a plump, jolly young lady and we visited her whenever mother allowed us that pleasure, but this morning not having been told we might go to her home we satisfied ourselves with gazing at her house. We noticed that the windows of her sitting room were wide open and her white muslin curtains were billowing out in the summer breezes that always blew across the Broadmoor flats.

When we returned home we told mother about the blowing of the curtains and she said, "When you go over there to see Olie you might ask her if she has surrendered."

I am certain that my mother never thought of her remark again, but sister and I did, and the next day as we were on our way to visit our teacher we wondered just how we might bring in the remark about the curtains. Edith being two years older than I, was the one to ask the question, and I was secretly relieved that the task fell upon her. But here is where my memory fails me. Whether or not sister asked the question I do not know but this is what I do know: Olie made us a most delicious, foaming drink, served it in tall glasses and it sparkled right up into our faces as we drank it.

I do not recall that we had any long spoons with which we could stir our soda, but I still remember that we stood close to our beloved teacher in her friendly little kitchen and were happy. Never will I forget it.

Mother told us afterwards that probably Olie had used syrup, some other things and cream of tartar but whenever we asked mother to mix us some fizzy drink she seemed to be always "just out" of the necessary ingredients, but if we felt the need of a drink of buttermilk fresh from the churn, or even a cup of Jersey milk it was always forthcoming. Poor little country children. How much we missed?

As for our having bicycles, no child had them. Bicycles were only for big boys who rode on top of the large wheel and left the little wheel to trail along behind, getting many a skinned nose as the rider did so.

But we had a much safer and pleasanter contraption on which to take rides. It was our neighbor's big coal shovel. Mr. James May, who lived just under the hill and across the creek from us, had no objection to his son George and sister and me coasting down the hill on it. There was a steep hill just back of May's kitchen door with a little ditch of running water at the foot of it. The ditch had a little bridge across it but if the shovel and the occupant managed it well there was never any occasion for any accidents. We took turns riding down, sitting well back in the great scoop, withour feet sticking out in front of us and our hands grasping the handle. Sometimes we needed a slight push to get going. Great fun!

After we had reached the foot of the hill and scrambled off the thing, whoever's turn it was to ride next was supposed to drag the shovel up to the top again while onlookers below stood ready to grab for their turn, half hoping, half fearing that the little bridge would not be negotiated.

We never felt the need for exciting movies, since we had never heard of them.

No, we had no chrome-trimmed bicycles in those far-off days but we did have a nice clean discarded flour barrel. It was made of staves. The top or head of it had long since disappeared. I remember that the barrel was lying on its side one morning close beside the woodpile and Edith and Harry Hayman, a neighbor boy about her age, were standing by it talking together. When I came up they kindly invited me to take a ride in it. We were to roll it down the gentle slope towards the back end of the shop with us taking turns in it. Very unselfishly they proposed that I have the first ride.

Edith always insisted that she never intended to get into that barrel, first or last, but somehow that morning I gathered the impression that as soon as I had enjoyed the experience she and Harry would follow suit, and that they were favoring me by allowing me to go first.

I recollect that it was with some misgivings that I stuck my feet into that waiting barrel, following instructions from the outside to draw my knees up and double up so that not even my head should stick out and thus be injured during the process of rolling.

Then as soon as I said "Ready" I was given a gentle shove and we, the barrel and I, were off. Over and over I was turned, first up, then down, then up again till I was not sure whether it was I or the barrel that was turning. I do recall, though, that I was hoping all the time that the rolling would stop at the flat place just back of the shop and not go on down the hill along the water path to the creek. Fortunately for me, the barrel chose the first course and stopped just short of the shop's concrete wall.

As I crawled dizzily out, my two play-fellows were right there, eager to inquire how I had enjoyed the trip. I was not able to tell them just what impressions I had gained on my journey but from my appearance and mental condition I judged that they thought it useless to ask me to repeat the performance.

Since, as I have said, sister insisted she had "more sense than to try it," I'll have to admit that I didn't have, but I have lived and learned and today because I took that barrel ride I have one more rose in my December bouquet.

Vacation Sites Listed in New State Guide

Thousands of prospective Colorado visitors will learn of the state's many attractions through the 1964-65 edition of the Where TO VACATION IN COLORADO travel directory being distributed nationwide this week by the Rocky Mountain AAA Club.

All sections of the state are portrayed through stories and photographs in this colorful 232-page travel guide published through the cooperative efforts of the local auto club, participating chambers of commerce across the state and AAA-member hotels, motels, resorts and restaurants.

Eighty thousand copies of the book are being distributed throughout the United States and Canada by AAA clubs. In Colorado, books can be obtained not only from auto club offices, but also from AAA-member accommodations and chambers of commerce.

Full-color photographs of such popular attractions as Berthoud Pass, Engineers Peak, Uncompahgre National Forest, Lake DeWeese, the "Silverton" narrow gauge train, Red Rock Lake and Rocky Mountain National Park are included in the guide.

Colorado's travel industry benefits in two ways by having travelers forewarned, according to the AAA club, which cited the following examples:

An easterner planning a trip "to the west" generally might select Colorado specifically if he can be sold on the state by convincing travel information.

A visitor in one part of the state might decide to stay in Colorado for another several days in order to explore new areas he learns about from travel promotional material.

Fire Destroys Vacant House Near Monument

An old landmark of the Divide area vanished when the historic Schutt house on Grande Road, east of Monument, and a barn near by were destroyed by fire Friday. The house was unoccupied and unfurnished and it is reported that the fire may have been caused by boys breaking into the house. The origin of the fire is listed as undetermined.

The fire was discovered about 9 a.m. and the Monument Fire Department fought the blaze. The fire had made such headway when the firemen reached the scene that they could do little in an attempt to save the historic structure.

The large barn also was destroyed. The firemen were successful in preventing the flames from spreading into the forest surrounding the structures.

The house had been unoccupied and the barn unused for many years.

Knife and Fork Club to Hear Expert on Africa

Members of the KNIFE AND FORK club will have Grant C. Butler, authority on Africa and its changing economic conditions as their guest speaker when the club meets at 7 p.m. Monday evening at the Antlers Hotel.

Butler, a former public relations man for the American Arabian Oil Company, returned last fall from Cairo and the Middle East Countries. It was his 10th trip there.

Butler's experiences as an international observer began fifteen years ago when as a public relations executive he got out "on the ground" to see what was going on and what could be done to advance the cause of his company against the competition Soviet Russia was throwing up. Butler encountered experiences seldom crossing the path of men in other positions.

He lived and worked among the Arabs. He knows the desert Bedouin, the Arab working in the oil fields, the Moslems of Lebanon, Iraq, Jordan, Syria, Egypt and the countries of North Africa.

Among his accomplishments while in Saudi Arabia, was that of writing the first radio script for King Saud; and the countless interviews with top Arab diplomats and leaders.

Presently a major in the United States Air Forces Reserve, Butler served with the Ninth Air Force, in France and Germany in World War II. He was a combat radio reporter and recorded actual missions of bombers and fighters for rebroadcast on the N. B. C. Army Hour and other networks.

Much in demand by both radio and television, particularly for programs which discuss Middle East problems, Butler is now devoting most of his time to writing and lecturing. He has had several articles in national magazines in both his country and in Europe.

Director of Game, Fish and Parks Department, Harry Woodward gave an outline of the various departments of the Game and Fish that would be affected by the heavy cut imposed on the game cash budget by the recent session of the legislature.

There were three different Garden Clubs represented at the meeting: the Air Force Academy Garden Club, Skyway Park Garden Club, and the Hobby Garden Club. Five new affiliate Clubs (or reinstatements) were welcomed to and accepted by the Colorado Wildlife Federation.

'Becket' Film To Open in Denver This Week

Hal Wallis' screen production of "Becket" starring Richard Burton as Thomas Becket and Peter O'Toole as King Henry II, will open a reserved seat engagement Wednesday, at the RKO International 70 Theater in Denver.

"Becket" will not be shown in other cities in Colorado during its exclusive Denver engagement, according to Paramount Pictures officials.

The picture, photographed in 70 mm Panavision and Technicolor, is based on the Jean Anouilh internationally acclaimed stage play "Becket." The film was directed by Peter Glenville who also staged the New York production starring Laurence Olivier and Anthony Quinn.

In addition to Burton and O'Toole, the distinguished cast includes John Gielgud as King Louis VII of France, Donald Wolfit as Gilbert Folliot, Bishop of London, Martita Hunt, Pamela Brown Sian Phillips, Gino Cervi and Paolo Stoppa.

The story of Becket and his King is set against the turbulent and exciting background of 12th Century England. It is a large scale drama of the clash of church and crown and the love-hate relationship between Becket and Henry which culiminated in the Archbishop's murder in Canterbury Cathedral on Dec. 29, 1170.

"Becket" premiered in New York on March 11 of this year, and received instant acclaim by critics. Life Magazine says the picture is "a lustly, boldly, provocative production." Saturday Review calls it "a triumph, the New York Times says "Becket is Magnificent," and the New York Herald Tribune says the motion picture is "powerful and fascinating—the rarest of movies."

The film will be scheduled for ten performances a week at the RKI International 70. Matinees will be held Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays at 2 p.m. Evening performances are set nightly at 8 p.m.

Reserved seats are available at the theater boxoffice or by mail order to the RKO International 70 Theater, 1537 Welton Street, Denver.

The social studies department will present the NBC White Paper on the Death of Stalin and the Rise of Khrushchev and a contrast of World War I and World War II. The 7th and 11th grades will correlate their efforts in an American Government display. Math projects will show all approaches of integrating the modern and traditional mathematics into a workable curriculum for the children of District 20. The science department will display projects that are in conjunction with the open house and the recent Science Fair held at Colorado College. Displays will include variations from the elementary science experiments to advanced work in chemistry, physics, and biology.

Biology Group Plans Research In Mountains

Thirty-two high school biology teachers from 13 states ranging from Maine to California will spend the summer doing field research in the mountains of Colorado.

They will take part in the eight-week summer Institute in Field Biology at Aspen. The institute is operated by Colorado College and the Aspen Institute under a $44,500 grant from the National Science Foundation. The program gets under way July 1.

Five of the high school biology teachers selected to take part in this year's field institute are from Colorado.

Dr. Richard G. Beidleman, associate professor of zoology and director of the NSF programs at Colorado College, said the 32 teachers selected would spend four days a week in the field working under the supervision of biologists from leading colleges and universities.

This is one of three summer institutes in the natural sciences operated by Colorado College under grants from the National Science Foundation. Two are held on the campus.

Colorado teachers taking part in the institute are: Mrs. Reva M. Woolsey of 5135 S. Clarkson St. in Littleton, Littleton Senior High School; Clark O. Wilder of 1333 Edith Lane, Wasson High School; John K. Snobble of Carbondale, Rocky Mountain School; Kenneth W. Horn of 8400 W. Belmar Ave., Lakewood, Byers Jr. High School; Pete C. Fiorenze of Route 2, Trinidad, Primero R-2 School Dist. (Weston).

CU Doctor Gets $2,600 NSF Study Grant

Dr. David M. Gates of the University of Colorado Institute of Arctic and Alpine Research and the National Bureau of Standards has received a $2,600 grant from the National Science Foundation to study absorption of moisture and energy by plants.

Gates will conduct the study this summer at the University of Michigan Douglas Lake Biological Research Station in northern Michigan and will teach ecology at the University during the summer. It will be the same course Gates' father taught at Michigan for 40 years before his death 10 years ago.

The research will entail the measurement of the absorption of light and radiation of heat from things such as other plants and the ground, the measurement of the loss of moisture and the determination of the influence of air temperature and wind on the plant.

Gates will be making measurements on plants including aspen, pine, spruce and birch.

Dr. Wilbur H. Wright, professor of physics at Colorado College, has been named chairman of the physics department.

A member of the Colorado College faculty since 1956, Professor Wright will take up his duties as departmental chairman in September.

He headed up a campus committee which worked closely with the architects in planning the college's Olin Hall of Science, dedicated in the fall of 1962. He also has been chairman of the executive committee of the Natural Science Division.

Small Arms Range Tournament Set For Ft. Carson

More than 150 marksmen will begin firing in the annual Army Air Defense Command Small Arms Tournament at the Ft. Carson range Monday.

Maj. Gen. D. B. Johnson, deputy commanding general, ARADCOM, will fire the opening shot in a traditional ceremony kicking off the competition. Firing will continue through next Sunday, and trophies will be awarded to the top shooters April 27.

About 60 of the top Army Air Defense Command competitors will be selected for duty with the ARADCOM Advanced Marksmanship Unit on the basis of results of the Small Arms Tournament. The ARADCOM AMU is assigned to ARADCOM, but is stationed for training at Fort Carson. It enters rifle and pistol teams in the leading tournaments of the region and the nation.

The ARADCOM competition in this tourney were chosen on the basis of eliminations conducted in each of the command's five regions and the marksmen here now represent the cream of the small arms shooters in a command best known for its supersonic missiles.

Despite the role in an age of electronics and nuclear-capable missiles, ARADCOM stresses continued competence of soldiers in the use of basic weapons.

Also represented at this tournament will be competitors from the Colorado Army National Guard, the Air Force Academy, and Lowry Air Force Base, Denver.

FROM TV TO PICS

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Shelley Fabares, remembered for her work in Donna Reed's television series, has been signed to a multiple picture contract by Columbia Studio. Her first picture under terms of the pact will be "Ride the Wild Surf" with Fabian.

Federal Tax Tips

By ROGER E. WARD
Administrative Representative
Internal Revenue Service

Could you pay your maid or cook a pension for life if she becomes disabled, or when she is too old to work? Would you help to support her children if she were to die?

In days long past, feudal barons and slaveholders provided food, clothing, and shelter for their domestics, but today, your household employee earns her own protection under the social security program.

Domestic workers who are paid at least $50 cash wages in a calendar quarter from a single employer receive social security credit for these earnings. But to get this credit, the earnings must be reported. That's where you come in. As an employer, you must report to the Internal Revenue Service if you pay your household worker as much as $50 cash wages in the quarter.

Most household employers submit reports on Form 942, a simplified statement printed on the inside of a self-addressed envelope. These reports are filed after the close of each calendar quarter and are due by April 30, July 31, October 31, and January 31 each year.

If you are a household employer on the mailing list of the District Director of Internal Revenue, one of these forms is mailed to you at appropriate intervals. If social security taxes are due and you are not on the mailing list, you should request the District Director to add your name to his mailing list.

The social security tax for the employee and the employer is 3⅝ per cent each of the total cash wages paid in a calendar quarter. However it is the responsibility of the employer to report and remit the total tax of 7¼ per cent to the District Director of Internal Revenue.

The $50-cash-wage test applies to each household worker in your employ; but no report or social security tax is due on any household worker to whom you pay less than $50 cash during a calendar quarter.

Arlene Francis Will Open in Elitch Play

DENVER (AP)—Arlene Francis, stage and television star, will take the leading role in "Kind Sir," the first attraction at the Elitch Gardens Theater opening June 22.

Miss Helen Bonfils, secretary-treasurer of The Denver Post and an official of a New York theatrical producers firm, has taken over supervision of the theater, oldest summer playhouse in the country.

"Kind Sir" will be one of a number of summer touring productions to be brought to the theater, in contrast to the former practice of a resident stock company.

Whitfield Connor, executive administrator for the Elitch Theater, has talked with such performers as Cyril Ritchard, Cesar Romero, Van Johnson and Peggy Cass about appearing here.

NEW ENCODER—The Burroughs T-100 Exception Item Encoder in use here gives banks the capability of applying missing encoding at points of entry, at teller's cages and internal departments, before items enter a bank's paper flow.

* * *

Characters Are Applied To Bank Items by Encoder

Burroughs Corp., Todd Division, has released banking's first low, full field MICR encader, specifically for applying E-13B characters to exception items, those documents which enter a bank's automation system without being full pre-encoded, and, therefore, are not compatible with automatic handling, it was announced by Jerry Walton, manager of the local Todd Division branch sales office.

The Burroughs T-100 Exception Item ENCODER ANSWERS increasingly critical need as more and more banks turn to electronic processing of checks and official bank documents. Until now, documents which entered a bank's Magnetic Ink Character Recognition system without the necessary pre-encoding required special handling, thus reducing the efficiency of the bank's automated procedures. MICR is an automation system adopted by the American Bankers Association for handling the millions of checks that flow through the nation's banks every day. It depends on electronic equipment reading magentic codes along the bottom of each document.

The desk model Exception Item Encoder, which can encode in any field to all 12 magnetic printing specifications as outlined by the American Bankers Association, eliminates the need for special handling by giving banks an encoding capability at points where documents enter the bank'ssystem . . .at teller's cages for counter checks and deposits, and internal bank departments for a wide variety of internal debits and credits.

Point of entry encoding with the Burroughs Exception Item Encoder is expected to reduce substantially the cost of handling exception items, increase the efficiency of electronic data processing with MICR, and provide a means of reducing the incidence of exception items to a minimum.

The electrically operated EIE which occupies less desk space than a typewriter, is designed for maximum ease of operation with limited dependence on operator control. It requires less operator training than an adding machine.

The Burroughs EIE completes Burroughs Corporation's line of on-premises magnetic encoding equipment.

Brazil Will Break With Castro's Cuba

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)—Brazil's new government is expected to break off diplomatic relations with Cuba but continue its commercial and diplomatic ties with the Soviet Union and other Communist countries.

Informed sources say the regime will let relations with Havana go into a freeze before announcing the break. Cuban Ambassador Raul Roa Kouri left Brazil with his family and personal belongings on April 2, a day after the ouster of President Joao Goulart.

Zale's Enters Fifth Decade With 346 Stores

Zale Jewelry Co. is observing its 40th anniversary this month as the world's largest retail jewelry firm with 346 stores in operation and 30 more in the planning stage.

Zale's Jewelers local store is located at 28 N. Tejon St.

Morris B. Zale, present chairman of the board, opened the first Zale's Jewelry store in 1924 in Wichita Falls, Tex., with a policy of "pay no money down and take a year to pay."

Zale undertook a strong program of consistent newspaper advertising, a novel idea in the jewelry business in the 1920s.

Ten years ago the company had only 43 stores in operation, but in the last 10 years has opened 303 stores.

Max Davis, Zale store manager here, said the firm's diamond jewelry merchandising has been vital in the company's success, "especially since approximately 60 percent of Zale's annual sales are in diamond jewelry."

Sales during the nine months ended Dec. 31 mounted to more than $67 million. The company also has won three Diamonds-International Awards, and is one of less than 30 firms whose designers have qualified for the Diamonds-International Academy for excellence in jewelry design.

Zale's also is a recipient of the gold medal of the city of Antwerp, Belgium, for its contribution to diamond jewelry retailing.

Ben A. Lipshy, Zale's president said of the next decade:

"We hope it will bring still further growth. Our basic philosophies have convinced us that the public wants fine jewelry. We intend to provide what the public wants and do so in line with the same philosophies which have been so successful during these past 40 years."

Dictionary of Space Age Goes Into Second Edition

By JOHN FETLER
BOOK EDITOR

SPACE AGE DICTIONARY — Second Edition — By C. H. McLaughlin, Editor — Van Nostrand — $7.97 — the first edition of this dictionary by McLaughlin, who lives at Pine Road, Colorado Springs, went through three printings, of 15,000 copies, and currently he is working on a dictionary of the underwater world.

Faith 7 — flashing beacon — dealer's choice — off the peg — diglyceride — white paint patch study — split count-down — are not science fiction terms, but space age terms. They are but a few of the many new terms which arose directly from Major Gordon Cooper's epic flight.

The Space Age Dictionary supplies concise, lucid and simplified definitions of words used in the space race, and of all the important concepts in the constantly-developing field of rockets, missiles, launch vehicles, satellites and space flight.

Other topics, vital to travel through interplanetary space such as relativity and time dilation, propulsion systems and propellants, the Van Allen radiation belt and its effects, weightlessness, and re-entry into the atmosphere are described in detail.

Consistent with this informational level are the specially-prepared illustrations depicting flight paths of rockets, orbits of satellites, principles of guidance and tracking systems, and other subjects that have previously been treated technically. There are also more than 35 excellent views of the latest and most significant space vehicles.

Extensively revised and expanded, this edition presents full, chronological, statistical information on the flights of the world's pioneer astronauts, including the historical 22-orbit flight of Project Mercury Astronaut L. Gordon Cooper Jr. New tables give the specific facts on all major NASA launchings since 1958, and a complete report on the condition and life expectancy of all man-made satellites now orbiting the earth.

This book is admirably designed for a better understanding of space age technology and the developments making today's headlines. There are quite a few space age buffs around the country now, in addition to those who are seriously interested in the field, and to all of them this book is a "must" on the library shelf, for casual reading, as well as for reference.

Glowing Business Profits Sparks Hustling Economy

By ROGER LANE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A rich copper discovery, glowing business profit reports and new feats by the hustling auto industry sparked the fast-stepping economy during the week.

Climbs in the Gross National Product, nonfarm jobs and construction spending in recent periods reinforced general optimism.

President Johnson announced that the gross product, which measures the over-all output of goods and services, rose to an annual rate of $608.5 billion in the first quarter, up $8.5 billion from the preceding quarter.

The accompanying job gains, he said, showed "real progress in cutting down unemployment," now at a rate of 5.4 per cent.

The Commerce Department said later that an $8.1-billion jump in consumer spending in January-March powered the GNP rise.

Tempering encouraging developments to business were the possibility of a railroad strike and a presidential admonition against increasing prices.

"American business does not need higher price levels to assure continued growth and profits," Johnson said, and cited what he described as steady costs, strong markets and recent federal tax cut benefits.

Corporate profits, climbing steadily since a bottoming out in the early 1961, hit an annual pace of $28.7 billion in October-December of 1963, up nearly 50 per cent in three years.

The President coupled his appraisal of progress in the economy with word that he was bearing down heavily to dispel a menace to its continuation, the threat of a nationwide railroad strike.

Steel production, climbing steadily since the first of the year, leveled off on a very high plane, an annual output rate of 128 million tons, and retail sales dipped 1 per cent in March to $21.1 billion. Neither was regarded as a very disturbing development.

The minerals discovery in Ontario, Canada, near Timmins, about 350 miles northwest of Toronto, finally was confirmed by Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. after persisting and rising reports.

Texas Gulf, holding about 70 per cent of mineral rights in Kidd Township, where the discovery was made, said preliminary data indicated copper, zinc and silver ore reserves of more than 25 million tons.

Some of the rich ore lay only 20 or 25 feet below ground, it was reported, promising relatively easy and cheap recovery by the open pit method of mining.

The auto picture, long lustrous, was brightened by a weekly production high for 1964, and all-time record sales in the first 10 days of April.

The early April dealer sales mark was 4 per cent ahead of a year ago and eclipsed the comparable 1955 peak performance.

A rapidly swelling flow of earnings reports on the January-March quarter was clogged with statements of profit gains. Aluminum Co. of America said profits were up 15 per cent. International Business Machines showed a 50 per cent gain, Monsanto Chemical a rise of over 85 per cent, General Telephone ⅞ Telegraph a jump of about 15 per cent.

Stock Market Climbs To New Average Records

By ED MORSE
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock stock market this week climbed to new records in the popular averages amid increasing signs of speculative activity.

One stock, Texas Gulf Sulphur, dominated trading a good deal of the time, ran up weekly volume of more than a million shares and scored a net gain of 10⅛ at 40¼.

The flurry was-touched off by Texas Gulf's discovery of a rich lode of copper, silver and zinc, near Timmins, Ontario. The discovery also brought gains to Barber Oil, which owns 300,000 shares of Texas Gulf, and to Curtis Publishing, which owns land in the vicinity.

Most of the week the general tenor on the Big Board was one of caution, even as the averages marched to new highs day after day.

The rising speculative spirit, however, was illustrated by activity in some lower-priced issues, such as Transitron and Erie-Lackawanna on the Big Board.

On the Big Board gainers outnumbered losers by 690 to 655 of the 1,524 issues traded. Only on Friday did plus signs outnumber minus signs.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average this week rose 5.58 to 827.33. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks rose 2.8 to 306.7, for its third straight weekly advance. Volume was 27,063,960 shares compared with 27,468,360 the week before.

The background to the market remained encouraging despite doubt about a possible rail strike. Industrial production for March was reported at a record for the sixth straight month. Industrial production and corporate profits rode high.

The five most active issues this week on the New York Stock Exchange were:

Texas Gulf Sulphur, up 10⅛ at 40¼ on 1,190,600 shares; Chrysler, up ¾ at 48¾; Transitron, up ¾ at 7¾; Radio Corp., off 1⅝ at 34¼; and Pan American World Airways, off 1⅜ at 76⅞.

The five most active issues this week on the American Stock Exchange were:

Seaboard World Airlines, off ⅞ at 7¾ on 248,800 shares; Dynalectron, up ⅝ at 4c; Kin-Ark Oil, up ⅜ at 8¼; Syntex, off 7⅜ at 76; and Tel-A-Sign, up 2¼ at 3½.

TOMATO TOBACCO

BELGRADE (AP) — Bulgaria has produced a non-nicotine tobacco grown on the roots of tomato plants, the Yugoslav magazine "Arena" reports.

Bulgarian scientists said they found that the nicotine is produced in the roots of tobacco plants. So they experimented with grafting tobacco plants on tomato roots. The result, "Arena" said, was a smoke that tastes like tobacco but has no nicotine.

Educational Resources Guidepost for Litton

"A company like Litton Industries takes a very hard look at any area before it ever considers seriously a move into it—either to build a new facility, or in acquiring an existing facility in which it expects to enlarge its operations," Barney Oldfield of Litton's corporate public relations department, former chief of information for North American Air Defense Command with headquarters here, told Nebraska newspapermen Friday night.

"One of the most important things," Oldfield told the Nebraska Press Assn. at its annual meeting at the Sheraton Fontenelle Hotel in Omaha, "is whether we will be neighbors with a nearby highly specialized mental production line—colleges and universities feeding out an annual supply of technologically suited and oriented people—on which a company can depend for personnel who like to live in a specific area, who understand it, and who will produce in that area for the total Litton complex."

Litton late last year acquired Clifton Precision Products Co., which operates a plant here.

Oldfield said that "insofar as the government agencies like NASA are concerned, they are hard up against a requirement for a nearby science-industry-university-technology oriented community or group of them."

Oldfield said that for NASA's project electronics research center, a $50 million establishment, there were more than 50 presentations by communities seeking its location. The facility will employ at least 2,000.

Industry of this kind," he said, "has long ago learned that where creative work is involved, location near brain capacity—say, near a good graduate school of engineering and science — is for more important than being spotted adjacent to potential factory labor forces, transportation, raw materials or even markets.

"Not only do universities train people and give them important work disciplines which is an important raw material for greasing the wheels of growth industries, universities are also idea sources of their own. And from university and college faculties can come easily accessible panels of experts for industry consultant roles—if such schools put sufficient emphasis and attraction out to get and retain such people."

Oldfield said that "the moon now seems to offer nothing of any value, but who knows what a speaker to the sunny-side-of-the-moon press association will be saying 100 years from now about those pioneers who substituted space capsule for conestoga wagon and streaked to the moon in the last half of the 20th century? . . . We would be profligate indeed if we subscribe to the divine origin of the universe and then think God hung the moon out there is an inspiration only for rock and roll tunes."

Oldfield cited what youngsters of today are thinking as expressed in letters they write to the President and to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in Washington and Houston, the home of the astronauts and the Manned Spacecraft Center.

"A 7-year-old girl in Denver writes," he said. "'I love to write letters to you people at NASA because I get such interesting answers.' She is hungry for information, and NASA does not say, 'Don't bother me, honey, go back and play with your dolls.'

"A boy in Brooklyn sent in a sketch of a rocket, and said: 'I hope you will build this rocket. I know it will work although I know nothing about rockets or engines, but I have thought a great deal about it.' In other words, his thinking is stimulated, it needs now to be guided and rewarded.

"In Battle Creek, Mich., two 8-year-old-boys show wisdom beyond their years about the how to get along in an election year when budgets must be cut.

"'We want to know about rockets and fuels,' they wrote, 'and will use as little as possible. We will build our rocket with a parachute in case it falls back. You see, ours is a cut-rate project.' I don't know whether this would reassure the astronaut who might have to ride in it or not, but if these two keep on, they will undoubtedly be senators one day.

"And then there was a whole class that wrote NASA this letter: 'We have a music teacher named Miss Mahoney, and we would like to have you consider her as a volunteer when you send a rocket to the moon.' To this letter was added this interesting post script: 'Miss Mahoney does not know we have volunteered for her.'

"So, you see, the money is already on the moon as a solution to almost everything for young people. This is probably nowhere more touchingly illustrated than in a letter from a boy in Oil City, Pa., who wrote: 'I hear you are looking for astronauts. I hereby suggest by baby brother.'"

Oldfield said NASA has one letter from a Chattanooga housewife who says: "My husband has been an alcoholic for seven years, and he is well trained for the ordeal of being an astronaut. He gets his bottles and goes into orbit every Friday night after work. He usually achieves re-entry the following Monday morning with the help of the police department!"

Oldfield said that as farfetched as the letters may sound he had offered them as a means of "keeping the moon on your minds."

"Along with it are the needs in the vast tail-piece of education, in odd endeavors and enterprises and it will call for from people mentally and specifically prepared to make the moon landing possible."

Socony Gift To Benefit State Colleges

Four private colleges in Colorado will benefit from Socony Mobil's investment of $175,500 in higher education through the Associated College of Colorado. Receipt of the gift, of which Colorado's share is $1,150, was announced by Dr. Lloyd E. Worner, president of the association.

The colleges in Colorado which will share in Socony's grant are: Colorado College, Colorado Springs; Colorado Woman's College, Loretto Heights College and Regis College, all of Denver.

The Associated College of Colorado is one of the state and regional associations of independent colleges represented nationally by the Independent College Funds of America, Inc., headquartered in New York City.

Socony Mobil's aid to education program for the current academic year amounts to $817,000 and includes scholarships, fellowships and direct grants to selected institutions.

Carson Theater To Be Finished This Summer

A new look and improved facilities will soon be ready when rehabilitation of the Entertainment Workshop Theater of Ft. Carson is completed. The project is expected to be completed during the summer.

Work on the theater started in October as a do-it-yourself project, according to Miss June A. Adams, entertainment director. Volunteers have done carpenter, stage lighting and painting jobs during off duty hours for 4½ months.

Volunteers doing the work in their spare time are Ed Dibeler, Warren Sasso, Charles Swenson, James Hardin, James Carson, all of 303d ASA, and Robert Melson of A Company, 1st Battalion, 61st Infantry as well as assisstance from Paul King and the Post Engineers.

The work is almost complete except for some painting and installation of a counter weight system of rigging. Involved is a new lighting system for the stage, rehabilitation of the stage and remodeling and painting of most of the building at the corner of Prussman and Specker.

The lighting system includes pre-set panel lighting with 36 circuits connecting 94 lights. Lights can be pre-set in various sequences for use during presentations.

The old panel was moved from the stage to a second floor area at the rear of the 222-seat auditorium. It was reworked and combined with new electrical equipment. Dibeler designed and installed the panel.

Groups currently using the theater are the newly formed 3d Brigade Chorus and the ARADCOM Chorus. Small combos and individual musicians and performers also use the building for rehearsals.

Formerly a movie theater, the auditorium was designed to seat 600 patrons. Hoever, in 1954 Special Services converted it to an entertainment workshop. Seats were removed in the rear and rooms added. The upstairs portion includes a small practice room, art room, costume room, prop and light room. The downstairs has a lobby-lounge, rehearsal room, office, auditorium and stage with dressing rooms.

Units on post may check out instruments, costumes, music, etc. from the workshop.

The Entertainment section brings in off-post shows regularly from troop entertainment. Shows sponsored each month are the JWB-USO and Bowen's Fanfare Variety Shows from Denver. Independent groups are also brought in to appear at the service clubs.

Next major program will be the Ink Spots appearing at the Cheyenne Service Club Wednesday. In the past two years Louis Armstrong, Les Elgart, Les Brown and Hank Thompson have appeared on post sponsored by Entertainment Section.

Ent Fencers Win Colorado Saber Title

The Colorado State Sabre Championships were held in Boulder, Apr. 12 and Ent Air Force Base's team came home the victors. The team of John Sotomayor, Loring B. Smith and Ed Weathers represented Ent at the State Sabre Championship. Ent's sabremen defeated four teams; Colorado University, Colorado Fencing Club's "A" and "B" teams and Martin Aviation's team.

Suffering three losses, the Ent Sabremen rallied to beat their first opponent, Colorado University 5-4. In their second encounter, the Sabremen outpointed Colorado Fencing Club "B" team, 8-1, and then accomplished another win by defeating the "A" team. Ent then blanked Martin Aviation 9-0 for final victory and the State Championship.

John Sotomayer, team captain, led Ent with 12 wins. Loring Smith had 9 wins and Ed Weathers copped 8. They won a total of 28 out of a possible 36 points.

By taking the state championship Ent's team will now go to the U.S. Nationals.

They also participated in the First Grand International Fencing Tournament in Tucson, Ariz., starting Friday.

Teams from Canada, Mexico and United States are expected to be there.

Pre-Natal Care Life Saving Should Begin in Girlhood

By THE COLORADO MEDICAL SOCIETY

Today, 98.9 per cent of Colorado babies are born in hospitals under conditions which provide professional care for mother and baby; infant and maternal mortality rates are at the lowest points in history.

Further gains could be won in the protection of the lives of babies and mothers if the degree of pre-hospital, pre-natal care could be stepped up. The value of regular, protective, preventive pre-natal care is being increasingly recognized, but the number of women who take advantage of it varies widely.

The extent of pre-natal care is close to 100 per cent these days in the upper economic, social and educational classes. It drops to 30 per cent or less in some groups at low economic and educational levels. Tragically, but hardly surprisingly, the infant mortality is four times greater in the second group, and maternal mortality is higher, though somewhat less sharply so.

Obviously, there are gains to be won. And they center on the education of mothers-to-be to take advantage of the protection which is readily available to them.

Perhaps what is needed is a Future Mothers of America Club movement. Most little girls are going to grow up to be mothers. Yet sometimes it seems we educate and train them for everything under the sun but the profession they are most likely to pursue.

Ideally, pre-natal care should begin about the time of adolescence so that a girl will mature into her child-bearing years in good health, nutritionally sound, and physically, mentally and psychologically prepared for motherhood.

The objective of good pre-natal care is to pick up, as early as possible, any health condition in the mother-to-be which might frustrate or make more difficult or hazardous a natural pregnancy. This sort of protection could well begin in the adolescent years.

If it does not start then, it certainly should begin when a woman marries. A pre-marital examination is important for more things than the routine blood test required by law. After the marriage, a young bride, prospectively a mother in the near future, should be under the regular care of her physician.

Her diet and health before pregnancy begins can be very important to her future baby. Any trouble in her genito-urinary tract should be taken care of. Up to 6 per cent of women, for example, carry minor urinary tract infections which produce very little in the way of symptoms but which can contribute to premature labor.

At minimum, pre-natal care should begin as soon as a woman is pregnant or suspects that she is. There's still time then to build up her health, improve and supervise her diet, correct physical deficiencies or conditions and take up a protective guard over the maturing baby in her womb.

Old Doc Experience advises:

1. Every woman should have good and regular pre-natal care. If she can begin it long before she marries, she will be away ahead of the game for herself and for her future babies.

2. Pre-natal care is available at hospitals and welfare clinics for women who cannot afford a private physician. More pre-natal clinics are needed, and perhaps they should be or could be combined with well-baby clinics, which have had a wide acceptance.

3. Although conditions may be discovered which require active treatment, pre-natal care is principally preventive and protective. Pregnancy is a perfectly natural process. A pregnant woman is not sick. Many report, in fact, that they never felt better in their lives. The efforts of the doctor will center on keeping the woman and her maturing baby healthy during a time when each day brings changes to her body and the baby.

4. It is important that the checkups occur regularly at intervals specified by the doctor. Ordinarily, the time between appointments will shorten as the arrival date approaches.

5. The doctor will be concerned about the mother's diet and general level of health. He may prescribe vitamins or other nutritional aids. Some anemia of pregnancy is expected, but it must be watched and controlled. Iron may be added to the diet or as a medicine. Calorie intake may be revised upward or downward.

6. Any metabolic disorders will be checked. Unrecognized diabetes, for example. Pregnancy can precipitate diabetes and result in a miscarriage.

7. Tests will be made. Blood counts, urinalyses, measurements of antibodies and blood pressure, or the Rh factor. Polio vaccine may be given because it has been found that pregnant women need this protection more than other women. The vaccine passes through the placenta and gives initial protection to the baby, too.

8. The pelvis will be examined and measured to insure that its size will permit delivery of a normal-sized baby. The measurements may indicate a need for later X-rays to observe the growth of the baby. There is a high correlation between mental retardation in the baby and difficult delivery.

9. During pregnancy, don't take tranquilizers, "happy" pills, mood-adjusters or any other medication not prescribed by the doctor. They can endanger an unborn child.

10. Except as may be prescribed by the doctor to determine size and progress of the baby, avoid abdominal X-rays or fluoroscopy. Be sure that any doctor or dentist who proposes X-ray knows you are pregnant or suspect you are.

11. Don't knowingly expose yourself during pregnancy to infectious disease, particularly German measles.

Division Defeats Aggressor in Exercise Run

The 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) defeated an imaginary aggressor in Field Training Exercise Red Diamond 2 Monday through Wednesday at Ft. Carson.

The exercise, which included both simulated and actual troop movements within the Carson reservation, was marked by dust clouds as the Red Devils trained for Exercise Desert Strike in May.

Flanked by simulated 4th Infantry and 2d Armored Divisions, the 5th faced an aggressor force from the west. The three divisions will be part of III Corps in the big southwestern maneuver.

The enemy had taken advantage of a pact allowing troops in Canada by a beachhead in California with the First Combined Aggressor Army. Aggressor elements had moved through the Rockies to attempt further penetration of the U.S. heartland.

Weather delayed their attempts to hold mountain passes at first. When they moved toward Ft. Carson from the southwest and northeast the division was combat-ready for the enemy.

The climax came on Wednesday when the division command post was knocked out by a mock nuclear attack and the alternate CP completed the problem.

First Brigade held Agony Hill and the escarpment near Ft. Carson's center. Third Brigade met an aggressor paradrop near Butts Army Air Field. Fifth Division Artillery supported with direct fire.

The 8,400 division troops in the field came from four infantry battalions; two mechanized infantry battalions; brigaed headquarters; Support Command units; aviation, engineer and signal battalions; military police, headquarters and administration companies.

Corps Commander To Visit Carson Monday

Lt. Gen. Harvey Fisher III, Corps Commander, is scheduled to visit Ft. Carson on Monday, with members of his general staff for a briefing on 5th Infantry Division (Mechanized) preparations for Exercise Desert Strike.

The 5th Division Red Devils will be part of III Corps in the desert exercise, May 17 to 30 in the southwest.

The general will arrive at 10 a.m., Monday, at Peterson Field and depart from there at 3 p.m.

While at Ft. Carson he will be briefed on division status relative to Exercise Desert Strike and review plans for the 100,000-man maneuver.

In the afternoon III Corps and 5th Divsion staff officers will review plans for their respective sections.

Heat the griddle while mixing the batter to make pancakes. To test, sprinkle drops of water on the griddle. If bubbles skitter around the heat is right.

Squeeze lemon juice on a garment stained with iron rust. Spread the garment in the sun before rinsing to facilitate removal of the stain.

Dust fuzzy leaves of African violets with a soft paint brush.

Dip bacon strips in cold water to help keep them flat while frying.

Put a rubber tip over the head of an iron hammer to make a handy rubber mallet.

Salt crisp green salads just before serving to prevent wilt of the greens.

Put a little beeswax on zippers to make them work more easily.

Add color to iced drinks with pieces of maraschino cherries forzen in ice cubes.

To remove grease spots from wallpaper run French chalk over the soiled spot and allow to remain overnight. Wipe off next morning.

Breakfast Is Important

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q — My daughter complains because she can't make her high school girls' basketball team. I tell her that's because she refuses to eat properly. She skips breakfast, won't drink milk and is always nibbling candy. Am I right?

A—Looks as if you could be. A recent survey of high school students in Florida shows that teen-aged girls who eat the most healthful foods perform best on physical fitness tests. The director of the Florida State Board of Health's Division of Nutrition divided 100 girls into two groups of 50, the girls who ate well-balanced meals in A group and those, like your daughter, who didn't, in B group. When standard physical fitness tests were given, every girl in the A group received a higher physical fitness rating than any of the girls in B group. The girls in B group, according to the director, had diets lacking mostly in milk, fresh fruits and dark and leafy vegetables. Your daughter may be interested in this report.

Q—Which fruit will give me the most vitamin C—orange juice, grapefruit, pineapple juice or cranberries?

A—Orange juice and grapefruit are your best bets for vitamin C. Pineapple juice has from 1-5 to ¼ the amount of vitamin C as oranges and grapefruit. Cranberries, as they are usually eaten in sauce, contain even less than pineapple juice.

REFUSES TO 'STOOP'

DENVER (UPI)—Lowell Rodgers, information director for the Colorado Farm Bureau, said Thursday he would not "stoop" to reply to charges leveled against his organization by the National Farmers Union. "It's strange to me that Farmers Union has so much time to degrade someone else's program," Rodgers said. An official of Farmers Union blasted the local Farm Bureau as having "no compassion for the poor and no concept of nationhood." He accused the Farm Bureau of attempting to turn consumers against farmers on the wheat-cotton bill.

Dear Heloise:

What do you do when the selvage on a bath towel becomes ragged? My bath towels are still in perfect condition except for this awful "edge' eyesore. —Budget

Dear Budget:

You will notice on some bath towels that one side has the selvage turned back and on some others, both sides are turned back and stitched with a machine. Some bathtowels have plain selvages on both sides with "no" stitching.

After my bath towels are a few years old, and "before" the selvage wears out completely, I fold it back one-forth of an inch (the selvage itself) and stitch it twice on my sewing machine. This makes the towel last much longer.

If your selvages are as ragged as you say, you can take the scissors and cut off that little selvage, then fold the towel back and stitch it with two rows of stitching on your sewing machine.

I find it best to use a "large" stitch when doing this type of work. I also use "mercerized" thread for "this" job.

If your bath towels are extremely ragged, like some of mine were, try cutting them into thirds and hemming all four sides with a little hem and double - stitching that. These make excellent kitchen towels. Far easier for mother and little kiddies than the usual type white kitchen towels. And just "what" child or husband" doesn't pick up your nice clean tea towel to wipe their hand? —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

About this famous nylon net of yours which we all like so well . . .

I use it as part of my hair equipment!

Rectangular pieces make wonderful "end papers" when rolling your hair. The curls dry quickly too as the air circulates through the mesh. They also are easy to wash.

A large square or triangular piece of net holds the hair in place while under the drier! —Love You!

Dear Heloise:

This is a hint for new mothers when they are bottle feeding their babies.

Do they know there is an air hole (very, very small) in the side of some nipples?

If they will keep this hole clean with a toothpick or needle, they will have less trouble with the nipple collapsing! —Diana Athcer

Oh, Diana, thank you for passing along this hint. After checking with a pediatrician I found out that all nipples do not have this hole. But he suggested that any mother could take a warm needle and punch a tiny hole in the part of the nipple nearest the bottle, and that this would help prevent collapsing, too. Thank you a million, you sweet little mother. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

What will remove the tobacco stains caused from a dripping pipe on a man's white cotton shirt pocket? —Elsie Soft

If safe for the fabric, and be "sure to test" a small hidden spot first . . . apply rubbing alcohol on a washcloth and rub-a-dub-dub. Can bet that you will have success . . . —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Have you ever been using your meat grinder and found you had too much juice in the ground-up product? Well, this morning I came upon a good idea: Just take your roasting "baster" to take up the "excess" juices. —Mrs. W. Hennings

Girl News Hawk Scoops Her Daddy

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Twelve-year-old Emma Hicks was on the scene where the news broke and she made the most of it.

"I think she pulled a fast one on me," said her father, the Rev. John J. Hicks.

The minister is president of the St. Louis Board of Education.

A big snow had fallen overnight in the city, and the question was "should the public schools be closed?"

The Rev. Mr. Hicks got on the telephone and started canvassing board members. On the last call, he announced to Emma that she didn't have to get ready for school, that board members cancelled classes for the day.

'Mods' of London Adapt American Flapper Ways

By MARIS ROSS
United Press International

LONDON (UPI)—In the 1920's it was the flapper. In Britain of the 1960's it's the "mod" (for modern).

The mod blossoms from Limehouse to Liverpool and beyond.

Like the flapper she tends to be flat-chested and hipless. But unlike the flapper who strove with her bobbed hair and beads to be chic the mod favors the haphazard appearance. She uses little or no cosmetics. Her hair is apt to be long and unstyled.

For the flapper's "French" heels and daringly bare legs the mod substitutes black or white stockings and high boots. Shapeless sweaters and straight skirts have replaced the shapeless shift of the flapper. There's no hat. The flapper wore a cloche.

Legend, fed by the stories of Scott Fitzgerald, has it the flapper cared for nothing but fun, speakeasy gin and dancing the Charleston.

If that's true, the mod is a different type of girl. She likes her fun, wiggles when she dances, sips a moderate gin and tonic and prefers that a beau have a motorcycle or fast car.

But the mods have a serious side, too. Without bothering to think whether or not they are equal to men, they expect to do the same jobs as men for the same money.

Many are casual about "romance." Take Cilla Black, 21, a pop singer from Liverpool, who sometimes is called "The Female Beatle." She went to the top of the English Hit Parade with her version of "Anyone Who Had a Heart."

Although the song is romantic, Cilla, a docker's daughter, said.

"I don't bother with boy friends. I am working with boys all day, so it's a change to get away by myself in the evenings."

But if a mod does like a boy, she is not coy or backward about it.

She is frank about sex, has no illusions about life, and is busy getting the most out of it — and that includes having a job.

Sometimes they try all sorts of jobs. Take Meriel Douglas-Home, daughter of Prime Minister Alec Douglas-Home. At 24, she might be rated an ex-mod.

In her mod days Meriel went to art school, was a restaurant waitress, and worked in a book shop and a furniture shop.

She plays the guitar and still looks very much one of the new girls with long blonde hair and has a fancy for shiny plastic raincoats.

Such coats are "kinky" or, as a mod would not say—with it!

Texas Claims Another 'First'

DENISON, Tex. (UPI) — The ice cream soda was invented in 1873 in this North Texas town, local residents claim.

The story goes that J. A. Euper, who operated the only non-alcoholic oasis in the Oklahoma border town then, was experimenting with his new $800 soda fountain made of fancy Italian marble.

Accidentally, he squirted carbonated water over a dish of ice cream. Trying to salvage the loss, he added some chocolate syup and served it to a customer.

Best Students Are Neatly Dressed, Educator Says

By WALTER LOGAN
United Press International

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI) — Baltimore Polytechnic Institute is one of those advanced high schools where students study calculus and analytic chemistry in their senior year, follow the six words of Dr. Wilmer Dehuff and wear neckties all the time.

The six words are "freedom, responsibility, perseverance, achievement" and "goodness and mercy." Dehuff, who admits he is "pushing 76", decided on the last two one night while reading the 23rd Psalm. To hese he added the credo that the best students are neatly dressed.

Dehuff, who was the principal at Poly for 37 years, smokes a pipe, cigars and filter cigarettes—"I'm too old for it to make much difference." But he said he found his No. 1 students not only dress neatly but do not smoke.

For years he waged a successful campaign against untidy dress and smoking and once appeared in the auditorium, pulled pipe, cigars and cigarettes out of his pockets, laid them on the lectern and asked how many students smoked. When several raised their hands he lectured them on the evils thereof.

Dehuff said he was "fired" si years ago although actually he reached the age of compulsory retirement. Since then he has served as acting president of Baltimore University while the new principal of Poly, Claude A. Burkert, 55, a Poly graduate who succeeded him in 1958, carries on the neat dress campaign Dehuff pioneered.

The school was founded in 1883 as the first manual training school in the United States. City authorities were about to close it in 1897 but it was saved by a Naval Academy graduate, Lt. William R. King, who made it into one of the best in the country with the emphasis on scholarship.

"I took over the job in 1921 and decided to make good citizens as well as good scholars," Dehuff said.

From the beginning he instilled in the all male student body the idea that a good student was one who dressed neatly. Wearing a necktie is not compulsory but few if any students fail to wear one. If one was tieless and met Dehuff in the hall he self-consciously covered his neck with his hand. They still do at Burkert.

Dehuff said that once when he and his wife had just returned from a vacation she sent him—in a sports shirt—to the supermarket to pick up a few things. "One of the Poly boys saw me and waved his tie reprovingly," he said.

"I always talked about good citizenship," he said. "From adolescence on, neat dress is important, and I cannot conceive of good dress without neckties. I find it is my experience that neat dress and scholarship go hand and hand."

Dehuff's findings made such impact around the country that many schools have made necktie wearing compulsory, a campaign abetted, of course, by the Men's Tie Foundation, an educative arm of the entire tie industry.

A tour of the school appeared to prove Dehuff's point. Everybody appeared neatly dressed, usually in white shirts and slacks, and out of 2,300 students only one or two were without ties. A. Harvey Schreter, Vice President of A. Schreter & Sons, Inc., of Baltimore — which makes ties—was so impressed he contributed on the spot to the school's scholarship fund.

Put one of these carpets on your floor and watch it bring out the glowing beauty of your Early American pieces . . . cherry, birch, pine or mahogany. 13 SUPERB NEW SHADES:

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

She Learned a Lesson

DEAR ABBY: Over the past five years I have done so many favors for my neighbor I can't count them. I have kept her children weekends while she went on trips with her husband. I've been a free taxi service for her because she had no car. I've given her at least a dozen home permanents, and I have never asked her for one favor until yesterday. She sews well, so I asked her if she would help me make some kitchen curtains. I thought she would be glad at the chance to repay me for some of my favors. She said she would, for 300 TRADING STAMPS! I went right out and bought some curtains. What do you think of that? —FLABBERGASTED

DEAR FLABBERGASTED: I think it was appropriately "curtains" for your friendship. Next time you do a friend a favor, don't assume it puts her in your debt, and you won't be flabbergasted.

DEAR ABBY: For the past two weeks a man has been calling my home. As soon as he hears my voice, he starts with a string of filthy questions. I hang up on him. Now when my phone rings I can tell that someone is on the other end, but he never says anything. He just ties up my line. Should I report this to the police, or to the telephone company? —NOT LOOKING FOR TROUBLE

DEAR NOT LOOKING: The next time he calls, send someone quickly to the neighbors and have them report it to both the telephone company and the police. If this can be done while he is still on your line, the call can be traced.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is the obvious favoritism shown for our first-born by his paternal grandmother. We lived with my in-laws when he was born, and my husband's mother went completely overboard about the child. When our second baby came along, Grandma was so partial to the first that we had to be constantly on our guard so the little one would not be hurt. It's not my imagination, Abby, everybody notices it, and many have commented. She'll go all out for gifts for the big one, and gives the little one some cheap little trinket. I am mostly interested in having both children love their Grandma. Should I mention it to her? If so, how should I phrase it? —NAMELESS, NATURALLY

DEAR NAMELESS: Ask your husband to tell his mother what she is doing, perhaps unwittingly. YOU keep out of it. Eventually the children will make their own evaluation, on their own terms and in their own way.

DEAR ABBY: What makes a pastor think he can stand in the pulpit and insult a member of his parish week after week, and get away with it? I have sat there, fighting back the tears while he has aimed his remarks directly to me and to me alone. He has done everything except mention my name. I am getting tired of this. What do you suggest? —INSULTED

DEAR INSULTED: There is an old saying, "If the shoe fits —wear it." Too many shoes fit. Perhaps you should do a little soul-searching.

Get it off your chest. For a personal unpublished reply write to ABBY, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif. Enclose a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

If a minimuin amount of water is used in simmering veal, you'll have a stock that will jell and be extra flavorsome. The hot stock may be poured over the sliced meat and refrigerated until it is set. Serve the jellied veal with a salad for a Sunday night buffet.

No Tension Here

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Theresa A. Morse is an adventurous cook and an amazingly at-ease hostess. Her newest book, "Never In the Kitchen When Company Arrives," explains her know - how in a way to make every woman send out invitations to a dinner party and face the event with enthusiasm.

Believing that hospitality may be the last haven of human sanity and happiness, Mrs. Morse demonstrates in her crisply written book how to plan and prepare wonderful food that will require no last-minute fuss after the guests have arrived. Her many recipes and menus point the way to delightful parties without tensions.

Try this dinner from "Never In the Kitchen When Company Arrives:" Roast Beef Louis, Roast Potatoes, Eggplant Clementina, Cucumbers in Sour Cream, Frosted Mocha Cake, Coffee.

Roast Beef Louis

Standing rib roast (first 3 ribs)

Salt and fresh-ground pepper

Seasoned salt

Worcestershire sauce

½ bottle of catsup

3 onions, sliced

Oven thermometer

500 degree oven (to start)

Remove beef from refrigerator two hours before roasting. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and seasoned salt. Sprinkle with Worcestershire sauce, then shake catsup over entire roast. Spear slices of onion to the fat with toothpicks. Insert thermometer and be careful that it does not touch bone. Place in preheated very hot oven (500 degrees) for 25 minutes, then reduce heat to 325 degrees for the remainder of the time. Roast until thermometer registers rare, medium or well done—whichever you prefer. Because of the high temperature at the beginning, meat roasts quickly. For rare, it takes about 1 hour and 45 minutes—but trust only your thermometer! Cook enough ahead so that roast can rest on warm platter, beneath aluminum foil, at least half an hour before serving.

Manila Bay's Pirates Are Modern Blackbeards

By FRANCISCO ROSALES

United Press International

MANILA (UPI) — Philippine police and civilian authorities have formed task forces to stamp out piracy in Manila Bay.

The piracy problem came into national focus when some so-called "bay pirates" pounced on a boat carrying constabulary soldiers disguised as fishermen two miles off nearby Cavite City.

These are the same bay waters where Commodore George Armada in 1898 and Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur pledged, "I shall return."

Four pirates, armed with pistols and carbines, were killed in the 40-minute gunbattle.

The dawn encounter took place just after the pirates stripped two fishing boats of an inboard motor, fishing lamps and the fishermen's catch.

After robbing their second victim, the pirates turned on a third boat, not knowing that the "fishermen" were soldiers.

Questionings of captured pirates disclosed that most of these modern-day blackbeards are from the city's slum districts.

Their area of operation extends from Batangas Province north to Bataan Peninsula, which border on Manila Bay.

Lt. Col. Diosdado Garcia, constabulary commander of Pampanga Province, said the pirates not only prey on fishermen, but occasionally raid coastal villages.

The pirates' method, according to Garcia, shows they have their own intelligence network. They know when fishpond owners are harvesting a heavy "bangus" (milkfish) crop for sale in Manila and suburbs and oout to Manila, he said.

Garcia said the pirates pounce on the milkfish motorboats, using submachine guns to terrorize fishpond owners and crew members. They impound the tmembers. They impound the boat, sell the fish and then steal the marine engine for resale in Manila, he said.

Pirates also are blamed for pilferages at Manila's south harbor where foreign ships unload their mercrandise.

The task forces, composed of constabulary soldiers and policemen from coastal towns, patrol the shorelines aboard motorized bancas (native boats).

Manila newspapers have urged intensified patrolling of the bay area.

Unless such action is taken, the Philippines Herald said, "Manila Bay will continue to be virtually an exclusive poaching preserve of pirates, smugglers and other lawless elements."

Stanford Alums Rated Incredible

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — The alumni magazine of Stanford University has surveyed its readers and decided that they are "incredible."

The editors of the Stanford Review base this praise on such findings as:

—Only 9 per cent of the Stanford alumni polled do not use credit cards.

—Twenty-five per cent have incomes of $25,000 or more.

—More than 30 per cent are planning trips to Europe.

In an article entitled "Our Incredible Stanford Alumni," editor Dan Endsley said the average Stanford man "works at a professional or managerial job that pays him more than $16,000 a year but leaves him lots of time for travel and golf."

Furthermore, he "lives in a home worth $35,000 which is loaded with gadgets, and he is hopelessly hooked with credit cards."

Endsley said 1,696 alumni responded to the questionnaire.

Among other findings:

—More than 85 per cent have outdoor grills.

—Eight per cent own their own airplanes.

—Twelve per cent have four or more children.

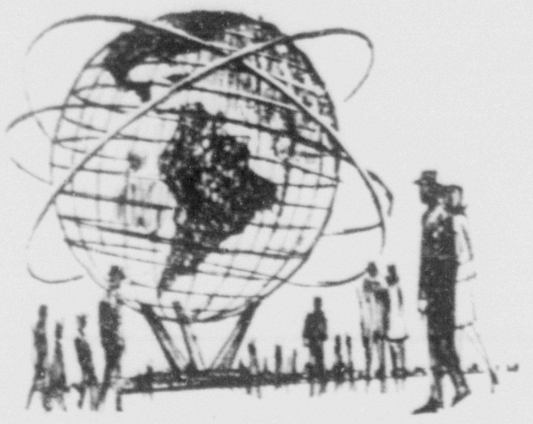
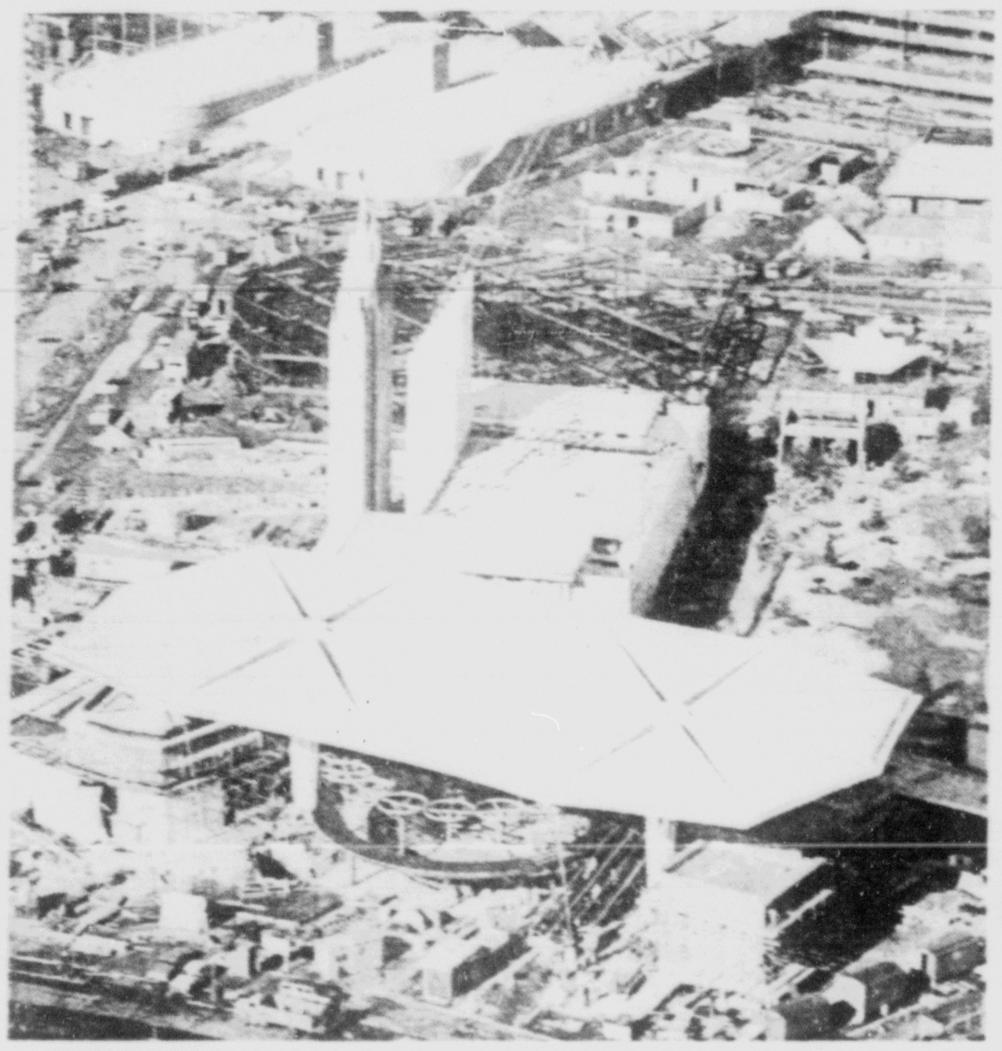
New York World's Fair

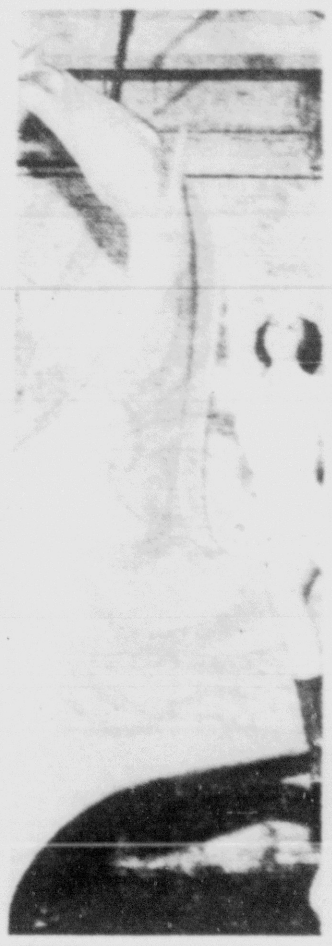


"Come to the fair!" New York beckons beginning April 22, when the gates open for the two-season run of the '64-'65 New York World's Fair. Grounds will be dominated by the 12-story-tall Unisphere, largest representation of earth ever constructed and symbol of the fair's theme, "Peace Through Understanding." The 646-acre area in Flushing Meadow Park, Queens borough, New York City, will offer glimpses of the future, fun, fantasy and food with international accents to upward of an estimated 70 million fair-goers during its run. Tickets for adults will cost $2; for children, $1.

ENTRANCED — Lisa Silhanek, 4, is entranced by Hawaiian garden, New York flower show winner, which has been transplanted to the fair—one of numerous exhibits for nature lovers among the visitors.

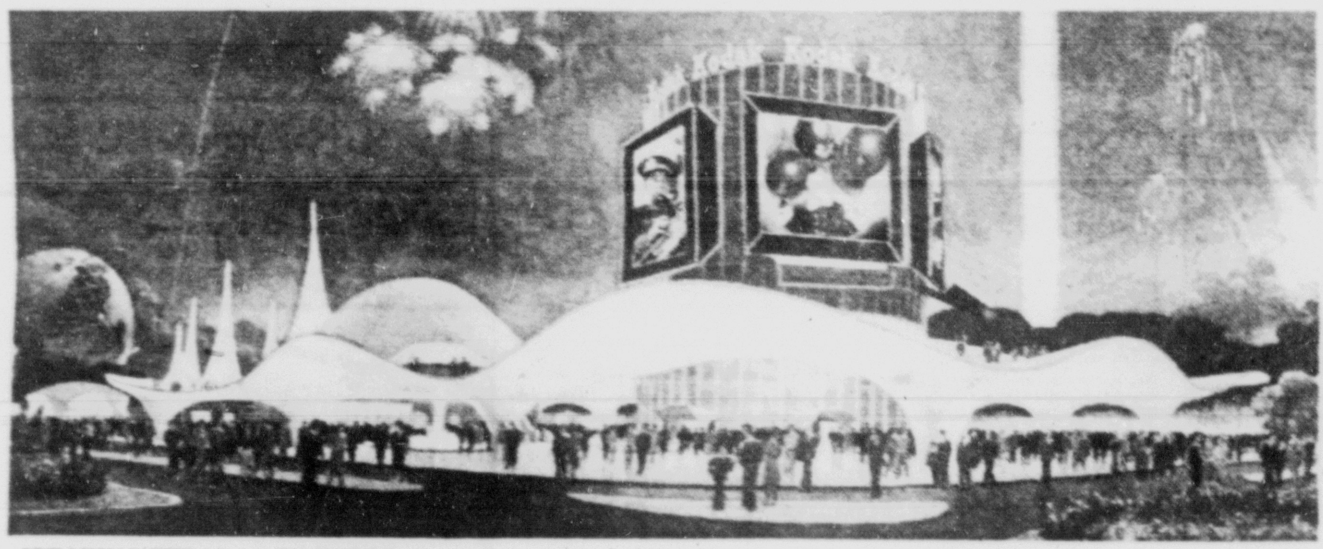


"COME TO THE FAIR"—First contact with the never-never land of a world's fair will be made by rail, subway, expressway, bus and auto travelers at main entrance, left, above, to the New York World's Fair. Spires, center left, rise from replica of the Mormon Tabernacle and, foreground, is the Festival of Gas pavilion. Elsewhere in the grounds, a heliport serves visitors brought to the big show by copter.

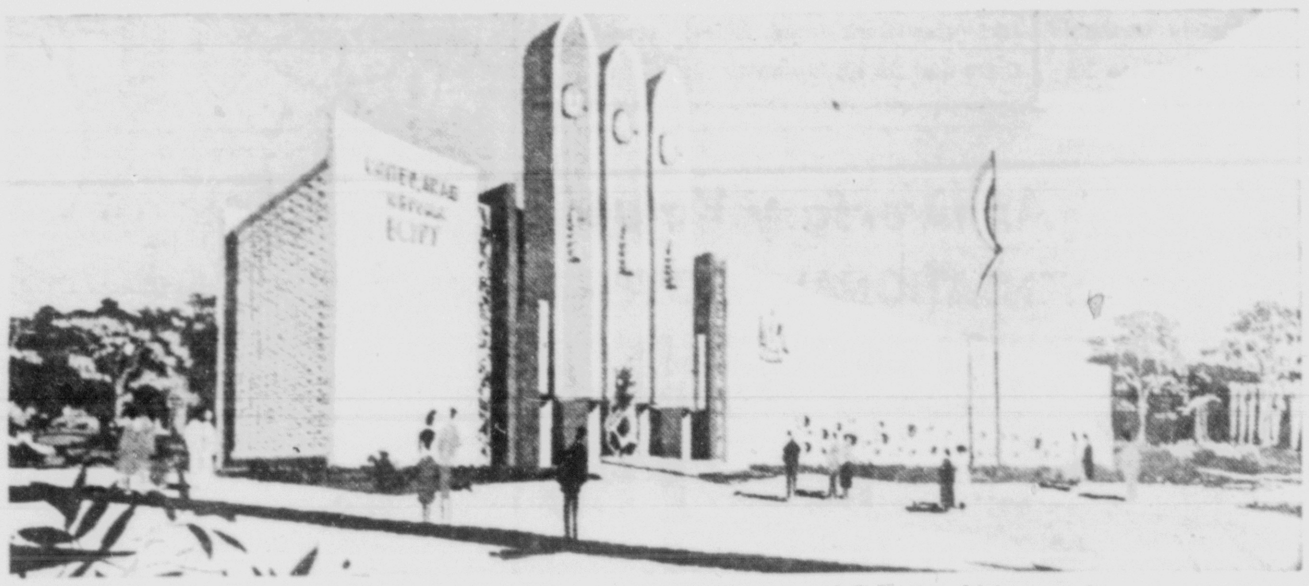


MIDWAY MEMORIES — There won't be a carnival-type midway at the New York World's Fair, but six 10-foot-tall carousel steeds of glass fiber will prance their way through the two-year fair atop the Festival of Gas pavilion. Pretty model is Ingrid Brameyer.

"PEACE THROUGH UNDERSTANDING CORPS"—Essence of a world's fair is youth—it is live with promise, and intended for the young in heart of all ages. Helga Schiersmann, 22, of Germany, left, and Jasmin Milagros Asprillera, 20, of the Philippines are among 10 young people from abroad who serve as hosts with 20 youthful Americans at the Golden Rondell, the Johnson's Wax pavilion. The 10 visitors are here through co-operation with Experiment in Living, of Putney, Vt., a nonprofit organization specializing in a worldwide student exchange program.



SPEAKING THROUGH PICTURES—Five of the world's largest color prints—each 30x36 feet—top the Eastman Kodak pavilion at the fair. Scenes will be changed every four weeks. The free-form building, among the top-10 industrial exhibits in size, features see-and-do exhibits for visitors, and special facilities for picture-taking. New 70-mm projection techniques promise unique viewing experiences in the pavilion's circular theater.



EGYPT COMES TO THE FAIR—Treasures tracing some 5,000 years of Egyptian history—a trove never seen before outside Egypt—is the featured attraction at the United Arab Republic pavilion. The 11,000 square feet of exhibition space in the UAR building gives room for a scale model of the Aswan High Dam now under construction, and replica of the Abu Simbel monuments—temples of Ramases II and his queen, Nefertari, now being relocated to save them from back-up waters of the dam. The Egyptian pavilion is but one of some 40 exhibitions from countries representing Latin America, Europe, Asia and Africa.

TOUCH OF NOSTALGIA—Those who yearn for the good, old days can turn their eyes from the almost endless fair projections into the future, and drink in the nostalgic atmosphere of a New York street scene right out of 1904. Featuring a tavern and shops of the time, and a typical old-fashioned bandstand, it is sponsored by Rheingold.

St. Mary's High School News

By TONI CINA

Sister Mary Aline S. L. attended the Catholic Parent-Teachers League meeting in Denver on Thursday. Sister was accompanied by Mrs. Robert Luster, Mrs. Claude Forde, Mrs. Walter Klien, and Mrs. Vernon Rottman.

Six junior boys went to the Catholic Student Mission Crusade meet in Denver on Sunday. Dan Gleeson, Mel Perry, Jerry Knauf, Jerry Shea, Roy Whiteaker, and Kevin Ryan took part in various discussions and panels.

The school newspaper, the Marylin, won second place in the Tuberculosis Association's 1963 school project in El Paso County. The entry, a picture page showing the causes and effects of emphysema, then went on to win another second in state competition and to receive a certificate of honor nationally.

The student mass on Friday will be sung for the soul of Pirate Coach Ed Murphy. April 20 is the first anniversary of his death.

This weekend members of the newspaper staff attended the ninth annual Journalism Days held at Colorado State University in Fort Collins. J-Days permits some 200 students in the Rocky Mountain Area to gain experience in high school publications with emphasis on workshop activities. There will also be guest speakers and panel discussions. Sister Aline, principal, and Sister Marie Noel, staff moderator, accompanied Heather Marriage, Jo Genco, Kathy Yates, Susan Yandura and Kathy Daly.

Fifty-five new members will be received into the St. Mary's Sodality of Our Lady today. The reception from 3 to 4 p.m. includes benediction and a talk by Father Robert Freudenstein from Cathedral Parish in Denver. Those being accepted are Kathy Cannon, Sheri Stratford, Debbie Abell, Leslie Addington, Kathy Aranda, Stephanie Brickell, Patricia Campbell, Alverna Bissonnette, Rita Carrigan, Mary Cunningham, Linda Davison, Stephanie Doeren, Patsy Drake, Dara Filler, Donna Force, Mary Foss, Carol Girado, Glenda Good, Mary Grantz, Marla Henderson, Linda Hilbert, Kathleen Kane, Jeanette LeBar, Marianne Leone, Cheryl Loetscher, Mary Miller, Delores Morris, Carolyn Pesch, Cynthia Renkel, Laura Schmal, Gwen Swendemann, Barbara Severson, Sheila Shea, Aleece Tresvan, Carol Weege, Linda Welsh, Maureen Wichita, Carol Wilson, Victor Lee, Tim Mayer, Mark Vandenberg, Reggie Washington, Dave Vaclav, Mark Ryan, Bill Bertschy, Steve Atwell, Mike Miles, John McCormick, Joe Yates, Andy Mungenast, and Dennis Shields.

The Student Council is sponsoring a Hootenanny Sunday night, April 26. Any group or individual may participate.

The Key Club and the Letterman's Club are planning to have a movie in the church basement during May. The shows will be announced later.

Deaths

ROME (AP)—Italian composer Luigi Ferrari Trecate, 79, who wrote a modern opera from the novel "Uncle Tom's Cabin," died Friday at his home in Rome. He had written symphonies, operas and chamber music since 1900, and in 1953 presented "La Capanna dello Zio Tom," which added to his renown.

MAZATLIAN, Mexico (AP) — Pianist Solon Robinson, 69, music professor at Smith College in Northampton, Mass., since 1923 and soloist with symphonies in Minneapolis, Detroit, Cleveland and Kansas City, died Thursday of injuries suffered in an auto accident April 5.

ROTTERDAM — Fokker, the Dutch airplane maker, is studying the methods of French firms.

Oilman W. L. Connelly Dies in Tulsa, Okla.

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — W. L. Connelly, who promoted million-dollar deals during oil's boom-or-bust era and lived to become a solid indsutry figure, is dead.

Connelly, who helped found the giant Sinclair Oil holdings, died Friday at a Tulsa hospital eight hours after he became ill at his Tulsa home. He was 91.

Connelly drilled his first well at age 22 in Wood County, Ohio in 1895, and eight years later joined the Kansas oil boom.

He became associated with Harry Sinclair, and worked for him for four months without pay, Connelly recalled later. It was the beginning of a 53-year association with the Sinclair firm.

Connelly was named head of all foreign Sinclair operations in 1928. He retired as chairman of the board of Sinclair Oil & Gas Co. in 1950, but remained active as special consultant.

AFA Introduces Change in Education Course

For the second time in its 10-year history the Air Force Academy has introduced a revolutionary change in service school education.

Known as the Majors for All Program, the change involves splitting the standard academic curriculum so every cadet will have the opportunity to earn a major within the present 146 semester hour curriculum.

The program will go into effect for the Class of 1966.

Areas of concentration under the new program will include: Basic Sciences, Engineering Sciences, Civil Engineering, International Affairs, National Security Affairs, Humanities, or Management.

Awarding of majors is not new at the Academy. As an integral part of the first, historic, curriculum innovation—the enrichment program—the Academy has been awarding majors since the first class graduated in 1959.

Now the Academy becomes the first service school to offer any graduate a major and the first to offer an engineering major accredited by the Engineering Council for Professional Development.

Beginning with the Class of 1966, the Academy will also become the first service school to give majors to all graduates.

The new program will not apply fully to the Class of 1965 (juniors) because the split in the curriculum which permits the necessary electives extends into the second class or junior year.

With the exception of Civil Engineering, all other majors included in the change were previously offered under the Enrichment Program to cadets who could qualify through validation of previous college courses, acceleration, and overload.

The number of cadets earning enrichment majors rose from 9.7 per cent in the Class of 1959, to over 50 per cent in the Class of 1963, leading Brig. Gen. Robert F. McDermott, the Dean of Faculty, to propose the change.

In adopting the Majors-for-All Program, the Academy has hopefully solved the dilemma of planning service academy curriculum—how to cram two educations, military and civilian, into the time normally required for one, the Dean said.

The new program has received the unanimous approval of the Academy's professors, Board of Visitors and Air Force Chief of Staff, Gen. Curtis E. LeMay.

Departmental enrichment majors will also be offered to cadets who are able to meet the challenge to advance academically as far and fast as they can.

In addition, cadets who can complete some graduate course work at the Academy may enter the cooperative Master's Degree Program. Those qualified can complete master's degree requirements in Astronautics at Purdue, International Affairs at Georgetown, and Management at UCLA, in seven months after graduation.

Academy Superintendent Maj. Gen. Robert H. Warren commended Gen. McDermott for the latest innovation in the curriculum, saying: "Addition of this proposal to his other service academy education firsts—the whole man concept, the enrichment program, and the cooperative Master's Degree program—clearly marks Gen. McDermott as a pioneer in military education in the tradition of Sylvanus Thayer."

An estimated 60 to 70 per cent of the 900,000 engineers in this country are employed in defense or space work, the Engineering Manpower Commission reports.

'THE MYSTICAL ROSE MADONNA'

Madonna Art To Highlight Price Exhibit

A highlight of the famed Vincent Price Collection of Fine Art now at Sears will be the showing of the original oil of "The Mystical Rose Madonna," by Salvador Dali, valued at $25,000.00.

This famous Dali painting will be shown for a limited 3-day engagement Wednesday through Friday.

Dali executed the oil painting of the Madonna which Vincent Price describes as "a rare monument in the world of art exclusively for Sears." The Spanish artist then went on to produce a limited edition of original colored lithographs on the same theme as the painting.

Each lithograph is numbered and signed by Dali. The Dali works are available for purchase by the public, as are all works in the vast collection. Both the Madonna oil and lithographs are on display at the Colorado Springs Sears store in the Southgate Shopping Center.

"To Salvador Dali, one of the greatest artists of the Twentieth Century, the incredible is always possible," said Price.

"Always it seems that the Spanish master's intention is to jolt the complacent and conventional, to prove that art is a tool opening new horizons to the imagination. His work may be the product of studious research, subconscious impulses or sheer chance, the whole suffused with a touch of genius, which transforms it into a work of great art.

"People will always look at Dali's work because of his extremely personal and always surprising imagination. This is where his genius lies."

The theme of the rose is taken from a litany to the Virgin Mary in which she is titled the "Mystical Rose." — "The Beauty of the Virgin is to be compared to the Beauty of the Rose."

World's Fastest Train Keeps Record in Japan

By JOHN RODERICK

ODAWARA, Japan (AP) — It is called Yume-No-Chotokkyu — THE DREAM SUPRESS. When it flashes over the rails at 126 miles an hour on Oct. 1 all Japan will hold its breath and pray it doesn't become a nightmare super-express."

Undergoing extensive final tests here, it is the world's fastest train, holder of the world's speed record of 153.6 m.p.h.

One of a stable of snout-nosed, cream-colored electric thoroughbreds, it eventually will cut the running time between Tokyo and Osaka from 6½ hours to 3. The distance is 322 miles.

The automatically controlled trains will use Japan's first broad-gauge railroad, a billion-dollar project begun in 1958 and now 90 per cent complete.

The line cuts through Japan's industrial heartland, and will serve 70 per cent of its people. It follows the old Tokaido Road over which samurai, courtesans, merchants and foreign envoys traveled from Tokyo to the imperial capital of Kyoto a century ago.

This route is designed to take the strain off the old narrow-gauge Tokaido Line, now at near-saturation point with 120 passenger trains and 770 freight trains on peak days. Though the old line's mileage is only 3 per cent of the national railway total, it handles 25 per cent of all freight and passenger traffic.

Split-second timing over this congested route has contributed to accidents.

Japanese who are uneasy at the speed and timing of the old line are beginning to wonder about feats of engineering involved in the new one. The trains will hurtle at the top permitted speed, 126 miles an hour, through 65 tunnels and over 3,100 bridges. For 61 miles of the route they will move on elevated trackage over highways, towns and other railways.

The Japanese National Railways, government-owned corporation which will run the line, says it isn't worried, but it isn't going to take any chances.

The trains will not run at top capacity at the outset. They will take 4½ hours for the Tokyo-Osaka journey, with the time gradually dropping to 3 if safety factors warrant.

The trains will have an automatic braking system called ATC, or automatic train control.

Operating on a transistorized track-to-cab communications system, ATC will slow the train if it gets too close to one in front of it, pick up speed when the danger has passed. It will select a proper track when moving into stations and halt the train if the motorman happens to nap.

The railroad will have no level crossings, thus eliminating collisions with automobiles trucks and pedestrians.

Cadets to Make Armed Forces Day Appearances

Armed Forces Day appearances will take members of the Air Force Academy Cadet Wing to New York City, Washington, D. C., and two locations in Colorado.

A contingent of 100 cadets is scheduled to take part in New York City's Fifth Avenue Armed Forces Day parade on May 16th.

An additional 100 cadets will march in the nation's capital May 10.

Cadets will make appearances on consecutive Saturdays in Colorado. Plans call for seven squadrons of approximately 700 men plus the Academy Band to appear in the Colorado Springs parade May 16.

Pueblo will observe Armed Forces Day this year May 9. A total of 200 cadets, plus the Drum and Bugle Corps will march in that city's parade.

An Armed Forces Day open house will be held May 16 at the Academy.

The Machebeuf group collected 13 runs on a dozen hits to register the win.

Mickey Wright Leads Peach Blossom Open

SPARTANBURG, S. C. (UPI) — Mickey Wright of Dallas charged from far back Saturday with a three-under-par 69 for a 144 and the second round lead in the Betsy Rawls-Peach Blossom Open Women's golf tournament.

Miss Wright was one stroke ahead of Gloria Armstrong of Oakland, Calif., who shot a two-over-par 74 for a 36-hole total of 145.

First round leaders Marlene Hagge, Ruth Jessen and Shirley Englehorn fell off the pace Saturday with disastrous back nines.

Miss Englehorn managed to hold on to third place at 146 with a 76 Saturday. Mrs. Hagge fell into a tie for fourth at 147 with Sandra Haynie, Mary Mills and Sandra McClinton.

Miss Jessen dropped to 148 and a tie for fifth with hometown favorite Betsy Rawls.

Miss Wright fired what she called her best round ever over the 6,435 yard, par 72 Spartanburg Country Club course. She settled down to par golf after an eagle on the first hole and ended 27 holes three over par, still well behind the leaders.

After carding a par on the 10th hole she birdied three of the next eight holes and came within inches of a fourth. Miss Wright dropped birdie putts on the 11th, 15th, and 16th holes from within six feet.

Two T-Bird Pitchers Combine for No-Hitter

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

PUEBLO—Sidearming Clay Chambers and southpaw Al Maynard combined to hurl the second no-hitter in Wasson history as the Thunderbirds stormed past helpless Pueblo South, 9-0, in a South Central League Game here Saturday morning.

The victory was the T-Birds' 10th of the season and their eighth straight since an early defeat by Pueblo East. And Gib Funk's Wasson team will have an opportunity to even that score when they host the Eagles in Colorado Springs Tuesday afternoon.

Thunderbird ace, Bob Kochis, was the scheduled hurler Saturday but illness forced him to remain at home. Thus it was that Chambers and Maynard were afforded the opportunity to carve a prominent niche in Wasson athletic history.

Chambers, who had shut out Cheyenne Mountain on two hits just this past Tuesday, was letter-perfect for five innings here. Only three South hitters reached base and none was the fault of the Wasson pitcher. Two drew life on errors by shortstop, Jim Smith, and the third reached first on a fielder's choice when second-sacker Terry Stillwaugh, cut down a ground ball and elected to go for a lead runner at third base.

Funk, searching for opportunities to work his short-stint relievers, summoned Maynard in the sixth, despite Chambers' brilliant performance up to that point. The stubby left-hander preserved the no-hitter, however. He issued two passes but fanned four in his two-innings.

So completely did the Wasson pitchers strangle the South batting order that the Colts hit only one ball into the outfield. Never, during the seven innings, did they come reasonably close to getting a safe blow. Chambers added to the Maynard strikeout total by fanning seven, including the side in the third frame. In addition his control was so nearly perfect that he ran up only two three-ball counts.

The only other no-hitter on the Thunderbird record book was placed there in 1960 during the school's first season of baseball. Bob Evans set Pueblo East down without a safety at Pueblo's Runyon Field where Saturday's repeat performance took place.

While it was a day for the pitchers, the Thunderbirds' robust hitters also managed to amuse themselves. Wasson pounded out 13 hits off a pair of Colt hurlers and picked up the only run it was to need as early as the first inning.

Smith, who was suffering through a subpar day in the field, was still tuned in at the plate. He smacked three hits in four trips, including a triple. Hal Meller, Mike Teague, and John Scales each hit safely twice.

With one down in the first inning, John Wickham launched the Thunderbird assault by beating out an infield hit and then stealing second. Chambers grounded out to first but Meller ripped a tremendous blast to the foot of the center-field fence for a run-scoring triple.

The 'Birds added two tallies in the third on a single by Frank Baird, Teague's double to left, an error, and a squeeze bunt off the bat of Chambers.

The main explosion, which had been simmering for three frames, finally erupted in the fourth and finished off South starter Jack Croasdell. Wasson pounded five hits during the stanza, including a booming triple by Smith to lead it off. In addition South's loose fielding became even more tattered as the 'Birds poured across five tallies and put the contest out of reach.

The final run came in the sixth when Teague singled and moved to third on an error. Pinch - hitter Rich Porreco walked and the two then effected a double steal with Teague whipping across the plate far ahead of the throw.

The win allowed the T-Birds to remain a half-game behind Palmer in the SCL flag race. The Terrors whipped Pueblo East 4-2 and Central bounced Trinidad 8-2 in other action.

AFA Frosh Topples Mesa JC

The Air Force Academy freshman track team scored a decision victory over Mesa Junior College in a dual meet when the AFA frosh accumulated 112 points to their visitors' 28 points in a Saturday afternoon outing.

With the exception of the pole vault, the Cadets completely dominated the meet winning all other events. Kirk Shumard of Mesa established a new record in the pole vault when he soared 13 feet and 10 inches.

Cadets Mike Scott and Scott Albright broke records in the 880-yard run and 330-yard intermediate hurdles. Scott ran the half-mile in 1:58.8 while Albright cut across the hurdles in 41.3 seconds.

Pueblo College Wins Dual Track Meet

GOLDEN, Colo. UPI — Sprinter Jim Sheehan led Southern Colorado State College to a narrow win over Colorado School of Mines Saturday in a dual track meet.

The winner was not determined until the final event, the mile relay, in which SCSC picked up five points for a 76-69 victory.

The Orediggers had won all seven field events but the Pueblo team took nine of the 10 running events. Sheehan won the 100 and 220 and ran a leg of the 440-yard and mile relays.

George Brinkworth of Mines beat his own year - old school record in the shot put by better than a foot with a toss of 49 feet, 7¾ inches.

Celtics Dump S. F. in Opener

BOSTON (UPI) — John Havlicek paced the Boston Celtics to a 108-96 victory over the San Francisco Warriors Saturday night to take the first game of a best-of-seven series for the National Basketball Association world championship.

The Celtics were true to form in gunning for their sixth consecutive NBA world championship.

Havlicek personally turned the tide with an 18-point outburst within a seven-minute span of the decisive second period in which he ran 14 consecutive points to equal the championship playoff record of field goals in a single quarter.

The former Ohio State All-America led Boston to a 43-33 margin midway in the second period as he tied the mark set by Bob Pettit of St. Louis in their game against Boston in 1958.

Havlicek tallied 23 of his 28-point total in the opening half as Boston took a comfortable 57-39 lead off the court at the half before 13,969 fans.

Havlicek shared scoring honors with the Celtics' Sam Jones who also contributed 28 points.

Wilt Chamberlain's 22 points was high for San Francisco, which will meet Boston here Monday night for the second game of the series before traveling to the West Coast for games on Wednesday and Friday.

A thorn in the side of Chamberlain was big Bill Russell who dominated both backboards and blocked close to a dozen shots.

Russell held Chamberlain from scoring a single shot over a 21 - minute and out re-bounded the Warrior center 25 to 23.

Chamberlain was blanked in basket shooting from the 11 minute mark of the first quarter to eight minutes into the third period.

The Celtics, idle since April 9 when they defeated the Cincinnati Royals for the NBA eastern division title, were pressed only in the opening quarters when the score was tied nine times.

Willie Naulls contributed 16 points to the Celtics' cause the Warriors' Tom Meschery, Al Attles and Gary Phillips had 15 points each.

Sam Jones suffered a sprained ankle in the fourth quarter and was forced to sit out the few remaining minutes of the game.

NEARLY GETS AWAY — As Palmer's Chuck Reinking flies into second base with a stolen base in this first inning action from Saturday's South Central League game against Pueblo East, the ball nearly gets away from second sacker Larry Duran. He made the stop however, but Reinking went on to score on a double by Jerry Golden later in the inning. Palmer won the game, 4-2, to remain in the lead of the league race with a 5-1 record.

AFA's Big Inning Wins Ninth Straight

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Editor

Over the years the New York Yankees have built a dynasty on perfecting the "big inning" in which they usually score more in the span of three outs than the opposition can muster over the rest of the game. Needless to say — although new manager Yogi Berra might take exception so far this year — it's been quite successful.

Well, the Falcons of the Air Force Academy don't claim to be an imitation of the Yankees. But they've used that same formula and have quite a record to show for it this spring.

Saturday the Falcons again ripped the seams of the first inning and all but broke open the game before visiting Colorado State University realized what had hit. When they quit circling the bases in that first stanza, the Cadets had a 4-1 lead and they went on to an 8-5 victory.

It was the ninnth consecutive triumph for the Falcons this season after dropping their opener at New Mexico and it gives the AFA the fastest start ever in the quest for a post-season NCAA tournament bid. No team in the region can even come close to duplicating that 9-1 record — and CSU is probably the furtherest from it at 1-11 now.

Just to show how the Air Force has used the "Yankee method" in the past few games, last Sunday they exploded for 10 runs in three straight innings in posting a 12-5 win over Wyoming, and then on Wednesday they used nine runs in the fourth frame to all but bury Denver with a final 11-3 tally.

It's been that way nearly all season.

Actually, CSU's Aggies repeated the four-run outburst against the Cadets with a final eighth inning effort on Saturday. But by that time it was all over and starter Fred Olmsted settled down to put out this fire and stopped them in order in the last round to record his fourth victory without defeat.

Making his task rather simple was the 13-hit barrage pounded out by his teammates, which included three home runs and seven doubles. The chief tormentors against the Aggies were third baseman Jim Steed and shortstop Darryl Bloodworth who each came up with a trio of hits. All three of Steed's were good for doubles while Bloodworth had one of the homers and one double.

Also blasting the fence toppers for the Air Force were center fielder Frank Packer and first baseman Bruce Huneke. Third baseman Bob Brown got CSU's lone homer in their big eighth inning with two aboard.

This was a repeat go between these two regional rivals and the decision was about the same as the 11-7 verdict of last weekend. The Rams actually have a much better club than that record would indicate as they managed eight hits off of Olmsted's left-handed offerings and played respectably in the field, but they had the misfortune of losing seven straight early in the season on a swing through the southwest where they faced experienced teams.

The next time out for the Falcons will undoubtedly be the big test of this nine-game winning streak as they will be up against the always strong Bears of Colorado State College next Wednesday afternoon. CSC has won the Rocky Mountain Conference crown for 21 straight years and should again offer the AFA its most competition for a post-season tourney berth.

The first inning on Saturday gave indications that a real marathon was in order as the Aggies promptly stepped on Olmsted for a run off a double and followup single. Then the Falcons retorted with four runs on six hits, including homers by Packer and Huneke which came back-to-back from the friendly pitching of starter Gary Moyle.

But then the game settled down over the next few frames and all the Falcons could muster were single runs in the second, third and fourth. However, it was by the margin of these singletons that the victory was earned.

Coming on in relief in the fifth was sophomore Gary Brunner and his skipping fast ball had the Cadets back on their heels for three innings, with the exception of Bloodworth's solo homer in the seventh. But for some reason, Coach Irv Ferguson pulled him in favor of Gary Kerlin and the Aggies seemed in deep trouble again with the new hurler leading off with three straight passes on balls.

One of three double plays cut down the AFA's last threat, however, and CSU was out of it without further damage.

The Rams let loose with all their guns in the eighth in a last-ditch effort to pull the win. Singles by Al Apo and Art Schneider opened the frame and then with two out the Air Force let them keep the rally alive with one of two throwing errors by shortstop Bloodworth. Brown then popped his home run over the left field wall and the Aggies nearly got back into the ball game.

17--Wrinkle Watch

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

If my hands are in good position at the top of my backswing I will be able to see wrinkles on the skin of my left wrist.

These wrinkles should appear just below the left thumb and the V formed by that thumb and the forefinger. When the wrinkles appear in this place on my wrist I know that the clubface will be in the proper position, and that a normal downswing will produce a square clubface at impact.

If I find that the wrinkles appear at the back of my left wrist — below the back of this hand — chances are good that my clubface will be too vertical to the ground. A sliced shot would normally result from such a position at the top of the backswing.

If the left wrist wrinkles appear in the proper place at the top of my backswing, it is natural that the club shaft will rest atop my left thumb and extend across the meaty portion at the bottom half of my left palm.

In addition to noting the position of the left wrist wrinkles, the only other thing I'm concerned with is that my grip stays firm at the top of my swing. Usually slippage occurs in the golfer's left hand.

When this happens he must "re-grip" early on the downswing. Such re-gripping forces the wrists to uncock prematurely and throws the club to the "outside."

The usual result is a loss of clubhead speed and a glancing blow at the ball.

IF BACKSWING is correct, wrinkles on skin of left wrist should be seen.

Tribe Tops East, 4-2 Via Jones' One-Hitter

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Editor

Making the most of just about every opportunity, Palmer High's Terrors combined the one-hit pitching of senior Ted Jones with a six-hit attack against Pueblo East to remain on top of the standings in the South Central League with well-played 4-2 victory Saturday morning at Memorial Park.

The game was the first of a scheduled split double header for the Terrors who later met cross-town rival St. Mary's in a non-league affair at Erps Field.

Jones picking up his second win of the season, and the Eagles pecking away at space throughout the game and only in the third inning was touched for a base hit. That was a triple off the bat of shortstop Frank Albo and just enough of ruin his bid for a no-hitter.

The victory was Palmer's fifth against but one loss in league play this spring and the Tribe's sixth in nine games overall. That kept them a half game up on runnerup Wasson, who played at Pueblo South at the same time and a full game ahead of idle Pueblo Centennial, the next nearest challenger.

Although East (1-5) has several veterans from a year ago back this season and is the only club to defeat Wasson over the entire slate so far, the Eagles were no match for Jones and his mates on Saturday. In five of the seven innings the Palmer right hander set them down in order and it would have been a shutout except for a wild pitch in the fifth that allowed their only run.

Chuck Reinking paced the Palmer attack with three hits in as many attempts and he scored two of the Terrors' four runs. The big stick was handled by first baseman Jerry Golden, though, as he slammed out two doubles and drove in the first run of the contest.

In all, it was one of the better played games of the season despite the chilly temperatures and slight breeze at Memorial Park. The only errors of the entire game were both committed by second baseman Reinking and he nearly wore the goat's horns as the bobbles came right on top of each other.

These miscues paved the way for one of East's runs and it brought the Eagles to within one run until the Terrors busted out with a pair for the second time in the fifth. Reinking misplayed catcher Dan Noll's rolled to leadoff the second frame and then dropped the ball again on a fielder's choice from short on the next play. Noll eventually scored on an infield out by outfelder Tom Westby, and Reinking redeemed himself by assisting on all three outs of the inning.

It was Reinking's bunt single down the first base line in the fifth after Jones had opened with a walk that set up the winning rally. His bunt was followed by another from the bat of shortstop Ollie West and the Terrors had the bases loaded.

Bob Cordova, who absorbed the defeat in going the distance, then balked home Reinking from third just after Jones had scored on Tommy Thompson's infield bouncer. It was a bit of clutch playing by the Terrors after East had knotted the score in the top of the fifth at 2-2.

The tying run came on a walk to Westby, stolen base, advance on an infield out and then he came home on Jones' wild pitch. This was one of the few times the veteran Palmer hurler lost control as he walked only this one batter during the entire contest.

Palmer's other two runs came in the first inning as it looked like they might chase Cordova early. Reinking led-off with a single down the third base line and with two out Thompson drew a walk to put runners on first and second. Golden then smashed his first of two doubles and Reinking scored easily, sending Thompson to third. A wild pitch from Cordova brought in the other tally.

East's only hit of the game netted nothing on the scoreboard as one of two double plays nullified Albo's triple. Only one was out when East's Chuck Thompson skied high to center field, but Don Shoffner's near perfect throw after the catch nailed Albo at home on the attempted advance after the fly out.

The other double play was registered by the Eagles in the same third inning. Reinking had again singled and advanced to second in West's sacrifice bunt. But Rich Grapp grounded smartly down the line and third baseman Mike Scott grabbed the ball, touched third for the force and then wheeled to first for the second out.

This next Tuesday the Terrors will face a crucial test in the race for the league pennant. They travel to Pueblo to take on third place Centennial which has lost only to Palmer and Wasson in first round play. Coach Jerry Hughes is expected to pitch sophomore ace Phil Johnson providing his injured leg muscle heals by that time. Otherwise, the Tribe probably will have to come back with either Jones again or try Tom Medlicott, although both saw action on Saturday.

Terrors Down St. Mary's For Second Win, 6-3

Palmer High completed a sweep of a split double header Saturday afternoon by taking a 6-3 non-league decision over St. Mary's Pirates at Erps Field. The game followed a 4-2 win by the Terrors in the morning in a South Central League contest against Pueblo East.

Left Tom Medlicott and the Pirates' Bob Ferguson dueled throughout the game and each gave up a half-dozen hits. Medlicott, who recorded his second straight victory against as many losses this season, struck out 10 while Ferguson was just one off this total.

A three-run homer by catcher Don Breeding was the difference in the game as he dropped one over the Erps Field fence in the third inning. Jerry Golden was the other big hitter of the game for the Terrors with three runs-batted-in on a single and sacrifice fly.

Breeding also collected a double to go with his circuit clout, as did Chuck Reinking and St. Mary's left fielder Larry Williams. The big blow for the Bucs came in the sixth inning and Williams knocked in two runs with his fence-jumping blast.

Until that time the Terrors had built up a 6-1 lead and were well on their way to their seventh victory in 10 starts this season. St. Mary's record now stands at 3-2.

For the entire day, Golden and Reinking puffed up their batting averages wtih Reinking getting four hits in six trips and Golden went three-for-three.

Getting two hits each in the six-hit attack by the Pirates were Mike Biondini and Dave Grantz. This was the first loss in two seasons for Ferguson, who went undefeated through last spring including a no-hitter against Harrison of the Pikes Peak League.

This was the only time these intra-city rivals will meet this season.

Stevens Sets New Mile Record in Kansas Relays

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI)—Ray Stevens, a former Nebraska star, shattered a 31-year-old meet record Saturday in the closing event of the Kansas relays.

Stevens, clocked at 3:47.9, erased the 1500-meter mark of 3:53.3 established by Glenn Cunningham of Kansas in 1933. Stevens finished far in front of Southern Illinois' Jim Dupree.

Texas and Emporia State set records in the distance medley relay in their respective divisions.

Emporia State, paced by John Camien's 4:03.2 anchor, was timed in 9:48.4, wiping out Loyola of Chicago's 9:52.4 set last year. Emporia State also notched the recent Texas Relays title in 9:57.8, with Camien cleaning up in 4:08.7.

Texas took the university division in a record 9:48. The Longhorns finished second to Missouri at the Texas affair and the Tigers were regarded as favorites here.

However, Missouri did not chose to run ace Robin Lingle, who was voted the outstanding performer at the Texas Relays and Friday anchored a 4:01 mile here en route to a record 4-mile relay.

The Tigers were also favored to threaten the pending world 2-mile record of 7:19.0 by Oregon State. Missouri won the event here with ease but was far off the world or meet records. The time Saturday was 7:26.6, well above their Texas effort of 7:22.7.

Danny Roberts of Texas A&M, with a 60-2¾ heave broke the meet shot put record of 59-7⅛ by Bill Nieder of Kansas in 1956.

Bobby May of Rice upset Arkansas' Ed Renfrow in the 120 high hurdles. May was clocked in 14.0, 1-10th of a second better than Renfrow's winning time at the Texas Relays.

Southern Methodist notched a quarter-mile relay title in the university division. Southern Methodist, clocked in 40.6, edged out Oklahoma, a reversal of the Texas Relays' finish.

Jerry Dyes of Abilene Christian with a record decathlon javelin throw of 249-1, won the decathlon championship with 7,059 points, 98 ahead of Phil Mulkey.

Berven Blazes to Record in Mile

By TOM CUSHMAN

Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

PUEBLO — Wasson's brilliant Jeff Berven blazed through a record-setting mile and Fountain's swift Trojans posted their second "big-meet" victory in two weeks to highlight fine performances by Colorado Springs' area teams at the Centennial Invitational here Saturday.

The sensational Berven ran a bulky field of distance men into the Pueblo cinders with a 4:31 clocking that is by far the best in the state this spring. The Thunderbird star was all alone, nearly 100 yards to the front, as he sailed across the finish line and smashed Lee Courkamp's existing record by a full five seconds.

While Berven's stunning performence was proving one of the top highlights of Division I action, Colorado Springs' area schools were making a complete shambles of the Division II competition. Favored Fountain, riding another double victory job by Bob Carter, sped away from the pack to capture the team championship with 51 points. But immediately behind the Trojans came Air Academy High with 38, while Manitou Springs and Colorado Springs St. Mary's tied for third with 22 points apiece. It was the most thorough domination ever by Pikes Peak League schools.

Division I also saw the pre-meet favorite roll through. Powerful Wheat Ridge, with steel-muscled Mike Sandberg burying two more records in the weights, coasted to the team title with 42 points. Arvada, with sprinter Rich Fowler at open throttle throughout the day, whizzed home second with 30 while Aurora Central was third with 25.

Wasson, in a strong challenging position to grab off the third place trophy, suffered a crippling blow when the Thunderbirds' 880 relay team was disqualified after finishing second. Jim Hartman's squad eventually was forced to settle for a fourth place tie with Regis. Both teams scored 19 points. Right behind came Palmer with 18.

Although neither of the Colorado Springs AAA schools placed in the top three, they were easily the class of the South Central League entries. Pueblo Central topped that city's four representatives with 11 points while East had 6, Centennial 5, and South 3. Grand Junction also picked up three points while Trinidad failed to score.

Fountain's Carter followed his outstanding performance at last week's Aurora Relays by winning both of the Division II dash events here Saturday. Once again his chief challenger was Rob Stockhouse of Academy High. The Kadet flash made it extremely close both times and had the lead in the 220 until a closing burst pulled Carter past in the final few steps.

Carter was joined in the double-winner circle by Manitou Springs' John Moore. Moore whipped to victories in both the high and low hurdles and the Mustangs also picked up a first place from Ron Smith in the pole vault.

Other local winners in Division II included Tony Blanchard of Academy High in the discus, Harold Burns of Fountain in the 440-yard dash, the Academy High 880 relay team of Brink Spear, Scott Haney, John Luksic, and Stockhouse, and the St. Mary's Distance Medley team of Jerry Knauf, Bruce Mangerich, Tom Rhue, and Sal Peralta.

Carter topped the individual scoring in the Division II competition by amassing 15 points. In addition to his two firsts, he placed second in the broad jump and anchored the second place 880 relay team.

Wasson's only first was turned in by Berven, but it was a memorable one. In addition the Thunderbirds' picked up second place points from Cominic Flacco in the low hurdles and from Allen Britton in the 880. Britton toured the two laps in under 2:05 while following Regis' great Paul Cattermole through a record 1:59.5 clocking.

The 'Birds also got a third from Mike Martin in the broad jump and a third from their distance medley team.

Palmer's Bobby Joe Williams bested a tight field in the high hurdles to give the Terrors their only five-point performance but the Tribe had a second from Bob McCoy in the pole vault. The event was won by Pueblo Central's Gary Gehlhoff who soared over 13-4.

Other Palmer points came from Alan Snyder's third-place finish in the 440, a third by the 880 relay team, Williams' fourth place in the low hurdles, and a fifth by Jim Seitz in the mile run.

Arvada's Fowler topped the individual scoring in Division I with 14¾ points. He won the 220 and 440, placed second in the 100, and anchored the mile relay team to a third place finish. His 50.8 in the 440 erased a record held by former Palmer star, J. P. Morgan.

Sandberg was off his form of last weekend but still crushed both weight records. His 58-10 in the shot put was over three feet better than the old standard and his toss of 164-8½ in the discus wiped out that record by nearly 20 feet.

Broomfield Shuts Out Cheyenne

BROOMFIELD — Six-time Pikes Peak League kingpins from Cheyenne Mountain in Colorado Springs found themselves stranded on the bases without scoring.

The Cheyenne aggregation left eight men on base as the PPL perennial champions fell short against the host team, Broomfield. The Broomfield crew only required four hits to defeat the Cheyenne team, 7-0, Saturday.

Although the Indians collected the same number of hits as the host team, the Cheyenne crew couldn't score.

Wasson Wins Gymnastics

The Wasson gymnastics team scored a 63-49 victory over visiting East Denver, Saturday at the T-Birds home court.

Dennies Berge won the Floor Exercise event as the Thunderbirds made a clean sweep with the exception of Tumbling. Other Wasson winners: John Stock, Trampoline; Art Wright, Horizontal Bar; Archie Martinez, Parallel Bar; and Jim Edwards and Jim Hillhouse tied for first place in the Still Rings.

This makes for a 5-1 won-loss record for the Wasson team. The T-Birds are slated to journey north this Friday to tangle with Aurora Central.

Tigers Rally to Dump Mines, 8-4

By DICK FOSTER

Those Colorado College Tigers looked the part of an up and coming ball club Saturday afternoon at Memorial Park, whomping out six runs in the fourth inning to outrun Colorado Mines, 8-4. The Tigers, well on their way to having their best season in many a spring, played tight defensive ball throughout, allowing just nine hits, committing one sole error, and collecting their first double play.

The local College looked as though trouble was headed their way, as Mines bagged one quick run in the opening frame, and put CC's nine back in the field after three straight fly outs. Tiger pitcher Jeff Saur and Mines moundsman Jeff Kanofski engaged in a pitcher's duel for the next two innings. CC picked up two isolated hits in those innings to none for the Golden school.

Along with the Mines' score in the first inning by Ken Bott, they picked up another tally in the fourth as Tom Lea walked, stole second, went to third on a fielder's choice and crossed the plate on a squeeze play. It was about the worst moment of the afternoon for Colorado College. Lea was on second when Bob Randolph stepped up to the plate.

Randolph hit to shortstop John Genz and he attempted to catch Lea at third. The infield umpire moved over to call the play at third, which was out of his jurisdiction, but he nevertheless called Lea safe. Randolph trotted gingerly down to first and on the next pitch stole second. While Tiger catcher Roger Williams' throw went unsuccessfully down to second Lea came home.

With their composure somewhat regained, the Tigers found their mark in the bottom half of that same fourth inning, and swatted seven hits for six runs to take their first taste of lead. Dennis Walker started off with a double, and was followed by Roger Williams who singled and Steve Ebert who made first on an error. John Genz grounded out but drove in Walker, and Steve Mills singled, scoring Williams.

Jeff Saur helped win his own game with a two run single, scoring both Ebert and Mills. Dave Peterson singled and so did Carl Clay. They were followed by John Simus who knocked in both Peterson and Saur.

In the fifth inning Genz singled for the Tigers and scored on a wild pitch by Al Moody who replaced Kanofski after 4 1-3 innings. Mines came back to score two runs in the sixth on Steve Chesbro's and Tom Lea's tallies. Chesboro singled and scored when Randolph doubled, and Floyd Ito knocked in Lea who had also singled.

The only remaining score was made as Reno Van Putten got on first by error and went to second on another error and scored on Roger Williams double.

Both squads used two pitchers: Tiger starter Jeff Saur went six innings to give up five hits, four runs, three walks, and fan five, to pick up the win. Jeff Kanofski was charged with the loss, as he went 4 1-3 innings, gave up 11 hits, seven runs, and walked none with one strike out. Moody relieved Kanofski, went 3 2-3 innings, gave up two hits and one run, walked one and fanned one.

Mike Irsfield went the closing three innings for Colorado College, and it appeared for a time that he had troubles in the form of a last inning rally by the Mines.

With two men on and none out, Irsfield faced Chesboro, who hit to third baseman John Simus. Simus picked up the grounder, stepped on third to force Paul Brewaike, and burned the ball to first sacker Walker to complete CC's first double play this year.

It took the spark out of Mines' spirit and Irsfield fanned the next man, Chuck Wyatt to pick up his fourth strike out and end the game. Irsfield gave up four hits, no runs and walked one.

Next on the Tigers' agenda is a doubleheader at Adams State this Tuesday afternoon.

Florence Registers 3-2 Win Over Widefield in PPL Play

FLORENCE—Behind the strong arm of Paul Hardrick, the Florence Huskies maintained their leadership in the Pikes Peak League when they slipped past visiting Widefield, 3-2, Saturday.

Hardrick limited the Gladiators to only two hits while the Huskies right-hander struck out 10 Widefield batsmen. Hardrick enjoyed peak control as he never yielded one base on balls.

Pinch-hitter Jack Sauer cinched the contest for the local team as the Huskie batter singled in the seventh stanza to score the winning run.

In all, the Florence aggregation collected six hits to post the crucial victory and maintain the PPL lead. This was the Huskies third straight win under the new management of Coach Gene Stone. Mike Leyba and Rodney Irvine were responsible for the additional two runs.

Dave Weigh took the loss for the Widefield team as the Gladiator was tabbed for six hits during his seven inning venture on the mound.

Carlos Woods supplied the stick power for Widefield as the left-fielder blasted a home run in the fifth frame with Gil Trujillo on base. Woods accounted for both runs as his four bagger cleared the centerfield fence to score two tallies.

Florence struck in the fourth inning to lead but Woods parked his homer to deadlock the contest until Sauer cinched the victory in the final stanza.

The win over Widefield put the Florence team in first place via a 3-0 mark with six-time PPL champion from Cheyenne Mountain and Air Academy High close behind.

85-Year Old Woman Plays Golf

By JOE MCKNIGHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

WICHITA, Kan. (AP)—Sports fans who think golf or bowling is the life have solid support from Dora Spangler, who took up both after passing her 80th birthday.

Mrs. Spangler became 85 last March, plays 18 holes of golf two or three times a week, weather permitting, and bowls at least once a week.

The tiny octogenarian has a golfing average of 155, a bowling average of 75 and hopes some day to reverse those scores.

Her sports life started in 1959, several years after she became a widow and "I began to feel kind of lost," she said.

"My daughter played golf and she wanted to take me," Mrs. Spangler explained. "I'd never been on a course in my life and didn't know which end of the club to use.

"But I started and I've been at it ever since. I love it."

She plays three days a week.

In addition to her daughter, Mrs. Spangler has three sons, eight grand-children and eight great grand-children.

Mrs. Spangler walks the courses, pulling her own golf cart.

"I never had a caddy but once," she said. "I get along very well by myself."

Monday nights she bowls in a local women's league.

"My average is low," she said apologetically. "About 75."

Regis High Considers Three For Cage Job

DENVER (UPI)— Rev. Robert F. Houlihan, dean of Regis College, said Friday that Tom O'Connor, high school basket ball coach at Chicago's Gordeon Techn, was one of three men being considered for the post of head basketball coach and athletic director.

Father Houlidan did not identify the other two applicants for the post at Jesuit College.

The appointment is expected to be made next week.

Present coach Joe B. Hall resigned in a dispute over revised athletic plans at the school.

Pain Is New, Constant

By JACK HEWINS
Associated Press Sports Writer

SEATTLE (AP) — Pain is a new and constant companion of Brian Sternberg.

Yet the young athlete whose accident last July 2 shocked the sports world—and whose courage since has touched the world's heart—finds in pain a new ray of hope.

"This is a change," the paralyzed youth said recently. "Any change can be a good sign. The pain is mine; I must endure it. Other people must endure me.

"Nancy is the one with courage."

Slender, soft-voiced Nancy McCracken will be 20 in May.

She was a sophomore this year at Seattle Pacific College.

It was almost a year ago that she grew up in the space of time it takes to lift the receiver from a telephone.

The call reached her at the Denver home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCracken. The boy she had been dating steadily in Seattle had fallen while exercising on a trampoline. He was paralyzed from the neck down.

He was Sternberg, a University of Washington sophomore who had vaulted higher than any man before him.

Brian was an expert on the trampoline. To maintain his muscle tone he spent more practice time on the spring-rimmed mat than he did on the vaulting lane. But now in a twisting fall he had lost control, landing off balance on his neck and shoulder, pinching his spinal cord.

"I'll come," Nancy McCracken told Harold Sternberg, Brian's father.

"From the moment she arrived she did not let a day go by without a visit," Brian remembered, "except for the brief times she was home in Denver or I was away."

Last fall Brian made his first venture outside the hospital, attending a show in Seattle's opera house with Nancy and other friends. He has been the honored guest at numerous banquets.

In mid-winter Brian went home from the hospital to stay and Nancy moved in with the Sternbergs for the winter quarter.

Brian has some muscular control of both arms and special derpessors give him some use of his fingers.

"X rays have shown there is no massive damage to the spinal cord, no severance. But in similar cases, where there has been recovery, it has been relatively rapid," he said.

"We know we're up against something medically impossible, but we're not conceding it. This is in God's hands."

"In my low periods Nancy has taken charge. She has been a bulwark."

U. S. Army Says Clay 'Failure'

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Cassius Clay, by his own admission "the greatest," was classed by the Army Saturday a "true failure" not up to minimum mental standards for draftees.

Army Secretary Stephen Ailes, in a letter to chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee, said the new heavyweight champion, tested both before and after the Feb. 25 fight in which he toppled favored Sonny Liston in Miami Beach, passed physical tests but flunked on the mentals.

Ailes said that three psychologists, including the Army's senior man in this field, supervised the tests and satisfied themselves Clay "was a true failure" rather than a malingerer — in other words that he was doing his best on the standard Army mental exams and the special psychological tests he got in addition.

Ailes told Vinson he personally made the final decision to reject Clay for draft duty. He said the Army, with new equipment and more complex duties, no longer can afford to accept any but "fully trainable" men.

Vinson released Ailes' letter Saturday in explaining why his committee plans no investigation of the Army's rejection of Clay for draft duty three weeks after he won the heavyweight crown.

NCAA Tourney Site Announced

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The NCAA anounced Saturday its 1965 national wrestling tournament would be held at the University of Wyoming.

The meet was scheduled for March 25-27.

The NCAA executive committee selected Colorado School of Mines for the 1965 college division wrestling meet, scheduled for March 18-20.

Local Team Tops Greeley

A new sport was introduced to the Pikes Peak Region this past week as the Colorado Springs roller hockey team played a squad from Greeley. The local team, made up of players from both the roller skating rinks in the city, defeated Greeley, 6-4.

Earlier, Greeley had beaten the "Invaders" from the Springs in a marathon five overtime contest during the Colorado-Wyoming tournament at Longmont.

Standouts for the Invaders were left winger Mike Skrapits, center Ron Jackson, Ed Rush and goalie Hal Reeder. Greeley center Cliff Weber had te three-goal hat trick to pace his squad.

Greeley has an 18-4 record over a two-ear period and this contest with the Invaders was the final one for the season.

For the most part, the roller version of hockey is much like the game played on ice skates except that players were only shin and knee guards for protection instead of full padding. The game ball is three inches in diamater with a plastic-cork finish over a liquid center. Sticks are shaped like field hockey clubs but have both sides flat.

All equipment is imported with the sticks coming from Spain and the balls from England.

The Springs' team has been together about eight months and hopes to qualify for the North-Central Regional playoffs to be held June 12-15 at St. Louis, Mo. Two teams from each of the eight regions will win a place in the National finals on Aug. 1 at Louisville, Ky.

The next scheduled game for the local squad is a return match with Greeley on the Greeley rink, Sunday, April 26.

The National Tournament is held in conjunction with the National Roller Skating Rink Aperators Association, which also holds championships for dance and figures each year. The finals are slated for television on the Wide World of Sports later in the year.

Nicklaus, Souchak Tie For Houston Golf Lead

HOUSTON (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, the pre-tournament favorite who trailed by nine strokes after the first round, fired a second straight 66 Saturday to tie big Mike Souchak for the 54-hole lead in the $50,000 Houston Golf Classic.

As the second round leaders faltered, Nicklaus posted a 76-66-66—208 and Souchak, the 1959 Classic champion, collected rounds of 71, 69, and 68 to move into Sunday's final round five under par for the 7,233-yard, par 35-36—71 Sharpstown Country Club course.

Nicklaus had begun the third round at even par, two strokes behind Souchak and three behind the first place traffic jam of Don January, Billy Maxwell, Buster Cupit and Ramon Sota.

Nicklaus and Souchak were one stroke up on Al Geiberger, 26-year-old Californian, who tied Sharpstown's course record with a third round 65 to go with earlier rounds of 74 and 70.

The foursome that shared the 36-hole lead at 139 meanwhile had trouble with the windswept course under a blazing Texas sun. Maxwell had a 72 to drop to a four-way tie for fifth at 211, while Sota, the young Spanish star, and Cupit, each had 73s. January jumped to 75 for a 214.

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By Bob Foss

Ever wonder why the Kentucky Derby is called a "Derby"? . . . Well, in 1780 in England, the Earl of Derby founded a famous horse race for 3-year olds at Epson and it was called "Derby's Race at Epson" . . . Later, it became, simply, the Epsom Derby, and when the folks in Louisville started their race in 1875 they borrowed the name and called it the Kentucky Derby.

Can you imagine a big league game in which an umpire would be calling balls and strikes on his own brother? . . . Well, it could happen . . . One of the new American League umpires, Bill Haller, is a brother of catcher Tom Haller of the Giants . . . They're in different leagues now, but if Tom were ever traded to an American League club, we could see an umpire calling plays on his brother, and that would be something to see, wouldn't it?

* * *

Which player in baseball history holds the record for most life-time stolen bases? . . . Answer is NOT Ty Cobb . . . Most people think Cobb stole more bases than any other man, but the record is held by Billy Hamilton who played big league ball only 14 seasons between 1888 and 1901 . . . He stole 937 in that time . . . Cobb played 24 years and ranks second with a total of 892 stolen bases.

Maple Leafs Deadlock NHL Playoff Series

DETROIT (AP)—Third period goals by Andy Bathgate and Frank Mahovlich gave the Toronto Maple Leafs a 4-2 victory over the Detroit Red Wings Saturday night and tied the Stanley Cup hockey playoff finals at two games each.

Bathgate's 45-foot shot midway through the third period put the Maple Leafs ahead, and Mahovlich put the game out of reach at 18:09 as he knocked in Bob Pulford's rebound on a breakaway.

Dave Keon scored Toronto's first two goals, the second coming in the second period while the Maple Leafs held a two man advantage.

Bruce MacGregor and Gordie Howe had scored earlier in the second period to put the Red Wings ahead, delighting 15,035 fans, the largest crowd of the season.

Orioles Top Yanks in 12 Innings

BALTIMORE (AP) — Brooks Robinson doubled home the winning run Saturday as the undefeated Baltimore Orioles edged the winless New York Yankees 2-1 in 12 innings.

The victory was the fourth in a row for the Orioles—all by one or two runs—establishing a club record for consecutive triumphs at the start of a season. For the Yanks, it was their third straight extra-inning loss.

Rookie relief pitcher Pete Mikkelsen walked Norm Seibern to open the Oriole 12th, and the Baltimore first baseman moved to second when Yankee catcher Elston Howard fielded John Orsino's bunt and made a tardy throw on an attempted force play.

PIRATE PITCHER DROPPED BY DRIVE—Pitcher Don Schwall of Pittsburgh lies near the mound after a line drive off the bat of New York Met Tim Harkness smacked him in the right leg. Players of both teams gather around Schwall after the eighth inning accident. He was carried off the field but it was announced later he received a bruised knee. Schwall, who left the game with a 9-2 lead, was credited with the victory as Pittsburgh won, 9-4. (AP Wirephoto)

Houston Posts Win

HOUSTON (AP) — Jim Wynn and Bob Aspromonte hit two-run homers and Ken Johnson won his second game as Houston defeated Milwaukee 4-2 Saturday.

Wynn's homer, his second of the season, followed Rusty Staub's single in the sixth inning and broke a 2-2 deadlock.

Aspromonte's first of the year came in the fourth with two out and Pete Runnels, who had walked, on first.

Pirates Dump Mets

NEW YORK (AP)—Bob Bailey hammered New York Met pitching for four hits Saturday as Pittsburgh handed the Mets their fourth straight loss 9-5.

Don Schwall was rolling along easily with a 9-2 lead until Tim Harkness rifled a line drive off the pitcher's right leg in the eighth. Schwall was carried off the field, but it was announced later that he had suffered only a bruised knee.

Donn Clendenon slammed a home run and two singles and Bill Virdon had three singles in the Pirates' 15-hit attack.

Twins Nip Senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tony Oliva's first major league home run, a blast over the right field fence on the first pitch of the 10th inning, led the Minnesota Twins to an 8-6 victory over the Washington Senators Saturday.

The Twins overcame some long distance clouting by Chuck Hinton and Ed Brinkman. Hinton hit his first home run, two triples to deepest center and a 410-foot fly.

Brinkman had a single, double and a homer.

Tigers Win, 3-2

DETROIT (AP) — A three-run home run by Norm Cash in the fifth inning gave the Detroit Tigers a 3-2 victory over the Los Angeles Angels Saturday.

Cash's hit came after the game was delayed an hour and 19 minutes because of rain.

Cubs Blank Philly

CHICAGO (AP) — Bob Buhl gave up a 10-foot single in the first inning and did not yield another hit until the eighth in hurling the Chicago Cubs to a three-hit 7-0 victory over the previously unbeaten Philadelphia Phillies Saturday.

Tony Taylor, leading off the first inning, was safe when his hit trickled barely onto the grass in front of the batter's box.

The 35-year-old right-hander then held the Phils hitless until Bobby Wine dropped a single into short center in the eighth.

Chicago Tops Boston

BOSTON (AP)—The Chicago southpaw Gary Peters drove in four runs as the White Sox rolled to a 10-5 victory over Boston Saturday.

Peters helped his club to a 6-0 lead in the first inning with the first of his two doubles but the 1963 American League Rookie of the Year needed relief help before the White Sox nailed down their first victory in four games this season.

Despite his healthy 9-0 lead, Peters labored at times and was tagged for 10 hits and gave up three walks in the six innings he worked.

Cards Down Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Johnny Lewis, Ken Boyer and Curt Flood slammed home runs—the Cardinals' first of the year—as St. Louis outpowered San Francisco 3-2 Saturday.

Willie Mays belted his fifth homer in the five-game-old season for the Giants. But Flood negated Mays' blow with his game-winning four-bagger in the sixth.

Right-hander Ernie Broglio limited the Giants to five hits in evening his record at 1-1. Bob Bolin, victim of the three homers, lost his first decision. He yielded only one other hit in his six innings.

College officials said the public is invited to the dedication ceremonies which will include swimming demonstrations.

Participating in the ceremonies will be Gerald L. Schlessman, prominent Denver businessman and a member of the Colorado College class of 1917; his wife, Mrs. Florence Fabling Schlessman '21; his son, Lee E. Schlessman '50; and his daughter, Mrs. Susan Schlessman Fredericks '52.

College officials taking part in the dedication will be Armin B. Barney '21, chairman of the board of trustees; Dr. Lloyd E. Worner, president of the college; athletics director Jerry Carle, and Jerrel Lear, director of the new pool.

Schlessman is vice chairman of the college's board of trustees and a member of the board since 1948. He is permanent president of the class of 1917.

A high point in the ceremonies will be the unveiling of a 30-by-20-inch bronze plaque recognizing members of the Schlessman family as generous benefactors. Schlessman and his family were principal contributors to the pool and the glass and brick pool building.

Swimming demonstrations by members of the Colorado College varsity swimming team, the Palmer High School Girls Swimming Club and members of the high school varsity team will be featured during dedication ceremonies.

Demonstrations will include fancy diving, comedy diving, life-saving techniques, and synchronized swimming.

The pool and the adjoining ice skating rink, built at a total cost of $750,000, were designed by Lusk and Wallace of Colorado Springs. Bruce Hughs of Colorado Springs was the general contractor.

As unusual feature of the pool is that it is housed in a building with glass walls on two sides. One side looks out onto the ice rink and the other onto the patio and Cache la Poudre St. It was designed to provide an outdoor-indoor atmosphere.

The entire interior of the building, with the exception of the vaulted roof and the tinted thermopane windows, is tiled.

California Track Team Downs Huskies

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI) — California's track team hung a 91-54 defeat Saturday on Washington although the Huskies Jerry Plowman won both sprint events and set a meet record in the 220.

After capturing the 100 yard dash in a time of 9.5, Plowman captured the 220 in a time of 21.7, besting his own mark by four-tenths of a second.

Forrest Beaty, Cal's ace sprinter, placed second to Plowman with a 9.5 clocking in the 100 then passed up the 220 because of a cold.

Wariboko West of Nigeria, who teams with Phil Shinnick in the broad jump for Washington, missed the competition because of a stomach-ache sustained this morning. He was discharged from Cowell Memorial Hospital after undergoing examination.

TOUGHEST TO DOUBLE

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — Howie Goss played 133 games for the Houston Colts last year and while he's not on their roster this spring the 29-year-old outfielder is proud of the fact that he hit into only three double plays in 411 trips to the plate.

Goss presently is on the Oklahoma City roster, mainly because the Colt .45s were forced to place ten first-year players on their active list. Goss hit only .209. As a 1962 rookie with Pittsburgh he hit .243.

Of the National Leaguers who played 125 games or more in 1963, Chicago's Lou Brock was toughest to double up. He hit into only two double plays. Duke Snider of the Mets also was doubled only twice in 129 games. Maury Wills of the Dodgers hit into three double plays in 134 games.

Western Tops Adams State

ALAMOSA, Colo. (AP) — A seventh inning error enabled Western State College to edge previously unbeaten Adams State College 9-8 in a Rocky Mountain Conference baseball game Saturday.

The Indians are now 3-1 in conference play, and Western State is 1-3.

The winning run was scored by Mac Singleton who doubled in the seventh and then rode home on a throwing error by Adams State shortstop Tony Magrich.

The Mountaineers outhit Adams State 11-10, and the Indians made five errors compared with three for Western State.

WOMEN'S AMATEURS SET

NEW YORK (AP) — Sites for the next three USGA Women's Amateur golf championships have been determined. This year's event will be held at the Prairie Dunes Country Club, Hutchinson, Kan., Aug. 17-22.

Next year the women will play their tournament at the Lakewood Country Club, Denver, Colo. In 1966 the amateur will be held at the Sewickley Heights Golf Club, Sewickley, Pa.

Top rusher for Penn State's 1963 football team was halfback Gary Klingensmith who ripped off 450 yards in 102 carries for a 4.4 average. He will be back next season.

East Denver Wins Relays

DENVER (AP) — East High School won the seventh annual Denver Prep Relays Saturday. East tallied 36 points while South was second with 26. Manual had 25½, Abraham Lincoln 21, George Washington 15½; Thomas Jefferson 13 and North 6.

East set a new meet mark of 3:35.9 in the distance medley relay and Washington set a sprint medley relay mark of 1:35.

Elston Howard of the Yankees paced American League catchers in hitting in 1963 with a .287 mark, two points higher than Earl Battey of the Minnesota Twins.

CSC Downs Wyoming In 10th Frame

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — The Wyoming Cowboys committed two errors in the 10th inning, allowing Colorado State College to take a 6-5 baseball victory Saturday.

Wyoming led most of the way, but CSC tied the game in the ninth inning then picked up the winning run in the 10th on the two errors and a pair of singles.

Wyoming led in errors with eight while CSC committed three miscues.

Ken Bacon picked up the victory, relieving Tom O'Brien in the seventh inning. Don Cadman went the distance, recording the loss.

Each team had only one earned run.

STEAK-EATING TEAM

CHUGWATER, Wyo. (AP) — The Chugwater high school basketball team really feasted on steaks after the state tournament.

Ervin Kline promised the 10-man squad steak dinners if it won 15 games during the season, qualified for the state tourney or won the state championship. He lost on all three counts.

Chugwater, enrollment 44, defeated Kaycee, 65-57, for the state championship.

Washington—There's more than meets the eye in Secretary of State Rusk's last-minute decision to visit Saigon during his current swing through the Far East.

The main reason is to counter rumors that Defense Secretary McNamara is calling all the signals in South Viet Nam. Rusk's aids kept pleading that he simply had to make the trip or surrender some more prestige.

SECRETARY RUSK

* * *

The Secretary of State kept insisting that three was no pressing need for his going. McNamara had already conducted all the business the administration needed to transact during his recent inspection tour.

OTHER OFFICIALS HELPED RUSK SEE THE LIGHT

But other Administration officials argued that he had never been to Saigon since becoming Secretary and this didn't look good when he is supposed to be providing the top political advise on the anti-communist effort. They reminded Rusk how he had missed the boat by failing to join President Kennedy is at least one key international conference.

Rusk finally saw the light, and President Johnson gave his nod.

Even smart Senators like Kenneth B. Keating (R-N.Y.) occasionally are confused by letters received from constituents. The other day, while the Senate was considering civil rights and a committee was holding hearings on silver coinage legislation, Keating received a postcard which read:

"Dear Senator, will you please support the silver rights bill."

HUMPHREY IS KIDDED ABOUT A DEER'S HEAD

Among those at a diplomatic party the other night were Minnesota's two Democratic Senators, Eugene McCarthy and Hubert Humphrey. Both are being touted for the Democratic Vice Presidential nomination by admirers.

McCarthy couldn't resist kidding Humphrey. "You know that deer's head Hubert has in his office?" McCarthy said, "the one he got on the LBJ ranch? Don't tell Hubert, but it has a rope burn on its neck. He's never noticed it."

UN ambassador Adlai Stevenson was invited to a dinner at the Icelandic embassy by Ambassador and Mrs. Thor Thors. When his cab driver let him out in front of a brightly lit mansion he walked in. He found many old Washington friends sipping cocktails and chatted for a while.

"Where's Thor?" he finally inquired. No one had ever heard of Thor. "Isn't this the Icelandic embassy?" Adlai asked. "No, this is the Coleman Jennings house." Jennings is a wealthy retired businessman and prominent Washington socialite.

The cabbie had let Adlai out a block away from Iceland's embassy.

A PARTY FOR SCHLESINGER IN BASEMENT HIDEAWAY

Presidential aid Arthur Schlesinger's departure from the White House, but not Washington, prompted a gay, tongue-in-cheek party in his honor this week that brought out nearly everybody from the Kennedy Administration including Jackie.

Held in a Georgetown basement hideaway called The Tombs, the party, according to the invitations, was to celebrate Schlesinger's departure from the government of the United States of America and the opening of his new offices of CASH (Center for the Advanced Study of History). Many door prizes were promised, including honorable mention in the former Harvard professor's history of the Kennedy Administration.

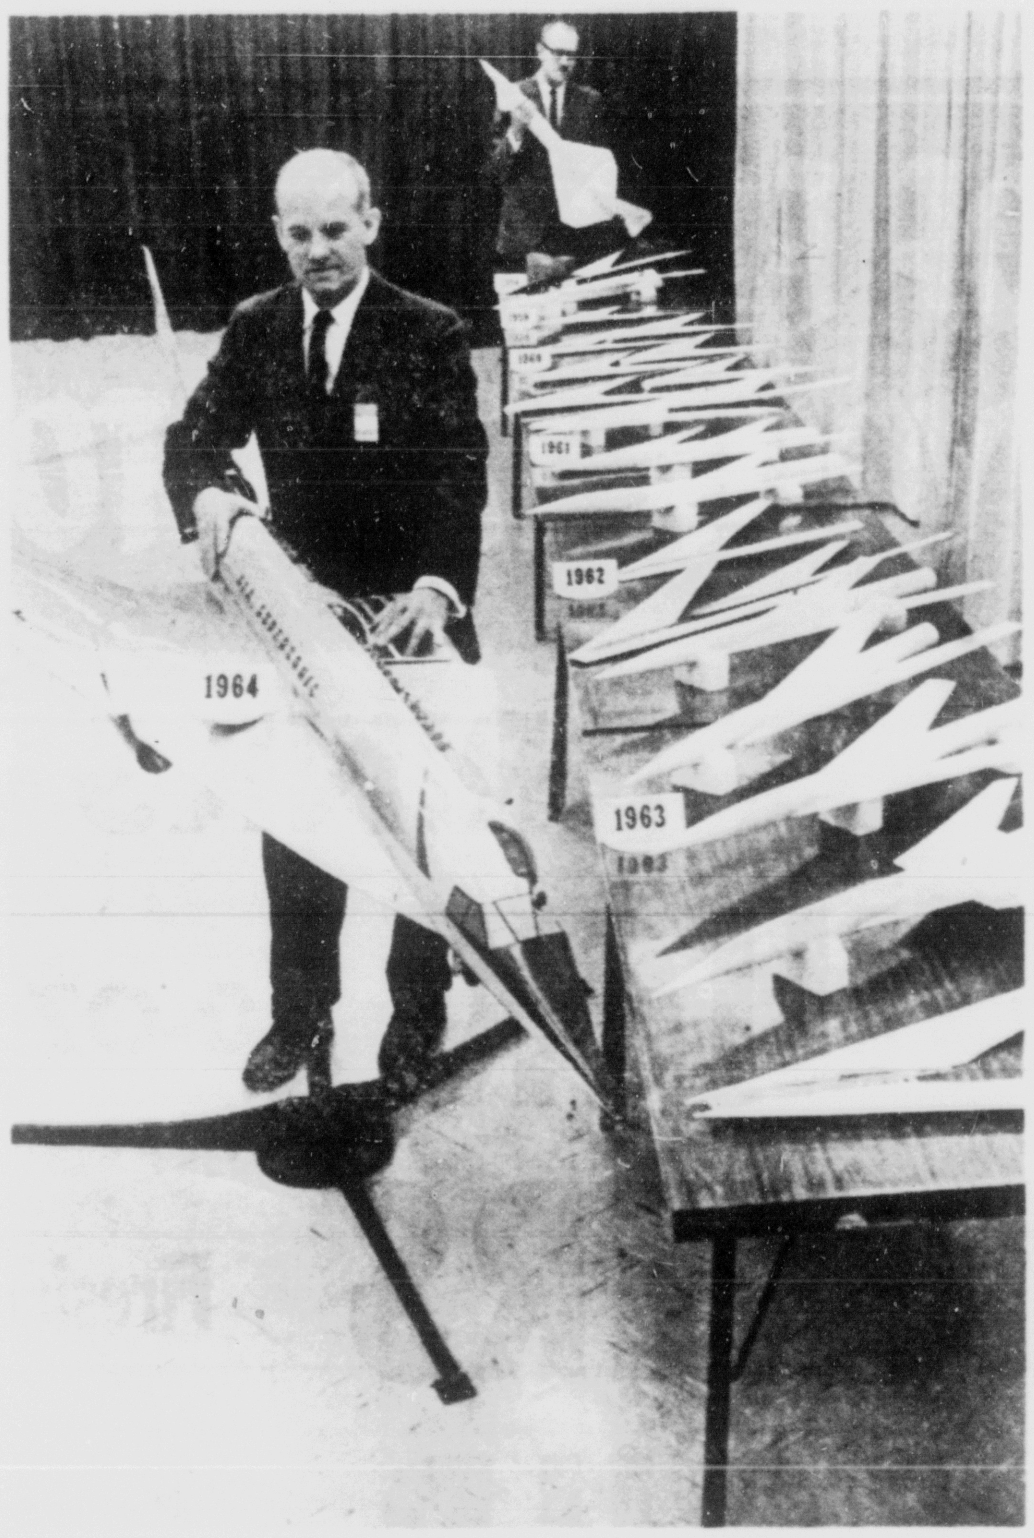
Dick Goodwin, Sargent Shriver's assistant in the war on poverty program, and William Vander Heuvel, special assistant in the Justice Department, alternates in reading the "honorable mentions" from the imaginary Schlesinger book (written in the first person).

"Bobby got the job as Attorney General, but he didn't know what to do. I said to him, 'Have you every thought of civil rights?'"

AWARDED CONTRACT

"McNamara came out of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and called me on the phone and said, 'Whom shall I give the contract to? General Dynamics or Boeing?' I told him General Dynamics, thus saving him a great deal of embarrassment.

"Kenny (O'Donnell) was pacing up and down. Finally he turned to me and said, 'How can we keep Lodge out of the election in 1964?' I replied, 'Why don't you make him ambassador to Viet Nam?'"



SHAPES ON DISPLAY—Some of the more than 500 supersonic shapes wind-tunnel tested by The Boeing Company since 1957 are displayed at the company's Airplane Division in Renton, Washington. Clyde W. Ohrman (front) is standing next to a cutaway model of the Boeing Model 733, the variable-sweep wing supersonic transport design which Boeing recently submitted in the U.S. Federal Aviation Agency supersonic competition. His left hand rests on point at which the variable-sweep arrow wing pivots. Ben Hollo is holding one of the first supersonic shapes tested by Boeing six years ago. Both Ohrman and Hollo are manufacturing liaison engineers on the supersonic transport project. (Boeing Photo)

Transport Design Details Revealed At Meeting

Details of The Boeing Company's proposed variable-sweep wing supersonic transport have been outlined by company officials.

Boeing SST models and full-scale sectional mockups were shown to the press for the first time. Those attending the briefing witnessed a demonstration of how the variable-sweep arrow wing proposed for Boeing's Model 733 will operate, sat in a full-scale mockup of the supersonic cokpit, viewed 25 of the more than 500 supersonic wind tunnel configurations (shapes) tested by Boeing since 1957, and were presented information on the operational and economic features of Boeing's SST proposal.

"The only basically new design challenge unique to the variable-sweep concept is that of the wing hinge joint itself," said John O. Yeasting, vice president-general manager of Boeing's Airplane Division. "Recognizing this challenge, the company established high standards of structural integrity and operating reliability which insure that the hinged joint, and its related installations, will have integrity and reliability fully equal to that of all other critical elements of the overall design." Boeing's proposed variable-sweep supersonic transport design has been submitted as one of three airframe entries in the U.S. Federal Aviation Agency competition.

The Boeing SST is designed to carry from 150 to 227 passengers across the Atlantic Ocean in two hours, 24 minutes, or from New York to Los Angeles in one hour, 46 minutes.

Because of its variable-sweep arrow wing, the Model 733 will combine the best features of present jetliners with the outstanding supersonic capability of flying 1800 miles an hour (Mach 2.7 or 2880 km-h) at 62,000-foot (18,897 m) altitude.

"National Aeronautics and Space Administration research on the variable-sweep arrow wing has proved that aerodynamic compromise in the design of supersonic airplanes is no longer necessary," Pennell said.

The wing span of the Model 733 will be 173 feet (52.6 m) with the wing extended, and 86 feet (26.2 m) when swept back for supersonic cruising. Primary structural material for the Boeing SST will be titanium. Gross take-off weight will be 430,000 pounds (194,790 kg) and the SST will have a non-stop range of 4,030 miles (6448 km).

The Boeing SST will be able to take off and land in less distance than the company's largest subsonic jetliner, the 707-320 Intercontinental.

Handling performance will be superior to current jets. The 20-degree wingsweep position will permit lower landing speeds, shallower approach attitudes, shorter field lengths, and less community noise than existing commercial jets. These inherent advantages, available only with a variable-sweep design, were pointed out to those at the briefing as they sat in the full-scale Boeing SST cockpit mockup.

On a typical transatlantic flight the Model 733 will climb to 20,000 feet (12,096 m) in five minutes, will be traveling 800 miles an hour (1287 km-h) when it reaches 45,000 feet (13,716 m), increase speed to 1450 miles an hour (2333 km-h) at 50,000 feet (15,240 m), then reach sruising speed of 1800 miles an hour (2880 km-h) process will take about 20 minutes, during which time the SST will have traveled 200 to 250 miles (321 to 402 km). Likewise, it will take 20 minutes for the SST to descend from 60,000 feet (18,288 m) to sea level.

NEW LICENSES

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP)—Because a Spaniard landed here nearly 400 years ago, Florida's 1965 automobile tags will be Spanish red and yellow.

The tags will commemorate the 400th anniversary of St. Augustine, America's oldest city. Don Pedro Menendez de Aviles landed here September 8, 1565 to establish a Spanish outpost, and the town has existed continually since that date.

The top of the red tag will carry the legend "400th Anniversary" with the name "Florida" at the bottom. The slogan "Sunshine State" will be dropped because of lack of space.

Public Payroll Listed in State

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Bureau of Census reported here that 127,199 persons on public payrolls in Colorado last October earned a total of $34 million during the month.

The bureau said that 36,628 were on the federal civilian payroll; 64,838 were on city and county payrolls; and 25,733 were on the state payroll. About 30,000 of the workers were part-time employes.

The bureau said the national average of governmental employes was 333 per 10,000 inhabitants. The number in Colorado was 393 per 10,000.

South Rhodesia May Seek Own Independence

By ADRIAN PORTER

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia (AP) — Southern Rhodesia's new white government would like to declare independence from Britain before the British election next fall, but it can't be sure the Southern Rhodesian Parliament will vote to go it alone.

Prime Minister Ian Smith and his far-right supporters in the Rhodesian Front party regard a break with Britain as the only sure way to preserve the rule of 223,000 white settlers over nearly 4 million Africans.

With only a five-seat parliamentary majority, Smith's five day old government would collapse if even a handful of party members dissented. Smith acknowledged the political problem by telling reporters Thursday he isn't giving much thought to a break with Britain now.

Smith did emphasize his opposition to giving Africans any more political power. Britain refuses to consider independence while a white minority government controls this rich gold and asbestos-mining state.

The deadlock was a factor in Prime Minister Winston Field's ouster. The party felt he had not pressed Britain hard enough for independence, and it is counting on Smith to follow a tougher line.

If Smith's government falls on the independence issue, the door will be open for a power bid in the subsequent national election by Sir Roy Welensky, former prime minister of the now abandoned Rhodesian Federation.

Welensky, a moderate white supremacist, said Thursday he could be drafted.

Although he made no commitment for or against a declaration of independence, Welensky warned a break would mean the loss of British veto protection at the United Nations against outside intervention in Southern Rhodesian affairs.

The new government faces some immediate trouble at the United Nations because of its detention Thursday of leading African nationalist Joshua Nkomo and three of his chief associates. The four were ordered confined for a year to a remote game reserve for allegedly stirring up violence and disrupting the economy.

Mobs of African nationalists rioted in protest Thursday, stoning cars, chasing African children out of their schools and blocking roads to Salisbury's Highfield African Township.

Africans and whites exchanged blows after 60 Africans staged a sitdown strike in Salisbury's central square. A white woman and four white men were struck by Africans. Police broke up the demonstration with dogs.

Academy Owns Pen Used By President

The Air Force Academy "got the point" this week!

Thanks to President Lyndon B. Johnson, the academy is now proud owner of the fountain pen (point and all) the President used to sign into law HR 7356. The bill authorizes expansion of the Cadet Wing from its present size of approximately 2,500 to 4,400.

President Johnson affixed his name to the document March 3.

The pen is mounted within a large frame also containing a full color photograph of the President signing the Cadet Wing expansion into law. With him at the time of the signing was his military aide, Army Maj. Gen. C. V. Clifton.

CC Names Pearl To National Gem Organization

Prof. Richard M. Pearl of the geology department at Colorado College has just been appointed the American correspondent of "Societe Belge de Gemmologie," the national professional organization of gem scientists of Belgium.

The appointment was in recognition of his numerous publications and research in the fields of gemology and mineralogy. Because of the importance of the diamond industry to the economy of Belgium, the organization is represented by some of the leading commercial and governmental figures in the country.

Belgium is the 12th nation to award Prof. Pearl special honors for his work and studies in one or more special branches of geology. He also has been appointed the first United States member of the gemological association of Brazil, honorary vice president of the gemological association of Australia and Fellow with distinction of the Gemological Association of Great Britain and Ireland.

While in London in October Prof. and Mrs. Pearl were special guests at the 50th annual meeting of the British association, the president of which is Nobel prize-winning physicist Sir Lawrence Bragg. The meeting was held in historic Goldsmiths Hall. The building, where all the precious metals of Great Britain are hallmarked, never is open to the public.

Heating Baby's Formula Found Unnecessary

The practice of warming a baby's formula before feeding is based upon tradition rather than necessity according to a recent study conducted in Abilene, Texas.

Of 150 babies offered formula described as "cool" or "cold," 89 per cent accepted the formula within one week.

Progress of the infants was as good, and in some instances better, than it was before the change. No harmful effects were seen as a result of feeding the unwarmed formula.

A cool formula was one that was removed from the refrigerator and allowed to stand until it approached room temperature. A cold bottle was one taken directly from the refrigerator and given to a baby.

Usual temperature for cold formulas was about 40 degrees Fahrenheit. The babies were changed gradually from warm to cool to cold bottles. One baby was started on cold formula with no ill effects at age 15 hours while still in a hospital nursery.

In another study, premature infants were fed cold formula while still in the hospital nursery. The study, carried out in the premature unit of Bellvue Hospital in New York City, compared observations made of babies fed warmed formulas to those of babies fed bottles right from the refrigerator.

Little difference was noted in sleep patterns, activity, food intake and weight gain.

Many man-hours and labor formerly spent on formula preparation have already been saved in hospitals by the use of unwarmed formula. Commercially prepared, the formula comes premixed, presterilized and vacuum-sealed in disposable nursing bottles.

At feeding time, the bottle cap is replaced by a sterile nipple and the formula fed at room temperature. The increased efficiency in the nursery made possible by the use of this new method often results in better patient care.

Employment Is Past Low Winter Mark

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Non-agricultural wage and salary employment in the 13 Western states reached the winter's low point in February, the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor statistics said here.

Max Kossoris, director of the Western region for the bureau said that 9,033,000 persons were at work at the end of February.

He said the decline from February amounted only to 8,500 jobs, as losses in retail trade (down 14,000), manufacturing (down 6,300) and construction (down 4,700) were partly offset by gains in other industries, including 14,000 in state and local governments.

The job changes from state to state, he said, were small and generally indicative of usual seasonal trends.

The 13 states are Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

Kossoris also reported that the number of jobs in the state increased by nearly a quarter of a million between mid- February 1963 and 1964, 2.7 per cent. The growth ranged from 1.0 per cent in Wyoming to 7.6 in Nevada. Colorado had a 2.2 per cent increase and New Mexico had a 4.7 per cent increase.

Nevada led Western states in weekly earnings before deductions with $127.41, while New Mexico was low with $88.46. Colorado's average was $109.76.

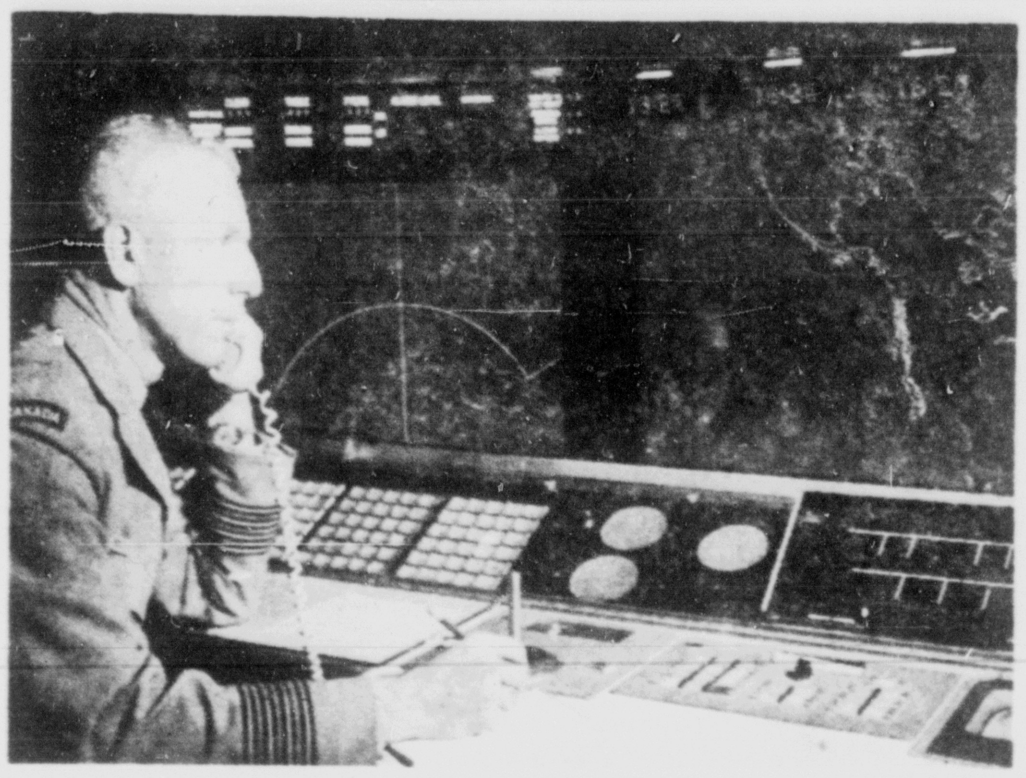
COLORADO SPRINGS—SUNDAY, APRIL 19, 1964 SECTION F



WEAPON AT THE READY — Royal Canadian Air Force Group Captain Albert Banville, senior controller at the North American Air Defense Command operations center, with his weapon at the ready, was on duty during the April 11th incident. In a normal eight-hour shift in charge of the COC, the senior controller can make an approximate 100 separate phone calls in his unceasing effort to keep the NORAD communications network functioning smoothly. In the course of an emergency operation, this figure could easily be doubled. The mechanics of the net seldom fail and it is the continuous checks and double checks that keep the operators at all locations in the NORAD system on their toes and alert.

NORAD Center Alert for All Emergencies

Daily duty in the NORAD combat operations center varies from instantaneous involvement in hair-raising international incidents to what is sometimes the ultimate in monotony and routine.

April 11th, was like any other day on the calendar. The graveyard shift entered the drab, windowless North American Air Defense Command COC blockhouse and received a report from the crew going off duty, "everything normal and routine."

The usual Russian "fishing" trawlers were depicted as on station on the huge NORAD display board. Normal air activity in the North American air entry corridors existed. In the far North all was quiet.

The Ballistic Missile Early Warning display board was completely lacking in activity. A small amount of routine air movement had been spotted off the Florida Coast in the Caribbean waters during the afternoon. It looked like a quiet evening to the NORAD senior controller, Royal Canadian Air Force Group Captain Al Banville.

However, at approximately 6:25 p.m. it changed. Two phone calls, from the Federal Aeronautics Administration headquarters and the Oklahoma City Air Defense Sector controller, kicked off what was a game of electronics hide and seek.

For the next six hours Al Banville and his COC staff were once again involved in the utilization of the complex NORAD electronic system to prevent disaster and save lives.

The fact that a balloon had broken from its moorings was not the primary concern of the FAA. It was trailing 11,000 feet of Neoprene cable according to first reports. It was 115 feet long, 29 feet wide, filled with helium, weighed 1,800 pounds, and, most terrifying of all, the automatic destruct — explosives — devices installed to forestall such runaways had failed to actuate. It was a threat to aviation. Lurking in the back of all minds was the chilling possibility of a contact with a passenger-loaded commercial airliner.

Within minutes after the first reports, COC director USAF Brigadier General Lewis B. Stocking and NORAD commander in chief General John K. Gerhart were notified.

At about 8:20 the USAF Tactical Air Command was alerted by the U.S. Joint Chiefs for a possible destruct action. Weather entered the picture. In the heavy overcast the balloon was lost and picked up with almost automatic regularity.

The deadly serious game continued. NORAD attempted to keep the object under constant surveillance. Florida's Tyndall Air Force Base fighter interceptors were next alerted for a balloon shoot by General Gerhart. The FAA continued to warn commercial aircraft to stay at the ready for evasive action.

After six hours of continuous nerve-tingling operations directed from NORAD, the COC was finally informed at 11:25 that the balloon had been found on the ground and deflated. A Mississippi highway patrol made positive identification and the possible disaster had been averted.

Members of the COC staff and NORAD commander in chief USAF General John K. Gerhart had spent a busy Saturday evening.

Although there had been no threat of a surprise aerospace attack on the North American continent, the NORAD system had once again served a peaceful purpose which paid off for the two nations involved — Canada and the United States.

Local Youths Reaching 18 in Record Numbers

During the next year, El Paso County will have more 18-year-olds in its population than it ever had before.

Government figures show that no less than 2,721 local boys and girls will be arriving at that important age level in the year beginning June, 1964.

According to the figures, which come from the Census Bureau, they are part of an onrushing flood of 3,728,000 youths in the United States who are becoming 18. That is almost a million more than there were last year.

Why the sudden surge in this particular age category? The answer is that these are the children who were born just after World War II, when the tremendous baby boom occurred.

In the course of their growing up, these youngsters descended upon the elementary schools in 1952 and inundated them.

And now the time has come when they will be hitting the colleges and the labor market.

In El Paso County, the report shows, there will be 1,346 boys and 1,375 girls, a total of 2,721, reaching 18 in the 12-month period.

This is 44 per cent more than in the previous year when the local crop of 18-year-olds amounted to 1,896.

The Census Bureau estimates that the number of youths becoming 18 will fall off after June, 1965. The drop will last for three years, after which there will be a gradual increase.

Having arrived at age 18, the matter of the draft arises for the 1,346 El Paso County boys. They will have to register, even though they are not likely to be called up for several years, if at all.

Under a new directive from President Johnson, however, in connection with his youth fitness program, many of them will be given their qualifying examinations, physical and mental, starting July 1st.

One purpose is to discover which ones have health defects that may be corrected by medical or dental treatment.

As to those who fail the mental test, a plan is in the works to raise their educational level in special centers to be set up throughout the country and then to steer them into job training programs.

Civic Leaders To Visit Military Sites

The parade of civic leaders to Colorado Springs from all parts of the U. S. continues unabated.

Today, a group of 30 officials from the Sacramento, California area will arrive in Colorado Springs to visit military installations and the Federal Civil Defense Agency Emergency Operations Center.

This latest contingent of area visitors will include city councilmen, city department heads, county supervisors, and county officials. The Mayors of both North Sacramento and Folsom, Calif. will be in the party.

On Monday, the group will visit the North American Air Defense Command and will meet with the staff of General John K. Gerhart. They will see the combat operations center and will talk with the FCDA national warning center personnel permanently stationed at NORAD.

Later the same day they will visit the Air Force Academy and the Emergency Operations Center run by FCDA in Colorado Springs. They will depart from McClellan Air Force Base and their homes late that afternoon.

The Azores islands are administered as districts of Portugal with the same status as those of the parent nation. There is no central government.

Footprinters Meet; Name New Officers

Election of officers and an address by Sgt. A. E. "Ronnie" Hammer of Los Angeles, Calif., international president of the organization marked a meeting of Colorado Springs Chapter No. 37, International Footprinters Association Friday night at the Acacia Hotel.

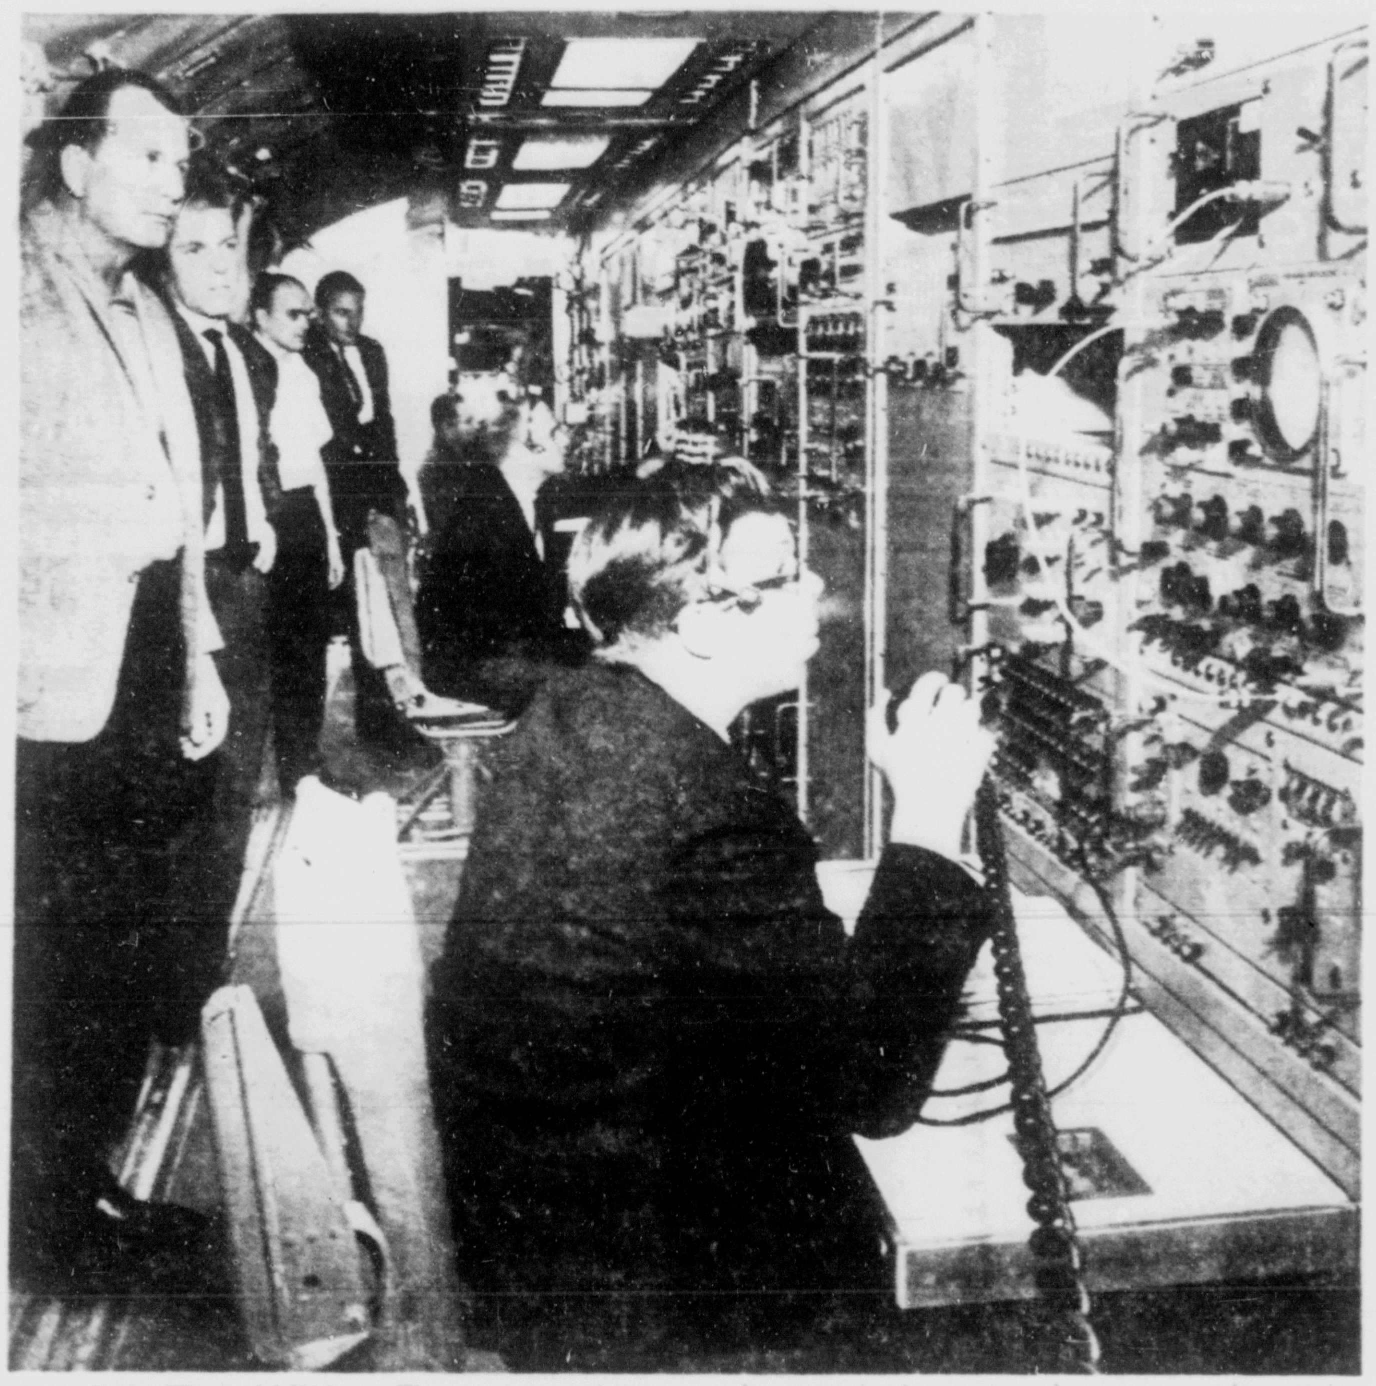
Ban Langella was elected chapter president, succeeding Police Patrolman James O. Hermansen. Other officers elected are: Jack Roeser, deputy district attorney, first vice president; Police Sgt. Thomas E. Hughes, second vice president; Police Patrolman Dale C. DeWeese, third vice president; H. Lawrence Reibscheid, secretary; Don Hinton, treasurer, and State Patrolman Kenneth W. Shiflet, sergeant at arms.

Board members are: John L. Baker, Police Sgt. Horace E. Stokes Sr., John Arminante, Robert Russel, deputy district attorney, Robert Carlisle, state liquor inspector, and Joe Gordon, constable. Robert Isaac, assistant city attorney, was named counsel. Vern Brook was elected Grand Council member.

Willie Metzler, of the Denver Police Department, immediate past president of the IFA, accompanied Hammer at the meeting. Hammer said that the late I. B. "Dad" Bruce was the greatest police chief in the world. He said that the local chapter of the Footprinters, which is also known as the "Dad" Bruce Chapter, is the only chapter in the organization that is named for an individual.

Joe Forman, chief investigator for the Pueblo district attorney's office, fifth grand vice president; Sam Pagano, first vice president of the Pueblo Chapter, and Ralph Manderino, a director of the Pueblo Chapter, attended the meeting.

At the height of the depression in 1933 the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported 24.9 per cent of the work force unemployed.



'SPACECRAFT' CALLING — This equipment being manned by a Bendix technical team in a constellation aircraft is used in tests to simulate the "pass" of a spacecraft over a station of NASA's Manned Space Flight Network that will support the upcoming two-man Gemini missions. Students (left) from NASA's Wallops Station (Va.) training school operated by the Bendix Field Engineering Corporation for NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center are learning to maintain and operate the new Gemini equipment installed at world-wide sites. The panels in the rear contain tracking data and communications units; the center panels contain actual spacecraft equipment that send data—such as blood pressure and pulse rates of astronauts—to the global ground stations. In the foreground is a digital command system simulator through which commands from the station controllers are relayed to the spacecraft. Bendix operates two of these aircraft for NASA. In the coming months before and between the Gemini missions a plane will visit each station about once every three months to conduct training missions, and equipment tests.

POINTED AT SPACE—A new tracking and receiving antenna is studied by a student (right) with the aid of a Bendix instructor at NASA's training school, Wallops Station, Va. Students are being trained to maintain and operate new equipment being installed at stations of the Manned Space Flight Network in support of the upcoming Gemini missions. The antenna will "lock-on" the Gemini spacecraft the moment it comes within range of the station—providing "pinpoint" data on its orbital location. The school is operated by the Bendix Field Engineering Corporation for NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center.

NASA Trains Students For Gemini Space Tracking

"As soon as the Gemini and Apollo space vehicles are a quarter inch off the Cape Kennedy launch pad, these are some of the men who will have the command, communications and operations responsibilities for manned space flight missions."

George Karras, station director at the Manned Space Flight Network engineering and training center, Wallops Island, Va., for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, was speaking.

He pointed at the casually dressed group of students standing in the former naval air station hangar that has been converted into a "school for space" — one of the nation's most exclusive schools.

The students, highly trained electronics engineers and technicians — specialists in the field of space tracking, data processing, and communications — were taking a 10-minute coffee break between classes.

They form one of many classes being trained for the exacting job of maintaining and operating NASA's stations in its Manned Space Flight Network that will support the nation's Gemini and Apollo projects to land men on the moon.

"Our graduates have the life and death responsibility for all manned space flight mission technical information," Karras said. "We have no room for mistakes in our business."

The Wallops facility, in addition to being the NASA engineering and training center, is a tracking station, one of many operated in faraway places around the world by NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center.

Many of the school's students are "old hands" who were "on station" during the Project Mercury flights that ended last year.

When one of these veterans completes his training he could be assigned to his former station, or to a new post.

If he is a new man, he is assigned to one of the stations being equipped to handle the Gemini tracking and communications — Carnarvon, Australia; Kauai, Hawaii; Grand Canary Island; Guaymas, Mexico; Corpus Christi, Texas; Bermuda; Cape Kennedy; or the two tracking ships.

SCHOOL OPENED IN 1961

The school, opened in July, 1961 to train replacement personnel for the Project Mercury network, is operated for NASA by the Bendix Field Engineering Corporation. The instructors and the majority of the students are Bendix staff men.

The current school curriculum is designed to train personnel for the more complex Gemini project.

Gemini is "an entirely different type of mission than Mercury," Karras said. It will be of longer duration, up to 14 days, he said, and two spacecraft will be involved in experiments for a space rendezvous and docking.

In order to accomplish the rendezvous of the manned Gemini capsule with the previously launched unmanned Agena vehicle the network will have to provide data on new orbital paths. Also, it will have to provide tracking, data acquisition, and command control of the Agena and Gemini spacecrafts.

This means that receipt of larger quantities of telemetry data is required for Gemini than Mercury. Pulse code modulation and digital telemetry equipment is replacing the frequency modulation system used for Mercury. This is being done to match the telemetry instrumentation aboard the Gemini spacecraft, as well as to provide more flexibility in handling large quantities of data. It also is more adaptable to the real-time (instantaneous) automatic data processing needed for Gemini.

The objectives of the school, Karras said, are twofold: (1) to make available and provide various levels of training to all supervisory, maintenance, and operating personnel associated with the Manned Space Flight Network, and (2) to provide engineering assistance to the Manned Flight Operations Division at Goddard, concerning testing, modifications, and procedures required for the necessary skill drills and "warm-up" periods prior to the first unmanned Gemini launch.

'STIFF' COURSE

The school program is admittedly "stiff," according to Dave Wilkins, the Bendix maintenance and operations supervisor.

"It has to be," he said. "These men will be manning equipment supplying data that will enable them at all times to know how the booster vehicle and capsule systems are operating, as well as the physical condition of the astronauts."

Once the astronauts are in orbit the network will feed medical information -- blood pressure, body temperatures, and electrocardiograph data — and capsule systems operation, to the flight controllers at the ground stations.

The "feeding" process involves a bewildering (to a layman) array of radar, telemetry and other complex electronic systems and equipment that will keep the flight controllers in touch with the men in the spacecraft.

It is through this electronic network that the "language" of Gemini and Apollo will flow from the spacecraft to the ground systems controllers at the stations of the manned space flight network.

They are learning this "language" at the Wallops school through intensive classroom lectures as well as practical training on the same equipment being installed at the worldwide stations.

The training center uses the most up-to-date teaching methods and techniques, including audio-visual aids.

The school also is equipped to handle up to 50 students in one course, although in some courses there may be only two or three students, but emphasis is the same — intense.

Five classrooms and five laboratories are being used to handle the increasing flow of students as the Gemini program nears high gear. Four hundred and nine students have been trained since the school opened almost three years ago. In 1963 255 students were enrolled, and Wilkins said the 1964 enrollment will be nearly 400 students.

Students accepted include engineering graduates, and highly skilled electronics technicians. Average age of the students is 30 years.

Karras said one of the main requirements is for a man "to have the desire to live, eat and sleep space."

INDOCTRINATION

As each student is accepted he is given an indoctrination sheet that gives him details on such things as transportation to the station, and "dormitory" facilities. Some students stay on the base and others live in motels and hotels nearby.

Oyster lovers can stay at the Hotel Russell, and eat there, too. It's located in nearby Chincoteague (a name that would ring the bell with any oyster lover).

Other information includes the classroom hours, 8 to 12 in the morning, with a half hour lunch period, and from 12:30 to 4:30 in the afternoon five days a week. Courses cover a period of from one to eight weeks. Study periods are carefully regulated with instructors available in a designated classroom.

The courses include instruction on Spacecraft Communications System, Digital Command System, Test Equipment, Basic Digital Logic Techniques, Acquisition Aid Systems, Digital Logic Computer, Pulse Code Modulation Telemetry, Teletype Maintenance & Teletype Operation, Semiconductor Techniques and Applications, and a Maintenance and Operation Supervisor course.

ON-SITE TRAINING

"An on-site program has been instituted," Karras said. "Bendix instructors are sent to Goddard, Houston (NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center), Cape Kennedy, and the Atlantic Missile Range. This represents an extension of the Wallops school activities, and involves the training of both management and technical personnel."

He said once a man leaves the school his training continues "right up to launch day."

Months of flight testing are ahead for the vast tracking and communications network — testing that will be conducted by using two aircraft operated for NASA by the Bendix Radio division, with the engineers and technicians in the roles of the Gemini astronauts. Also station personnel will hold skill drills for operationally qualifying the station.

The aircrafts are being used to provide a complete checkout of each new or modified station in the network. Once the checkout is made the aircraft will simulate a spacecraft "pass" to test the performance of the complete system.

One of the planes is being used now for training at Wallops and Cape Kennedy. The same personnel training will be continued at each site. A plane will visit each station about once every three months to conduct training missions, and tests of the equipment.

For these men behind the astronauts perhaps some praise from Gordon Cooper would best sum it up.

Cooper, discussing the accomplishments of Mercury, said: "It would be difficult to single out any one group or organization for special praise. However, I do think that if one could be mentioned organizationally, certainly I would have mentioned the worldwide network. Without this marvelous organization it might have been a little more than difficult to get back home..."

'KEY' BOARD — A unit of the vital Gemini command console is held by a Bendix instructor for inspection by students at NASA's Wallops Station, Va. electronics training facility. The school, operated by the Bendix Field Engineering Corporation for the Goddard Space Flight Center, is training personnel to staff the worldwide stations of the Manned Space Flight Network that will support the upcoming two-man Gemini missions. These highly trained engineers and technicians will operate the network's command, communications and spacecraft tracking systems. A flight controller, through one of these command center "keyboards," can remotely control certain spacecraft functions. Data from the Gemini spacecraft will be received through equipment (such as shown in background) installed at prime network stations. The pipes leading into the units are air conditioning ducts.

Study Links Body Build With Ulcer

A study of Yale University men suggests that there may be a link between body build and susceptibility to ulcer.

The study was reported by Drs. James C. Niederman, Howard M. Spriro and William H. Sheldon, Yale University School of Medicine, New Haven, in the current Archives on Enviromental Health, published by the American Medical Association.

The slender, linear physique, or ectomorphy, was found to be associated with a higher blood level of pepsin, an enzyme contained in the gastric juice, considered an indicator of ulcer-proneness.

An ulcer was rocognized in 14 of 931 Yale freshmen, aged 16 to 21, during the four-year study.

The levels of blood pepsin in those who developed ulcer disease were "significantly higher" than in those without the disease although the actual number of cases was small, the physicians said.

Elven of the 14 patients had either high or high normal blood pepsin values. The other three cases had low normal values, but in no case did a person with a low blood pepsin develop ulcer disease, according to the report.

This finding supports earlier investigations that blood pepsin measurements may be useful as a marker of susceptibility to ulcer disease, the authors said.

A gradual increase in the mean level of blood pepsin was found to be associated with increasing degrees of ectomorphy, according to the report.

On the other hand, increasing degrees of endomorphy, roundness and softness of build, tended to be associated with decreasing pepsin levels. No definite association was apparent with mesomorphy, a muscular and bony physique.

The association of pepsin levels with ectomorphy "requires further exploration, but raises pertinent questions regarding the possible role of a body build factor in the pathogenesis of duodenal ulcer," the authors concluded.

Springs Realtors Attend Southern Regional Meet

Approximately 25 Realtors from Colorado Springs attended the Southern Regional Conference of the Colorado Association of Real Estate Boards held at Pueblo.

Hugh Ingles of Colorado Springs and a director of the association, announced that the 44th annual convention will be held at the Broadmoor Hotel Oct. 7-10. He said that Ed Mendenhall, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, will be the principal speaker.

Gov. John Love was a surprise visitor to the conference. He told the conferees that "the new assessment law is a major step forward. We hope next session to move in the personal property field to the freeport law and as time goes on to the elimination of the inventory tax."

In reference to the next session, the governor said, "In the area of fair housing there will be one or more bills introduced. This," he declared, "must be done and strengthened without hurting basic rights."

Terry Golden, James Walker and George Wood, all of Colorado Springs, gave short talks as members of a panel in a sales workshop.

Resuscitator Fails to Save Baby

Resuscitator efforts failed on an emergency call Friday, when a two-month old girl died in her crib at 1701 W. Pikes Peak Ave., apparently of natural causes, police said.

A neighbor, and sister of the child's mother stated that she and Mrs. Chavez had been doing "laundry on the ground floor of the building, and that Mrs. Chavez had checked at about 10:30 a.m. and came running back downstairs saying that "her baby was dead."

Dr. Raoul Urich, county coroner, said that an autopsy would be performed to determine the exact cause of death. The body was taken to Nolan Funeral Home.

Text of President's News Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is hte text of an impromptu news conference held Saturday by President Johnson:

President Johnson: I have seen a very inaccurate account of what I am going to say on Monday, so I thought I should tell you something you can rely upon.

My statement on Monday will be a very general statement of our foreign policy. I will be talking especially about our relations with the Soviet Union and about certain other important areas, like Cuba and China.

I will talk about the reponsibility of the candidates, and issues of war and peace, and policies toward Asia, especially Viet Nam; the policy toward Latin America.

I hope the speech will be interesting. But my advice to you is to wait for the speech, itself, and not to put much stock in what you get second-or third-hand. I am still working on it and the report is very inaccurate.

I have today drafted and approved the plans for a very comprehensive study of the draft system and of related manpower policies submitted to me by the secretary of defense. The study will consider alternatives to the present draft selection system, including the possibility of meeting our requirements on an entirely voluntary basis in decade.

Last September, the administration initiated a number of actions to determine immediate steps that could be taken to free young men from doubt about their draft status and what improvements could be made in the administration of the draft law.

This led to the decision which I announced early this year to conduct military service examination of draft, registrations who have finished school at age 18 so these young men then would be able to more intelligently plan their future in erlation to their military service liability.

I now consider it most desirable to study some of the broader aspects of the military service system.

As an original proponent of this act, I continue to be firmly convinced of the soundness of its basic principle, namely that the obligations and privileges of services must be shared equally in accordance with a fair and just system.

I am concerned, as I indicated yesterday in some of my remarks, with the recent indications that in application the system may have drifted from this concept.

I pointed out to the Heart Committee that 49 per cent of our boys were rejected for one reason or another.

It is clear that at the present time the obligation for military service is essential for meeting our military strength requirements.

However, the present law has been in effect for more than 15 years and a very comprehensive study of the system is now indicated.

I have ordered that study immediately. It will be completed in one year. It will deal with the implications of trends in our population, in military manpower needs, and will be a most comprehensive study of the decade of the 70s.

I have some economic news notes. Prices, very good news. Total wholesale prices in March fell by one-tenth of a per cent. This lowered the index to 100.4, on the 1957-59 (base period); one-tenth per cent above the end of '63, five-tenths per cent above a year earlier.

Industrial wholesale prices fell the same as the total index, to a level lower than at the end of '63, or the cyclical through February 1961, but seven-tenths per cent above '63 when this index began to creep up.

Farm prices rose eight-tenths of a per cent, reversing February's sharp decline and staying within last year's range.

Housing starts, this is nonfarm starts, rose almost 1 per cent in March, giving us a new record of 1.6 million units for the first quarter. The last similar quarter was 1.2, pointing toward futther gains in homebuilding activity.

New car sales in the first 10 days of April increased over March about as is normal this time of the year. It averaged 3.7 per cent above the year earlier.

A G.M. executive, Mr. Russell, forecast 1964 model year sales at eight million cars, which could mean a pickup if anything from the pace thus far.

Q. Mr. President, what was the rate for the first quarter on housing?

A. It was a record for the first quarter, a new record, and 1 per cent increase in March.

I have another interesting figure, because of the efforts we are making to keep our employment down and to get a dollar's worth of value for a dollar spent, riding herd very closely on each budget.

I want to call your attention that the money that is being spent between now and June 30 is money that was appropriated last year and was in last year's budget, not in the new budget of 97.9 (billion dollars).

Some of our opposition has pointed out that we are spending more per day now than we spent per day at this time last year.

In view of the fact that Mr. Kennedy's budget last year was $5 billion more than the budget of the year before, it is natural that it would be more.

We have reduced that some, however, and we can't confirm the figure they point to. The budget can't find it and we don't know where they got it.

But we have studied the last six months and the first three months of this year, January, February and March. We spent a million dollars a day less than the last three months of last year.

The latest governmental figures are in. In February of this year regular employment in the federal government dropped 900 from February 1963.

It is significant that it dropped at all because it has generally been increasing.

The total employment which includes accelerated public works, is down 13,000 this February over February of a year ago.

In other words, we have no accelerated public works now and we had about 12,000 on accelerated public works, so we have 13,000 less employes in the federal government at the end of February than we did a year ago.

That figure, I know, will interest Sen. Byrd and others. Regular employment this year is 2,458,000. Regular employment last year was 2,459,000.

Accelerated public works this year is none; accelerated public works last year was 12,156. The average expenditure per business day for the last three months, December through February, is more than $1 million lower than for the last three months, September through November, under President Kennedy.

We had a story yesterday that said Mr. Johnson asked Congress for fiscal '65 appropriations larger than any total demanded or received by President Kennedy or any other president in any previous year.

The facts are that President Kennedy's '64 budget requested appropriations of 107.9 billion. In the months following the submission of his '64 budget he reduced it by $620 million, making it $107.3 billion.

We requested appropriations of 103.8 (billion dollars) compared to 106.3. In the three months since we submitted the budget, we have reduced this request by a net of $39 million and will make further reductions if and when it becomes possible.

Income tax withholding collections in the first quarter have increased $900 million above the same quarter a year ago, reflecting a broadly rising trend in salaries and wages. I don't know how this has affected all of you.

Collections in the first quarter of this year amounted to $10.8 billion, compared to $9.9 billion in the same quarter a year ago, an increase of 9 per cent in what we took in.

The increase a year ago in the first quarter was up $600 million from the year before, and it is up 9 per cent.

The first quarter increase this year, then, is almost 50 per cent above the increase for the same quarter of last year.

Because of the usual lag in the transfer of withholding taxes to the Treasury, the reduction of the withholding rate in March is not reflected in the first quarter collection figures.

As I pointed out, we reduced it from 18 to 14 (per cent), but it was 18 during January, February and most of March.

Excise tax collections in the first quarter reflect rising economic activity. They are up $103 million, or 3.2 per cent over the first quarter of a year ago, despite a sharp drop in cigarette taxes.

Elsewhere another plus sign is in the Federal Reserve Board's industrial production index. It climbed to 128.2 last month, up 5.5 per cent over March 1963.

I am happy to announce the appointment of Eugene Patterson as a new and last member of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission. That fills the last vacancy.

He replaces Robert Storey, former president of the American Bar Association and dean of the Southern Methodist University Law School in Dallas.

He will, I am confident, be a constructive and useful addition to the membership of the commission.

It is charged with heavy responsibilities, and I am proud and pleased Mr. Patterson has agreed to serve as a member of this important body.

He is editor of the Atlanta Constitution, was born in Valdosta, Ga., on Oct. 15, 1923. He is a 1943 graduate of the University of Georgia with an A.B. in journalism.

President's Text Gal 4

He has had an extensive newspaper career serving as a reporter in Texas, Georgia, New York City and London, England. He has been editor of the Atlanta Constitution since 1960, and was executive editor from 1956 to 1960.

Mr Patterson's military service in the Army extended from 1943 to 1947. Entering as a private, he was discharged as a captain receiving the Silver Star and the Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster.

Mr Patterson is married to the former Mary S. Carter and has one daughter. The family resides in Atlanta.

I intend this afternoon to see Dr James Killian Jr., to receive a report on the utilization of scientific and engineering talent in the United States.

This is a most important study and will give us a lot to think about and a good deal to act about. The study was initiated by President Kennedy with the Science Advisory Committee and the National Academy of Sciences to examine the nation's specialized manpower resources.

The National Academy persuaded Dr. Killian to organize a committee of distinguished citizens to study these problems. After a year of hard work they have completed the report. It will be transmitted to me this afternoon and Mr. Reedy will make it available to you as soon as he can do it.

I am appointing Mr. Harold Russell as chairman of the President's Committee on the Handicapped to succeed my old friend, Mel Maas. There will be a biographical sketch on him.

In February 1942 he entered the Army and volunteered for service with the paratroops. He qualified as a paratrooper instructor—attaining the rank of sergeant—and specialized in demolition and explosives. He made more than 50 jumps until an explosion cost him his hands.

He has received many awards including the honor of being chosen by the Junior Chamber of Commerce as one of the Ten Outstanding Young Men of the Year in 1950.

We are very pleased with the progress that is being made on the appropriation bills and their schedule in the House of Representatives.

We are very hopeful we can get the poverty bill reports at an early date and we can make progress on the Medicare bill, as I said yesterday. Thus far we have passed four appropriations bills.

Last year they cut HEW (Health, Education and Welfare) and Labor by 6 per cent, this year by only 2.7, which indicates that we did have a tight budget. The cut would have been similar to last year.

The D. C. appropriation bill last year was reduced by 4.7 (per cent), this year by seven-tenths.

Interior and related agencies were reduced by 8.1 last year, and this year by 2.8. The Treasury-Post Office last year was 2.4 and this year by four-tenths of a per cent.

We regret that there were some references made—which might be interpreted as critical—to our limited expenditures in Labor, Health, Education and Welfare Department appropriations bills.

I said to Mr. Cannon the other day I hope—I knew they wanted economy as much as we did—I hope they wouldn't be too critical of the tight budget we are trying to operate on, and to try to help us instead of criticizing us for not submitting enough.

I think that is about all I have. I am ready to answer any questions that you may want to ask.

Q. Mr. President, to try to clarify something on the draft study, would you say this is is looking toward the possibility of meeting all of our military manpower requirements on a voluntary basis in the next decade?

A. Yes, sir. I don't predict that. I said it looks forward to that. We will have to see the results of the study.

Q. Who will make the study, Mr. President?

A. The policy will be submitted to the secretary of defense and will be made by them with other agencies of the government, like the draft agency and the Labor Department and other related agencies that have interest in it.

Q. Mr. President, can you give us a progress report on the rail situation?

A. Yes. They are meeting late at night. They are still negotiating in the traditional free enterprise manner.

We are very proud of the conduct of both sides.

There have been some statements issued by some people that were not connected with the negotiations, away from here. But almost without exception they have been encouraging and hopeful ones. I think we have had a very productive few days.

I have commended the brotherhoods, the carriers, and I now commend the press for helping us try to settle this in our free enterprise system without burying collective bargaining.

I believe it will be settled that way. I am looking for a report early in the week.

Q. Mr. President, at your news conference the other day when you were asked about your job, you said you enjoyed it and would like to continue. That is about the closest you have come to declaring you are a candidate. When can we expect a formal answer?

A. I would go back and check what I said. I think you are a little bit off on what I said. But you might want to review that, if it interests you a great deal.

When I have any announcement along that line, I will work out some way of getting it to you. Until I do, I don't want to see any party in this country be an opposition party just for the sake of opposition.

I believe it very damaging to the American nation to have opposition for opposition's sake and to have blind opposition.

It grieves me when I see measures that are calculated to benefit all Americans opposed along party lines.

It distresses me to see measures that came up under President Eisenhower's administration that passed with almost solid Republican votes, and the same measures come up with other administrations and they oppose the same measures as opposition votes.

I try to keep as far away from partisanship and campaigning as I can.

I try to keep my political speeches restrained. I have tried to be president of all the people.

I want to do it just as long as I can and stay out of the political arena as long as I can, until I get a program along and do what I think is best for all America; not just best for Democrats, but best for all Americans.

I am keeping my engagements down to practically those that President Kennedy had already made firm commitments on.

I am trying to acknowledge whatever contributions the other party makes to the success of our program, even in those speeches.

I want a pay raise for all the congressmen, because I think they deserve it; not just for the Democratic congressmen. I am going to try to stay out of the campaign field as long as possible.

How long I will be able to do that, I don't know. But when I do decide, if you will give me your number, I will let you know.

Q. Mr. President, this morning Gov. Romney assailed the Supreme Court decision on the separation of state and church, and said this is a sort of weakening of our moral and religious pride in this country. Would you comment on the Supreme Court ruling?

A. I have not seen Romney's comments and I would not want to evaluate them without seeing them.

Q. Mr. President, this morning from Saigon, sir, there are reports that perhaps another coup is imminent and perhaps Secretary Rusk's life may have been threatened. Have you received any reports from the secretary which you might pass on to us?

A. No. We have no such reports, no indication of such reports. A good many things come from Saigon through various routes and I don't want to comment on the reliability or responsibility of them, if we find them unjustified.

Secretary Rusk is one of our most cautious officers. He has admonished other Cabinet members from time to time to be extremely careful in their traveling.

I have no doubt that he will follow my instructions and take care of himself, exercising every possible precaution.

I would not think any good purpose would be served by trying to advertise the fact that he is in imminent danger, and I don't believe he is.

Q. Mr. President, sir, Sen. Goldwater said he was leading the pack for the Republican nomination. Do you think he will be the Republican nominee?

A. I don't keep informed on the details of the Republican aspirants' gains or losses. A good many people talk to me about it and want to ask me a question during visits, to ask me something about it.

One of the men I talked to yesterday, who is very knowledgeable in public affairs, told me that he thought if Sen. Goldwater carried California — and Illinois — as he has, if he carries Texas as he expects to, without any question, and the other Southeastern states, probably having Arizona and some of the states like Montana and Wyoming, that potential was some 632 votes, without one or two other states that they considered could go his way.

It looked like a pretty solid figure, over 500, the way it was going now. I haven't checked it and I don't know anything about it. But when you take the southeastern votes that have indicated they are for him, and add to them Illinois, Texas and California, what he might pick up in some of the other states, I think he will be up there pretty high.

Q. Mr President, you reviewed your position yesterday with Russian ambassador Dobrynin. Did you see any indication that there has been any progress?

A. I wouldn't want to add anything to the statement that we made yesterday. It was a work meeting. We discussed thoroughly and comprehensively a good many of the problems that face our two nations. I think communication between us is important. I hope it will be helpful. I always want to maintain accessibility with everyone, including the press.

Q. Mr. President, sir, to what do you attribute this improved economic outlook?

A. First, we have less men out of work than we have had at any period. We have more capital being invested.

They predict that as a result of the tax bill, investment will exceed, this year, 10 per cent over last year and will produce jobs.

One company alone will produce 18,000 new opportunities. Some of that is already coming in.

I think the general business optimism in the country has brought the Dow Jones averages from something over 700 to an all-time high of 820-odd, which is encouraging to people to go out and build plants that will make jobs.

I think the responsibility of labor and management being able to work out their difficulties with so few strikes, the stability of prices, I think the desire of the government to live frugally and with a reduced budget, I think the passage of the tax bill.

Probably the freedom of the press helped some, because you reported all these things, and the fellows that have to create the jobs and provide the jobs have been optimistic and encouraged about it.

I have often said that this free enterprise system is made up of three parts, the man who has to invest the money, buy the machinery; the man that manages the men that work; and the men that work. All three of them have been pulling pretty good together.

We have talked to both groups and urged them to urge business to reduce prices wherever they could, and, in some instances, it has foregone price increases.

They have made reductions. We hope that the price line will hold and there can be more reductions in some fields.

We are urging business to reduce prices wherever they can.

We are urging labor to look at what they are doing now, and bear in mind that if we should have inflation nobody would be hurt more than the working man who had a frozen salary and had to pay increased prices for everything he consumes.

We had the Council of Economic Advisers maintain contact with both of them, and I have stayed in very close personal contact.

As a matter of fact, I don't know whether it has been made public or not, but if it hasn't, you can check with George (Reedy) and get the date.

Q. Mr. President, could you be a little more specific about lowering prices in terms of which industries? For example, is one of them automobiles?

A. No. We are making it a general proposition as a result of the tax bill.

We hope that wherever profits will permit, every businessman will realize he has an obligation to help us control inflation, and it is to his interest to do so, that he will give us the best mouse trap at the lowest price.

We don't have controls and the government cannot force them to do these things. But we are trying to provide leadership and persuasion.

Q. Mr. President, in regard to this manpower study, could you say that we look forward in the decade of the 70s to a reduced military force?

A. I wouldn't want to anticipate the results of that study before it were begun, but we are going to look into the future.

Of course, it is the hope of everyone that tensions in the world can ease, that we can bring about disarmament, that we can take part of the resources and spend them on a better society and a greater society, as I talked to yesterday.

I didn't have all the time I wanted, but I would urge you, if you haven't got the 18 minutes it takes to read all that speech, to read the first two or three pages and the last two or three pages, and you will see what I am thinking about on our obligations.

I hope during my administration, however long it may be, that I can leave some imprint on having done more for humanity and preserving it, making a better society for all, not only just here but in the entire world.

Q. Mr. President, in view of the damaging effect that the rail strike would have on the economy, if collective bargaining fails to work—

A. That is an iffy question, and you know I don't want to admit it is about to fail to work or predict it wouldn't work.

I assume it will work. When it does not work, you come back in here and I will have a good visit with you on what we are going to do.

But until then I don't know myself. I am not trying to be secretive. But if you were in my place and I were in your place, and I asked you the same question, you would try to answer it the same way I have.

I honestly don't know. I believe and I have faith in this operation.

I was told that I could follow one of two courses. I could call these people over here and appeal to them to continue to negotiate what had been going on for four years, or I could do nothing and let the strike go on.

I looked at what it would cost us, seven million jobs, a 15 per cent drop in the Gross National Product, higher prices all across the board, health hazards, and I decided that I would do what I did do.

Some of them said or indicated that the President didn't do it the right way or he shouldn't have done it, or something.

But I was very pleased and proud of the patriotism of both groups having asserted itself, and that they have worked diligently, as has Dr. Taylor and Mr. Kheel, both of them having made sacrifices.

One of them left a wife that had just been operated on that day. He has been sitting here around the clock almost.

I believe that if it works out the presidency will be—maybe somebody will re-evaluate it and have a little different approach to it.

If it doesn't, most of them would be very sad because, as I said, they never made these statements, never heard of them. If it doesn't work out, all of us will feel that we tried and did our best and failed. I have done that in the past.

Q. Mr. President, I wondered, sir why you called for a report on Monday.

A. Like I called for a report earlier this week. I like to keep up with the progress. I drop in on them occasionally.

I like to see what is going on and make any contributions I can within the freedom of collective bargaining.

We may get one on Tuesday. I hope I will get one on Monday. I hope it is final. There is nothing magic to that dateline.

Q. Mr. President, without looking ahead to your Monday's speech, could you zero in one part of this story today that you referred to? They talked about 45 per cent cutback.

A. I did zero in on in opening my statement, and I think that is all I want to refer to. I just say it is totally inaccurate.

If you can just keep your blood pressure in good shape until Monday, I will give you a very full accurate and detailed thing of what we have in mind.

It does involve a good many things. Decisions are still being made. Every now and then you have people that jump the gun, as we say down there.

The press: Thank you, Mr. President.

NEW COMEDY

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) —ABC-TV has purchased a new situation comedy series for next season titled "Bewitched" starring Elizabeth Montgomery, Dick York and Agnes Moorehead.

EQUIPMENT PROVIDED — John Anderson, stable boss at the YMCA Shady Brook Ranch, shows some of the new equipment that has been provided for this summer's camp. He is working with 15 saddle horses that will be used this year. Five of them are horses that were ridden at the camp last year. Anderson is an experienced horseman, having had his first work with horses in the Swedish cavalry.

Camp Boss Learns Horsemanship In Cavalry

It was in the Sedish Cavalry that John Anderson, who will be stable boss at YMCA Camp Shady Brook this summer, had his first experience with horses. He has never roped them. He has never been a cowboy. But horses, he says, are near to his heart, and he will soon be collecting the 15 riding horses that will be used this year at the camp and getting acquainted with them.

This will mean riding one of them after another. He has to know all about them for the boys who will be attending the YMCA boys' camp at Shady Brook and the girls who will attend the girls' camp there will be in the 8-to-16 year group, and gentle horses will be the rule.

Anderson was also stable boss at the camp last year. He said that five of the horses which will be used this year were used last year. The others will be new to the camp. Some of the equipment, saddles, bridles and other things are new. Horseback riding at the YMCA camp is strongly featured.

There will be a separate stall for each horse in the camp's large stable. The horses will be fed twice a day by Anderson. He will allow no one else to attend to that. The animals will receive no hay. They will live on a special prepared horse diet, which contains hay, corn and other agricultural and mineral ingredients, on which he will rely to keep the horses in perfect condition for saddle use.

There will be three periods for boys at the camp this year. The dates are June 14-20, June 21-July 4 and July 5-18. The dates for the girls' camp, of which there are to be two periods, are July 19-25 and July 26-Aug. 8.

There will be much to do at the "Y" camp besides riding horseback. There will be practice with bow and arrow, learning how to shoot with a rifle. Lone Eagle, the "White Sioux," will be there to tell the boys what the Indian camps in which he grew up as an adopted boy of the Sioux was like. His parents were white missionaries who lost their lives in a smallpox epidemic.

Fishing, of course, will be one of the great attractions. Doctors and nurses will look after the boys and the girls at their respective camps. There will be visitors' days, when the boys or the girls will show their parents about and tell them of the magic of the camp. These annual YMCA summer encampments are eagerly looked forward to each year.

'HOUSING' FOR OYSTERS

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department reports substantial progress in a unique "public housing program" for oysters in Galveston and Trinity bays on the Gulf of Mexico.

So far this year, 7,454 cubic yards of mudshell have been spread on five acres of bay bottom comprising one of the 15 artificial reef sites in the twin bay areas. The mudshell was spread to an average depth of 18 inches at a location of an artificial reef known as "Dry Hole Reef." New "tenants" included 732 barrels of live oysters.

One Car Crash Causes Minor Injury to Driver

A one car accident at 2400 King St., early Saturday caused minor injury to the driver and $500 car damage, police report.

James Benny Townsend, 16, 2511 Robin Dr., received minor cuts on the wrist and was treated at the scene.

Police said the car was going west on extension of King Street on a dirt road leading to an undeveloped area. Townsend told police that a rut caused the car to veer, slide into a ditch and turn over on the side.

Patrolman E. L. Lans ticketed Townsend for careless driving.

Burglar With Literary Bent Is Back Again

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—Nighthawk, a burglar with a literary bent, is back today where his poetic fancy first took wing—Connecticut State Prison.

Frederick Siebold, 27, a slim six-footer who walked into a police stakeout Feb. 20, was sentenced Friday to a 5- to 19-year term in State Prison. He had been convicted on 12 counts of burglary.

For police, the capture ended weeks of frustration as Nighthawk, as he signed the mocking verses he left behind, pulled one burglary after another in downtown New Haven.

After Siebold had been caught, he told a reporter he developed his literary style during an earlier stretch in State Prison. In four years, Siebold said, he had worked up from sportswriter to editor of the prison paper.

His poetic output this winter consisted of doggerel such as this, left in an office he ransacked a few nights before his arrest:

"Sorry to leave such a mess; it's really not fair to thee; but just as unfair have you been; to leave not a shilling for me."

None of Siebold's robberies netted much more than $30, police said. The 12th job, his last, involved $4.

Asked why he left his notes, he replied: "Vainglorious."

Only the Bureaucrats Will Gain

The President of the United States has thrown the full weight of his office behind the latest 15-day delay in the railroad work rules showdown.

It thus appears that the unions still are exerting their power with the help of the politicians to continue wasteful featherbedding practices.

Had Mr. Johnson not forced the delay, the railroads were ready after several years of delay to put into effect the steps recommended by two presidential commissions and an arbitration board to start eliminating costly featherbedding practices.

The union representatives have done everything they could to prevent the new work rules being adopted, and recently they called a strike at the Illinois Central, which caused the remainder of the railroad lines to announce they would put the new work rules into effect.

The Chicago Tribune commented:

"It should be noted that the railroads have always been ready to arbitrate all the unsettled issues. On March 15 they sent a letter to Secretary of Labor Wirtz, urging him to seek a solution and offering four plans, including arbitration. Since the beginning of the dispute more than four years ago the railroads have accepted and the unions have rejected every recommendation by the President of the United States, the secretary of labor, the national mediation board and two special presidential boards.

"The explanation given by the unions for the strike against the Illinois Central is that they want paid holidays, adequate overtime pay, expense allowances for time spent away from home and extra pay for night work. Similar claims have been made in advertisements which charged that management's national negotiators have turned their backs on every proposal to end the deadlock.

"This statement is simply untrue. Management's negotiators have been willing to grant concessions on paid holidays, overtime pay, etc., but insisted that they be considered along with other 'secondary' issues, including the mileage-pay structure, interdivisional runs, combination of road and yard service and other matters involving working conditions. The unions want more pay and expense allowances but balk at every proposal to modernize the work rules."

A national railroad strike, if continued for as long as a week, would put at least 3 million persons out of work and would cause vast inconvenience to half a million railroad commuters. A longer strike, of course, would develop into a national disaster.

A strike would hurt a great many people. But it will not hurt so many as would a continuance of the costly work rules which are making it impossible for some rail lines to continue operation.

If the rail lines fail, the natural "solution" of collectivists would be for the federal government to take over and operate the railroads. If this happens, neither the users of the railroads, the workers or the railroad stockholders will be benefited. Only the bureaucrats have anything to gain from nationalized business. And even their "benefit" would be only temporary. In the long run government managing all business means poverty for all and starvation and death for many.

The last remaining semblance of a free economy will start vanishing if this happens.

Streaks

What usually precedes a streak of good luck is a salesman working like a blue streak.

Don't Fight the Market - Join It

W. T. Piatt of Canon City has written us a letter (see Open Parliament), which he has entitled: "Boom and Bust Markets."

The letter contains a list of grievances which doubtless is accurate enough, but unfortunately the grievances are linked up with Mr. Piatt's view of economic reality in such a way that it is clear the causes of these grievances are entirely beyond Mr. Piatt's present grasp of what is happening and why it is happening.

The first part of his letter in essence merely describes market fluctuations in farm products, notably in feed grains and cattle. When feed goes down in price, there is a tendency for farmers to raise more cattle. The more cattle there are, the lower the prices for beef will fall. When both grain and cattle are at a low price, then profits are squeezed and it is difficult for everyone to make a living.

However, a drought or some other condition may intervene. At this point feed grains become scarce, grain prices rise. Marketable animals are reduced in number and prices of cattle rise.

Having explained this process in far more colorful terms than we have employed, Mr. Piatt assumes that this situation is unique in the cattle and grain business and that if cattle producers and grain dealers were organized along union lines they could overcome their problems.

Actually, this is not so at all. First of all, in spite of Mr. Piatt's beliefs, other businesses and industries are not totally organized. Quite the contrary. Even labor unions, although they specialize in organization, have never been able to organize the American workers. Out of approximately 70 million employed workers in this nation, fewer than 16 million are organized into unions.

As for other businesses and industries, the same fluctuations occur. Manufacturers produce products which sometimes cannot be sold at the prices anticipated. Then prices drop and they are compelled to take losses. Sometimes manufacturers fail to produce some item for which there is a real demand. Then prices rise and there is a shortage of the product.

Precisely the same market forces (supply and demand) are in vogue at all times in all markets. None is unique.

Mr. Piatt describes a situation in which he says that food is rotting in the fields and people are starving in the cities. In the same breath he says there is no demand for food. This is obviously not so. If people are starving for food, then demand for food is high. When the demand is high, then people will pay high prices. When prices are high, then it will pay producers and dealers alike to sell.

Mr. Piatt assumes that all but farmers enjoy monopolies. This, too, is not a valid assumption. The only monopolies that exist in fact are those which are created and protected by the government. Competition is the rule and the very life blood of the market. And if "millions are getting everything for nothing" it is only because the state has intervened, and is taxing some to reward others.

In the market place, assuming no state intervention, there will be no such thing as something for nothing. Indeed, there never is, anyway. Someone always has to pay for everything. There is no such thing as a "free" lunch.

Mr. Piatt also assumes that prices on everything but farm goods are fixed and stable. If he will take the trouble to examine the market place, he will find that the opposite is true. Not only do prices vary all the time, they vary hourly. An examination of the stock and bond market should convince him quickly that fluctuations occur every few minutes. Nor are the prices of commodites fixed and stable. The same item will be sold in half a dozen stores at half a dozen different prices. And next week there will be a "sale" and the prices will come down on some things and may go up on other things. The market is in a constant state of flux. And so it must be.

Good businessmen, whether they are farmers, merchants, manufacturers or professional people, learn to adjust their buying and selling so that a profit margin exists for them. Business people who will not learn this cannot forever remain in business.

And so-called "middle-men" are no exceptions. Plenty of "brokers" go broke every year.

Fortunately Mr. Piatt sees that the so-called New Deal was not an answer to the problem. The New Deal proposed to change the market place but it did not and could not. There is no way it can be changed or eliminated. Even the Soviet Union and Communist China have made this discovery, or are making it.

We would suggest to Mr. Piatt and others who believe as he does, that instead of objecting to the free market an understanding of the market might enable them to make profits not only in spite of fluctuations but because of them.

The laws of supply and demand cannot be repealed by legislative fiat, by organization or by anything else. So why not learn these laws and cooperate with them, instead of fighting them and suffering the consequences?

Social Cruelty In Our Time

By RUSSELL KIRK

President Johnson recently drove his car, full of journalists, at 90 miles an hour in a 70-mile zone, according to reports in two newsmagazines. Also, Mr. Johnson is said to have forced another car off the road, and to have had beer "within easy sipping distance" while he careened across Texas. Though the President covets the label "humanitarian," he appears to relish our modern American equivalent of the Roman arena: vainglory on the crowded highway.

Every age has its own forms of cruelty. In twentieth-century America, we don't indulge in gladiatorial shows; but we are callous concerning certain other forms of slaughter.

This point is made keenly by the late Richard Weaver, whose posthumous book "Visions of Order: the Cultural Crisis of our Time" has just been published. The worst form of contemporary brutality, according to Weaver, is the toll taken by machine culture, and of this, the prime example is death on the road. Weaver puts the point thus:

"Suppose we made an attempt to see the facts with fresh eyes. In 1960, in this country alone, about 38,000 lives were taken by automobile accidents. But we cannot stop with this figure. There occurred along with these deaths tens of thousands of injuries, some of them permanently disabling. The same thing goes on in all of the modern Western countries. A recent Reuters dispatch from London states that since the turn of the century 235,000 persons have been killed on British roads, and the total figure for traffic casualties of all sorts is computed at 7,500,000. To such figures there must be added the numbers taken by airplane accidents. I do not have the statistics for civilian losses, but a statement given out not long ago by the United States Air Force shows that in peace time the annual number of fatalities from air accidents is about 550 young men — these being, of course, among the physically finest of the race."

Just so. We superior moderns talk about the comparative indifference of medieval people to the occasional ravages of the plague: they accepted such visitations as part of the nature of things. But we Americans of 1964 accept the terrible travel-toll as part of the nature of things. At least men of the Middle Ages did nothing to increase the rate of death from the plague. But we moderns, proudly scientific and rational, actually increase the horsepower of our automobiles, and build great highways, monotonous and straight, which invite speeding and lull to sleep the tired motorist by their deceptive smoothness and breadth. And while medieval folk experienced the plague only at considerable intervals, we live with this horror every day of every year. Who's irrational and apathetic?

"A society should have very strong reasons for being willing to sacrifice 40,000 lives a year and take care of several hundred thousand wounded," my old friend Weaver continues. "It certainly does not regard each human life as infinitely precious if it is willing to trade about 40,000 annually for something that is certainly not infinite . . . . Comfort and convenience, to which we should add a love of mobility, have made themselves a new Moloch, and the idol demands of his worshippers not only the annual toll of life but also a restlessness and superficiality of spirit."

At least the general Roman public was immune from the slaughter of gladiatorial sports. But the most cautious driver, or the most innocent child-pedestrian, may be twisted into a bloody ruin any day by some speed-mad imbecile. There's social cruelty for you.

How to Grow a Money Tree

By HARRY BROWNE

Wouldn't it be wonderful if you had a money tree?

Just think: you'd never have to work again — except to pick whatever money you needed off the tree.

Doesn't that sound heavenly?

But you're not selfish, are you? While we're dreaming, let's extend our wish to include a money tree for everyone. Then no one would have to work. We'd each have all the money we need.

Yes, it's a mean old world without money trees. Why did not the Creator see fit to give one to each of us?

But wait a minute! We have a government in Washington that's equipped with a printing press, plenty of paper and ink, and a determination to promote our "welfare." Why doesn't the government do something about the money shortage? Why not print enough money so that no one will have to work again?

Sound ridiculous?

Of course!

ITS REAL VALUE

In the first place, money is not wealth; it is only a means of exchange. Real wealth consists of such things as goods and services, personal property. The value of money is only in what it will purchase. What good is a million dollars if inflation cuts its buying power to one loaf of bread?

You and I know that the only way you can have anything is to work for it. To have things, you must produce them — or produce something you can exchange for what you want. We realize that the more money there is in circulation, the less each dollar will buy. And no matter how much money we "grow," we still have to produce more products and services in order to be a wealthier nation.

Isn't that right?

Well then, what in the world are they trying to prove in Washington? Why try to make us believe the government can return $11 billion to us in the form of a "tax cut" — and yet not cut down on its own spending at the same time? How can we be any richer just because an extra $11 billion in printed money has been put into circulation? Obviously, what is needed is more production, not more paper money.

No, money trees are not for us. They're for children reading fairy tales and for politicians — but not for grown-up men and women.

OUR TRUE WEALTH

For each of us has something far more valuable than a money tree. We each have arms and legs and a mind that can conceive of ideas. We can grow and prosper by increasing our talents and energies.

Money trees soon die because they're unreal to begin with. But man's amibtion is real and limitless. In a free economy, the sky's not even the limit. There's nothing you can't do, if you really want to do it — and if it's not infringing upon the property of another.

So what we really need from Washington is the freedom to produce more. We need an end to foreign aid and farm subsidies and urban renewal and public power and all of the rest of the fairy-tale programs that are taking our wealth from us. What we need is the freedom to grow and prosper on our own.

That freedom is worth a million money trees. And it can be yours if you're willing to work to obtain it.

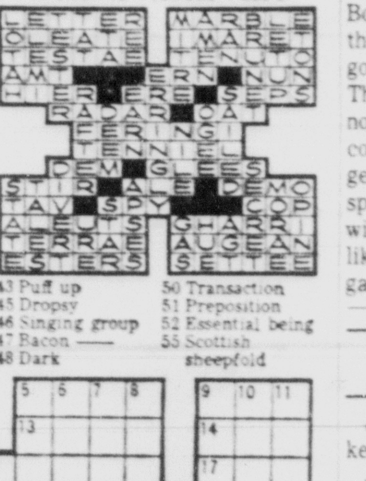
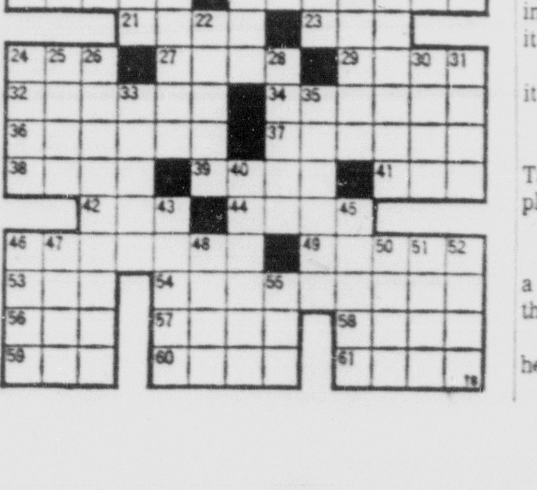
Answer to Previous Puzzle





Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

QUESTION No. 482: "Why does each worker need to produce his own wages or profits in order to improve the well being of mankind on this earth?"

ANSWER: There are several reasons for this. First, is that wages must come out of production. There is no wage fund from which they can continuously come. Each person should get all he produces, no more, no less. The profits a man gets are just for efficiency. If he is not efficient, there are no profits.

Besides the fact that each man must produce his own wages, unless some one else's wages are reduced to pay him more than he produces, when each man knows he is getting all he produces he will put forth more effort to improve his skills and his production. He will always be trying to do a harder job that is needed more than one with little skill.

If the man with little skill, like loading a truck, gets as much wage as a man who has spent years in learning a profession or a trade, there is not much incentive for a man to make an effort to study in order to improve his well being if by collectivism and threats of damage by labor unions supported by the government he can get as much for unskilled labor.

Another reason is that man will be much more moral, have much more self-respect for himself, be true to himself — and therefore can't be false to any man — if he does not try to get more than he produces.

The only way to determine what each man produces we can think of, is to let all people help establish the value of different production. The man who believes that all men are equally free to try to improve their well being by creative action is much happier than the man who gets his material well being by collusion, collectivism, and by threats of force.

Happiness is a product of self-respect, of fully using one's talents. Accomplishment should be the aim; that is, doing the best one can should be the aim rather than seeking happiness. If one seeks happiness and pleasure, it will flee from him. If he seeks to use the talents God gave him, no matter whether they be one or ten, he will be happy. He will have courage, he will have friends and will get more out of life.

That is the reason each worker should produce his own wages and profits in order to improve the well being of mankind on this earth.

Questions are limited to general human relations questions that will improve the well-being of all mankind on this earth.

Nation's Press

In the Wake of The Baker Case

From Santa Ana (Calif.) Register

If the senators who have just about closed the books (that were never opened very far, anyway) on the Bobby Baker case hope that the whole thing will now blow over and everybody forget about it, they will be absolutely right.

Nobody except a few reporters and editors and Republicans really got excited about this latest example of influence peddling and questionable conduct by a government employe, one of a long line of similar cases that began at least as long ago as 1789 in the United States.

Most people apparently still don't know what the Baker case was all about, nor do they care.

One thing the senators should seriously consider, however, is that many people are quite ready to believe that the affair extended far beyond the little circle in which Bobby Baker swung his weight. Ending the investigation with too many questions unanswered will only encourage such thinking.

It does indeed extend beyond Bobby Baker in the sense that the entire Senate — the entire government — will be suspect. This being an election year, it is not unlikely that during the course of the campaign, vague, generalized charges of widespread government corruption will assail the national nostrils like fetid odors from half-buried garbage.

BOOM AND BUST MARKETS

To the Editor:

This is what happens alternately to livestock and feed growers. It has happened a dozen or more times in my short life time of only 88 years. I have been the victim more often than the victor by not knowing of these alternates. It, and the fluctuating prices that go along with it, besides natural hazards, is the cause of about 75 per cent of both ending on the welfare or pensions.

This is it. We have good and bad growing seasons, varying from one to three years. When the good seasons come, there is a big crop of range grass, grain and hay. Range stock then are mostly kept on grass; therefore an over supply of grain and hay is not needed. Many have to sell out but few are willing to buy as it might rot on their hands. If it didn't and the next year the price was higher, the state, federal, capital gains and other taxes would take the possible profits out of speculation so that stalls, speculators and prices stumble far below the cost of production.

A big percentage of farmers are renters. They often borrow money to pay expenses, giving a mortgage on his share of the crop and his tools as security. Low prices, or crop destroyed, it takes both to pay his debts. Other victims are those who have made part payment on a farm or livestock, and make periodical payments, taxes and interest. One or more of these good seasons and low prices, followed by a poor season and little or none to sell, finishes him off the same as the share cropper. Following either of these crises, the auctioneers are the only ones who make money out of it. They get a fixed commission. The storms, drouth, markets and debts don't affect them. In the worst times, these farm sales are the greatest pastime in most districts. Usually these families are out of credit and money and have to work in town or go on welfare or pension, steal or go to jail.

That is the fate of grain and feed growers. Now what happens to livestock producers?

Cheap feed prompts them to increase the production of more cattle. The feed grower also takes on more cattle in the hope of getting more out of his feed, and all keep every heifer calf to raise more and more cattle. As the price of feed goes down, the price of cattle goes up. A few years of that and there are too many cattle. Such seasons are always followed by drouth periods, when the price of feed soars and the price of cattle goes down — and the cattleman, too. Then the livestock folks get the same deal as the feed growers. While either is making it, the other is going broke. And in time, 75 per cent or more of all of them go broke. It doesn't matter how efficient one is in production of either livestock or feed growing, the money or education one has, they cannot avoid these extremes. No matter how big the operator is, he goes down just the same. These unpredictable seasons and prices make it more of a gamble than playing dice.

Before the New Deal came in 1932, just what I have related took place periodically. Gradually the wealth fell into the hands of people who did business on a fixed profit margin, wages or fees. They received a profit all the time from those who had a loss part or all the time. Evidently in a system like that, all values would get into the hands of those receiving the fixed incomes. They had a full pocketbook and full stomach. They quit buying. The poor people had both an empty pocketbook and empty stomachs, and they couldn't buy. So there was no demand according to the free market jugglers. Food rotting in the fields, people starving in the cities. Livestock 2 cents per pound, grain 10 cents per bushel. Tramps, hoboes and bums by the millions. Up to 1932 that was the result of the dealer free market system in which the price of grain varied from 10 cents to $2.50 per bushel and everything along with it.

Since farming before 1932 was the biggest production industry and on it the prosperity of city folks developed, the crises hit them also. Factories shut down, merchants, banks and investors went broke by the millions. Except killing, only atomic bombs economically could affect such havoc. All this periodically taking place in this United States, where we have the resources, facilities for production and the "know how" to do or make more than we need or can use!

The New Deal was based on the fact that there must be stabilization of production and prices to have security. That cannot be done without authority to adjust production distribution and prices as required to satisfy supply and demand. They did that with most all other vocations except food growers, who are rated 130 per cent above prewar, while other groups are getting 200 per cent to 1000 per cent above prewar. Fixed wages are 10 times higher, profits 3 to 5 times higher. Except a few farmers getting support prices, all the others are at prewar, which in effect makes the farmers' dollar worth 25 cents parity buying power. They still have the people most essential for human existence getting the least . . . the age-old system of boost, boom, bust and plunder that make life a gamble.

Now, why did not the food growers get the price boost the other vocations did? It was because the other vocations are organized. Collectively they have a 12 to one vote. Each group practically has a monopoly of their kind. That means they can set a fixed profit, wage or fee on their activities and with any increased cost to either, they can increase theirs onto others. All want more pay for less and easier work. Millions are getting everything for nothing. At the same time these economic idiots are demanding lower taxes and prices for what they buy. All groups have their pressure agents in our legislatures to confuse and conspire to get more and more for less and less. Farmers are not organized like that. The Farmers Union proposes parity prices with other industries. The Farm Bureau wants the old boost, boom and bust market system controlled 100 per cent by market jugglers. That makes farming such a gamble. All efforts to get parity prices have been killed by the gripe of that organization that is backed with unlimited capital — because it is this graft and plunder market system that enables the dealers and wage workers to get their millions of dollars.

Now that labor is organized and able to hike their wages as taxes and the cost of everything gets higher, there is a cold war price hiking contest between organized labor and capital. They take it out of each other, so they take it out of the food producers by driving the price down to them and raising prices to consumers. The hike in wages is about 10 times higher than prewar. The cost of living is about 5 times higher. The big gripe of the Farm Bureau is that it is the government subsidies that makes food cost more. There are no subsidies on fruits, vegetables and poultry, and the price is down to prewar. The only farmers getting higher prices are those who are getting subsidies. Anyhow, the increased prices farmers get averages 130 per cent while the increased pay for other industries is 300 per cent to 1000 per cent higher! The bureau brainwashed the wheat farmers that if they got Uncle Sam out of the price deal, they could grow wheat unlimited and get $2.00 or more a bushel, and they would get a better deal from the organized, legalized market pirates. Because of the vote of those deluded wheat farmers, they use it as a club for all farmers, and so brainwashed the city folks that there is no hope but pensions, welfare, jail or nut house for farmers. With the vote 12 to 1, and prices 3 to one against him, he has the chance to survive as sheep have in a gang of wolves.

What should be done about it? The answer is easy and evident. All other vocations and groups are organized and have a legalized monopoly of their kind which enables them to adjust their production, services, etc., to probable consumptive requirement, plus all the trade will pay or has to pay. One can easily find this out by going in different stores to find all prices for the same kind, amount and quality the same price. While farm prices vary every day there is no such variation in the retail price. Observe the farm market reports. Prices up or down one cent or more every day. Since it is not so retail, who gets that 2-cent margin? Merchants are loaded with surpluses, bankers with money begging people to borrow and buy . . pay later, as if somehow in the future $20 bills will grow on trees. Do their prices vary every day?

There are food producers in all districts who keep book accounts which show the exact cost of production over a period of years. We have efficient data giving average consumption. So the solution is to set farm prices on the average cost of production for the part consumed in the U.S. If there is a surplus over an emergency need, it could be shipped out to other countries. If that could not be done, then let those most responsible for the surplus keep it on the farm or burn it up. There should be a law prohibiting the importation of any thing we make or do as long as we have enough of our own. Our foreign trade should be that if either had what the other needed and didn't have, there would be free trade or exchange. . without duties or tariff (a tariff just means tear up).

Higher prices has no meaning in use values. A loaf of bread has no more food value or different substance content at $1.00 a loaf than 10 cents. Higher prices just means a higher price level. Raising prices is a system of robbing people not so exciting as sticking a gun in the ribs. Just a phony way of thinking one is worth more. I have sold peaches at 25 cents per bushel. I see them on grocers' shelves at times for 50 cents per pound.

We have spent billions of dollars in research to find out the facts and needs of life. But 75 per cent or more of the people don't know it and cling to old ancient illusions and suppositions originated when people had no facts of this kind and were governed by the physical appearances of things and instinct. To them the earth was flat and the sun went from East to West, but no knowledge as to how it got back East again. As long as we keep up this system of graft, grab and plundering each other just that long, we will have the same results.

The cow bells are ringing, the cattlemen and consumers are howling and middlemen are singing —ooo, ekee, ke, la, laa. Prices going down to food producers and up to consumers. Sure, they never had it so good. Cattle, hogs and growers of price supported crops are getting about double prewar prices. Most all other crops and poultry are down to prewars. Growers get 1 to 3 cents for vegetables that retail as high as 45 cents. Farmers get $25 to $45 a ton for tomatoes. Retail at 45 cents per lb. is $900 a ton! And the president of the Farm Bureau says it is the government subsidies that makes the high cost of food. Organized labor, protected by the closed shop law, has hiked their wages from $3 a day to $3 an hour. The middle man charges it right back to them in 3 to 5 times more for what they buy. Labor can afford to pay it because they get the high wages. With their fixed wages, prices and fees and profits 3 to 5 times higher, it compels food growers to pay the same while percentage-wise their dollar has only

The Local Scene

From A to Z

By RUFUS L. PORTER

From A to Z there are 266 manufacturers, processers and service industries in Colorado Springs and vicinity. This includes 14 with over 100 employees; some of them have several hundred. Altogether, it adds up to quite a number of jobs.

Besides this, there are 19 research organizations, 42 administrative headquarters and office-type organizations, 5 with more than 100 employees; 40 institutions and three major military installations with approximately 5,416 employees.

The above figures are subject to revision upwards without notice, as the community continues to expand at a rapid rate. Building permits, both for industrial purposes and for new homes, are breaking all previous records, as they have been doing for the past several years.

In order to create a more attractive climate for new businesses and industries the Colorado Springs Industrial Foundation was formed on April 30, 1958, as a non-profit corporation with the purpose of assisting the Chamber of Commerce in furthering the industrial development of the Pikes Peak Region.

The president of the foundation says that his organization intends to assist in creating new industrial payrolls in Colorado Springs by two primary programs:

1) "By developing desirable industrial sites and assisting others in such developments so that they can be made available at reasonable prices.

2) "By financing and constructing necessary buildings for industries on long-term lease with option to buy."

The foundation plans to raise the necessary capital for each specific project from local citizens. The Chamber of Commerce provided the foundation with sufficient funds to finance the development of industrial sites in the Pikes Peak Industrial Park and the support of the establishment of the park's first industry — Kaman Nuclear. The foundation does not assist in selling stock or provide capital or operating funds for the new industries.

Besides the Pikes Peak Industrial Park, there are seven other industrial parks and districts in the area, with others on the planning boards. Information about the Pikes Peak Industrial Park can be obtained at the Chamber of Commerce offices, 112½ East Pikes Peak.

The others can be reached as follows:

Alexander Industrial Park, Box 176, Lockport, Illinois.

Cimarron Hills, 201 Independence Building.

Holland Industrial Center, 3801 North Sinton Road.

Lawrence and Stegall Colorado Properties, 15 Sixth Street.

Roswell Industrial Park, Rock Island Railroad Room 1003, LaSalle Street Station, Chicago, Ill.

Rustic Hills Industrial Park, 2601 East Platte Avenue.

Shepard Land Company and Industrial Area, 101 North Union Boulevard.

These industrial parks have all been organized, developed and financed by private enterprise companies with the encouragement and backing of the Chamber of Commerce. And with the possible exception of two that were announced in January, they all have one or more plants located in their centers and are prepared for others.

"The Colorado Springs Industrial Foundation completed the installation of a 13,000-foot sewer line costing over $71,000 on February 26, 1964, to serve the new Hewlett-Packard plant and other industries and areas in or near the Pikes Peak Industrial Park" (Chamber of Commerce bulletin). All statistics in this article are from the same source.

To realize how much the Chamber is doing for the region, it is a good idea to visit its offices and read some of the literature it puts out for information to industrialists, businessmen, tourists and other interested parties, including the writer.

The next time you hear some native making derogatory remarks about the Chamber of Commerce (and you will), give him an earful. The Chamber has a competent staff working hard the year around for the benefit of us all.

25 to 35 cent comparative buy value. This market system put 50 per cent of farmers out in 1930; the New Deal, one-half of those left. Now there are only 4 million to feed 19 million people! How long can they do it with all the odds against him?

A CODE

To the Editor:

In accordance with long custom, Washington's Farewell address was read again before both Houses of our National Congress this year. His words, spoken September 17, 1796 are as timely as they were on the occasion of Lincoln's Address at Gettysburg.

We are reminded again, as we should be, that a unique fusion of far-sighted wisdom and compassionate knowledge of the slow evolution of human nature has combined within the understanding of one man, at appropriate times throughout history. These men have rescued and restored codes of ethical human nature. Refreshed and, sometimes enhanced, these high standards have inspired mankind to try, once more, to protect these moves of the human society.

With improving translation of the most primitive writings we find numerous attempts to spell out and uphold this code. We note each failure was caused in part by faults in the legal structure designed to protect the basic code. Some failures lay within the code which was seldom sufficiently comprehensive.

Eventually man learned that a complete and successful code of Ethos was formed by and geared to the cumulative effect of man's intelligent understanding of past experience. This discovery finally led to recognition that our social rules, or laws, must consist of several parts. First, that a firm base of stated principles be established as a moral code of a society. Second, that a complete knowledge of all former codes be available to insure proper form of our own code. Third, those laws enacted to protect this proposed social base be unchanging within human concept of time. Fourth, a legal structure erected upon this firm base must be carefully designed to form a society conforming to the base; perpetuate the structure; provide that changes might be made in the structure from time to time but only after defined procedures; and contain means of restraining individuals who might choose to prey on human weakness. Fifth, to restrain those who might seek to subvert the entire structure to favor any philosophy which had, historically proven unworkable. Sixth, to carefully enumerate and spell out certain rights and freedoms of the individual citizen; declare these irrevocable, under God and not subject to infringement or amendment.

The men who composed our Constitutional Convention possessed full knowledge of past efforts and failures to create such a society. Many of their ancestors had come to this new continent to avoid evils of previous failures. After a century and a half of shared hardships, conflicts and "down to earth" experience in a primitive environment common to all, these men wrote and signed a Declaration of Independence, setting forth a code of principles under God. They fought and won a war to support that code and elected delegates to a convention at which our Constitution was formed. The cumulative experience during this 150 years in our New World was thus added to the theory of a government brought here from Europe, and resulted in a basic document even more realistic and detailed than the original concept.

For almost two centuries this Constitution has provided a government of law and has successfully withstood attack from within and without.

It is now proposed to "study" our Constitution with a view of "bringing it up to date" from "horse and buggy days." We ask these groups if their qualifications are superior to those who carefully contrived this successful and oldest Constitution in the world? Exactly what changes are necessary? Is it our code of moral values? Is it the carefully conceived and enumerated rights and freedoms guaranteed to the individual, under God? Exactly where and how has our Constitution failed during almost two centuries covering the widest advance of technology in history? Have the Ten Commandments interfered with our entry into space?

Legal amendments and changes in our government of law under God are slow. Our forefathers planned it that way! Our Congressional procedures include and are well aware of those principles intended to preclude ill considered or rash changes. We would do well to write a letter of thanks to our loyal and hardworking Congress through our elected representatives in that body. We should express our confidence that these members, selected by the people, will never accept those "simple" changes in a Constitution which removed our society from the Dark Ages, and its aftermath.

TAX RECORD

To the Editor:

It is a public record of taxes unpaid published in your paper each year that makes me wonder if a list of the state and federal taxes payable each year by corporations and individuals should not be listed as soon after April 15 as is possible, as a matter of public record also. If we individuals could see a listing of the taxes removed from El Paso County to line the coffers of the state and federal funds on a collective basis, we might fully realize the impact of the controls we have on our "aching backs."

If started by your newspaper on a local basis, it might be expanded into a statewide or even a government-wide total of the tributes paid each year to relinquish our controls on our lives, a tribute to our lack of interest in "freedom."

"Misery loves company," but this tax program is getting "d—n miserable."

FRED A. LANDER
228 N. Cascade

Editor's note: If Fred Lander's suggestion were carried out, it would certainly serve to inform us as to the size and scope of the taxes being paid in Colorado Springs by ourselves and our neighbors.

The problem here is that it might constitute an invasion of privacy. Income tax and personal property tax information is enormously revealing. Men in business frequently do not want their competitors to know what tax they are paying because it reflects on the gross business they are doing. Likewise, persons in private life do not want their neighbors to know the extent of their incomes or possibly the lack of extent of those incomes.

Therefore, while the net effect of such information would serve to alarm us all, the overall situation would result in further inroads against our privacy.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—How large a commercial ship can pass thru the Panama Canal?

A—The ore carrier San Juan Prospector, largest commercial vessel ever to go through the Panama Canal, squeezed into Miraflores Lock with less than 2 feet to spare on each side. The ship is 106 feet, 4 inches wide, the locks, 110 feet.

Q—How many different products come from trees?

A—The products from trees are almost countless — it is estimated that there are more than 9,000 uses for paper and paper pulp alone.

Unions More Avid For Total Support

By OSCAR COOLEY

Associate Professor of Economics
Ohio Northern University

Recent strikes at Ashtabula and Bluffton, Ohio, illustrate that although the union representatives usually demand higher wages, this is not the part of the package they covet most. Rather it is a sop to win the support of the many—often a majority—of the workers who are still outside if not positively opposed to the union.

The kernel of the package is the demand for a union shop and for "union security," that is certainty that all the workers will belong to the union and pay their dues. As the union president at Bluffton was quoted as saying:

"We'd be willing to negotiate on nearly every other point if we can get compulsory union membership and dues checkoff." This suggests that the union is not over-popular with the workers.

Pursuing this demand, the electrical workers union pressed a strike at the Triplett Electrical Instrument Company which resulted in nails being strewed in roadways, homes of non-strikers vandalized, and their persons threatened.

A similar demand was the main issue of the strike at the Molded Fiber Glass Body Company, Ashtabula, which was marked by several bombings as well as picket-line violence.

There was a time when it was illegal for workers to join together to sell their labor. This was a denial of basic freedoms, namely the freedoms to assemble, organize, and buy and sell. Workers bitterly resented this restraint on their liberty, as well they might, and legislators lifted the bans.

Workers were then free to organize. Employers also were free to hire and fire and to set up as a condition of employment that the employe shall not belong to a union. A contract containing such a condition was called a "yellow-dog contract."

That period ended in 1932 when Congress, egged on by the unions with their power at the ballot-box, passed the Norris-LaGuardia act, which forbade yellow-dog contracts.

This law invaded the freedom of contract. However, it was not greatly opposed by the public because in the 1930's many workers had lost their jobs and there was sympathy for them and a feeling that they should not be discouraged from organizing.

The Norris-LaGuardia act formed a precedent for the right-to-work laws. Antiunion people as much as said: "It's a poor rule that does not work both ways. We'll get laws passed in each state saying that no employer shall set up as a condition of employment that employes shall belong to a union. We'll copy the Norris-LaGuardia act but drop the word 'not' before 'belong.'" This has been done in some 19 states.

The union people attack these laws, seeing them as roadblocks to their cherished goal of union security. But in fact the unionists set the pattern for the right-to-work laws when they wrote the Norris-La Guardia act. All their opponents had to do was to drop the word "not."

Both Norris-LaGuardia and right-to work limit the freedom of employer and employe to contract, that is, to agree on sale terms mutually satisfactory to both. This contract is their business, nobody's else, and yet the government, a third party, elbows its way in and tells them what kind of contract they shall or shall not make.

Employers and employes alike should resent these laws since both have a vital interest in preserving freedom of contract. Such freedom often involves freedom of association, the very freedom that unions a century ago fought so hard to win. Freedom of association is the freedom to cooperate in a joint activity such as bargaining with an employer. If one is to be free to contract he must be free to contract either as an individual or as one of a group.

It should be remembered too that the freedom to contract, associate, co-operate, or do anything else is also the freedom NOT to do these things. Freedom means choice. If a worker is to be free to join a union, he must also be free NOT to join.

The Civil-Rights Bill: Will There Be Changes?

As senate debate on the Civil Rights bill continues, supporters plan to continue a point-by-point rebuttal of Southern arguments against its passage. Here is a detailed summary of the measure, with a summary of the arguments over the bill's most controversial provisions.

Title I—Voting Rights

Prohibits voting registrars from applying different standards in judging white and Negro applicants to vote in Federal elections, and bans disqualification for inconsequential errors, such as misstating a father's birth date. Literacy tests used to determine eligibility would have to be given in writing (unless applicant requests an oral test) and transcripts made available on demand to unsuccessful applicants contesting their disqualification. A sixth-grade education is presumed to be proof of literacy in court cases. Special three-judge Federal courts, meeting at the request of the U.S. Attorney General or at the request of the state or local officials charged with discrimination, would speed cases alleging voting bias. Appeals would go directly to the U.S. Supreme Court.

This is the bill's most controversial section and the one most closely aligned to the political future of President Johnson. This is the essential backbone of the Civil Rights bill. Southerners as well as many in the North object. There is no question that Title II, if approved, would erode property rights, interfering with any businessman's right to choose his own customers. Businessmen as a whole distrust this provision. The recent showing of Governor Wallace in the Wisconsin primaries indicates rather clearly that concern over the Civil Rights bill, and this measure in particular, is widespread.

Some, including Republican Everett M. Dirksen, argue in favor of making this provision "voluntary" instead of mandatory. There is a possibility that Title II will be "compromised" by inserting a provision for a time lag between the date of the alleged violation and court action.

Title II—Public Accommodations

Forbids discrimination based on race, color, religion, or national origin in hotels, motels, restaurants, gasoline stations, theaters, and sports arenas. Not covered: Owner-occupied rooming houses with five or fewer rooms for rent, private clubs, and retail stores. But establishments situated on the premises or establishments covered by the provision also would be covered. Examples: A barber shop in a hotel couldn't turn away Negroes, nor could a department store with a lunch counter. Anyone denied access could seek a court order prohibiting the discrimination, or the Attorney General could do so if he felt that the purpose of the act would be "materially furthered" by his intervention.

Title III—Public Facilities

Forbids discrimination in public facilities owned, operated, or maintained by state or local governments, such as parks, playgrounds, swimming pools, or libraries. The Attorney General would be empowered to bring suits to desegregate such facilities if he is satisfied that aggrieved persons cannot themselves sue because of limited finances or fear of reprisals (loss of job, vandalism, etc.).

Dixie forces label Title VI "economic blackmail." However, this measure has the most Republican support. Actually, the South could win great stature and general support for defeating the measure entirely if a willingness to get along without federal subsidy of any kind were shown.

Title IV—School Desegregation

Bans discrimination in public schools and in institutions of higher learning or vocational schools operated "wholly or predominantly from or through the use of governmental funds or property." The Attorney General could initiate desegregation suits if aggrieved persons were unable to do so. The provision also would make available to communities seeking help Federal funds to ease the transition to school integration. Funds could go for special courses for teachers in newly integrated schools or for employing specialists "to advise in problems incident to desegregation."

Title V—Civil Rights Commission

Extends for four years the life of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission, which was set up in 1957 to investigate discriminatory practices. The provision would authorize the commission to investigate charges of voter fraud or discrimination in Federal elections, and to serve as a "national clearinghouse for information in respect to equal protection of the laws." The commission would continue submitting periodic reports of its findings to the President and Congress.

Title VI—Federal Funds

Gives Federal agencies authority to take affirmative action—including, as a last resort, a cutoff of Federal funds—to end discrimination in Federally assisted programs such as school or hospital construction or vocational training. Before aid could be cut off on a project, there would have to be a hearing, approval by the President, and notification to Congress 30 days before the date of the cutoff. An aid cutoff would be subject to court review.

Title VII—Job Discrimination

Makes it unlawful for union or management to follow practices that "deprive any individual of employment opportunities" on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. A new equal employment opportunity commission would seek court injunctions against discriminatory practices if conciliation efforts fail. This section would go into effect one year after the bill's passage, with coverage limited in the first year to employers with 100 or more workers, and to unions with 100 or more members. Coverage would gradually be extended to include all employers and unions with 25 or more workers or members by the fourth year of the law's operation.

Title VIII—Voting Statistics

Requires the Census Bureau to gather voting statistics based on race, color, religion, and national origin in areas where the Civil Rights Commission believes discrimination exists. The inquiry would seek to determine to what extent all eligible persons are registered and have voted in elections for the U.S. House of Representatives since 1960.

Title IX—Civil Rights Appeal

Allows higher Federal court review of Federal court orders sending civil-rights cases back to state courts for trial. At present, a defendant in a civil-rights case can request a Federal court trial on the grounds that his rights would be denied by state courts. If his application is denied, he now has no appeal, and the case automatically goes to the state courts.

Title X—Community Relations Service

Establishes a seven-member community relations service to help communities resolve discrimination problems by means of conciliation. The service could act at the request of local officials or offer its services in cases where "peaceful relations among the citizens of the community involved are threatened." It would have no powers of enforcement, and its files would be kept secret.

Title VII has the most opposition of any part of the Civil Rights bill. Earlier exposure to FEPC efforts, which were generally defeated, has paved the way for substantial opposition nationwide. Most businessmen argue that this is nothing but an effort to obtain some kind of "racial balance" in all employment, a "balance" which would benefit Negroes and other minority groups at the expense of the majority of white workers. Further, objection is mounting because Title VII would mean a further intrusion of federal power in the ordinary workings of any business, making Uncle Sam still more of a "partner" to normal business operations.

Supporters say the purpose of Title VII is not to achieve a "balance" but to make employment and promotion relate only to merit. This is the most likely measure to be compromised if a compromise can be worked out. It is also the most likely measure to be dropped. It is possible that it will be dropped if, by its omission, proponents feel that their chances to pass the balance of the measure would be enhanced thereby.

Constitutional amendments already provide that representation in government by states which deny some citizens the right to vote, will be reduced proportionately. In the South these provisions are sometimes by-passed. The Southern bloc will oppose Title VIII.

BUSY BARBER

TUZLA, Yugoslavia (AP) — Ismet Begovic, oldest barber in Yugoslavia, has been clipping hair and shaving beards for 75 years. He is 90, and refuses to retire from the "pleasant smell of his shop. "Just think how many wars there have been in the past 75 years," he says. "And the people of Tuzla have always heard about them first in my shop."

Greeks Are Given 12 Jet Fighters

ATHENS, Greece (AP)— Twelve F104G jet fighters were formally handed over by the United States to the Greek air force this week as part of continuing American military aid to Greece. U.S. Ambassador Henry Labouisse and King Constantine were the ceremonial principals, with Premier George Papandreou standing by.

Barometer ProvesBoom to Science Research

By LYNN POOLE
The Johns Hopkins University

"And with a storm approaching, the barometric pressure is rapidly falling."

How many times have you heard these or similar words and paid little attention? Most of us take the barometer for granted in our mechanized, instrument-laden world. The barometer, however, is not only indispensable to meteorology and weather forecasting, but is an integral part of many scientific experiments. Without the barometer to measure atmospheric pressures, many other scientific measurements would be unobtainable.

In the laboratory, atmospheric pressure level has a significant effect on most physical, chemical and biological processes. In industry, pressure is measured and controlled to maintain uniformity of product, to guide in safe operation, and to measure other variables indirectly, including weight, liquid level, temperature and flow and density of fluids and hydraulic forces.

The barometer itself is a relatively simple instrument. In its simplest form, the mercury barometer consists essentially of a vertical glass tube about a yard long, closed at the top and filled with mercury. The tube extends downward into a vessel also containing mercury. As soon as it is free to do so the column of mercury in the tube sinks, leaving a vacuum at the top, until it stands at a height where the pressure of the column matches that of the atmosphere.

Modern barometers, of course, are much more intricate. Many use other materials than mercury. For example, the aneroid barometer, which uses no liquid, has achieved wide usage in recent times primarily because of its portability.

The barometer has had a long and noble career as a tool of science. Now a complete account of its history as a scientific instrument has been written after more than 300 years. Just a few days ago, the Johns Hopkins Press published "The History of the Barometer", by Dr. W. E. Knowles Middleton. Dr. Middleton, now retired from the National Research Council of Canada, has written several books and articles on optics and meteorological instruments.

He points out that long before the barometer came into common use, its invention contributed powerfully to the scientific revolution of the seventeenth century by making obsolete the idea of the physical impossibility of a vacuum.

He discusses what he calls the pre-history of the barometer, pointing out that "we are often told that the barometer was 'invented' by Evangelista Torricelli about 1643 . . . but the barometer did not appear out of nothing."

According to Dr. Middleton, many of the seventeenth century's leading scientific figures took part in the development of the barometer either by actual experimentation or by commenting on those of others. Torricelli evidently did make the first apparatus which we now know as the barometer, but earlier experimenting and theorizing by others helped lead him to this point.

He credits Rene Descartes with the first actual barometer. "If a meter must be an instrument with a scale," he explains, "then, by furnishing the Torricellian tube with a paper scale, he (Descartes) was the first to make a barometer." Dr. Middleton tells us that Englishman Robert Boyle was the first to use the term "barometer" applied to Torricelli's instrument, although the word "baroscope" was in use among members of the Royal Society.

The first known barometer in North America was donated to Harvard College in 1727 by Thomas Hollis, a London merchant, who also endowed the first scientific chair in North America there.

The story of the barometer is somehow symbolic of the entire scientific revolution. It was born out of early theories and experiments, changed basic thought about the world around us, it has become much more complex in the past century, and today serves mankind in opening new frontiers of knowledge.

Crowd Applauds Performers in Talent Contest

S. Sgt. Andrew Funches of the 4600th Civil Engineering Sq. won first place in two vocal categories at the first base-level talent show held at Ent Air Force Base since 1959.

He took top honors in the Pop Vocal Solo category, singing "The Nearness of You" and "Moon River." He then went on to win the Folk, Western competition with "Go Down Moses." Sgt. Funches was a winner in the 1963 Strategic Air Command talent show.

Pianist S. Sgt. Jim Frye, 4600th Air Base Sq., was tops among the instrumental soloists. He played Tschaikovsky's Piano Concerto in B Flat.

Airman 1. C. Jerry Strickland of the 615th Dispensary, originally scheduled to emcee the affair, was unable to attend the competition because of a singing commitment downtown. He had, however, been judged at a dress rehearsal for the talent show and finished first in the Semi-Classical Solo Event.

Second place in that category went to Airman 2 C. John Schmidt, 4600th Operations Sq., who drew tremendous applause from the near capacity crowd attending the show when he sang the "Sound of Music" and Climb Every Mountain." Airman Schmidt also placed second behind Sgt. Funches in the Pop Solo run-off, singing "Without a Song."

Airman 2. C. Glen Winter, 4600th Supply Sq., was runner-up behind Sgt. Funches in the Western, Folk category, but then teamed with the Mavericks; Airman 1. C. William T. Glade, Civil Engineering Sq., on guitar and Airman 2 C. Arlen E. Bradley, 615th Dispensary, on drums to take a first.

Airman Winter's Mavericks took top honors in the Western Group category, first playing "Rawhide," and instrumental, and then singing an original composition, "Walk Me to the Door."

Airman Winter's sang "Lonely Nights" and his own "Land of Broken Dreams" in the Folk, Western Solo competition.

The show's emcee, S. Sgt. Fred Downey, won the Novelty Act contest with his handling of between act routines.

Judges for the 70 minute show were: June Adams, post entertainment director at Fort Carson; Evelyn Crandall and Suzanne Hoelzl, both previously with various service club programs.

Judging was on a point system, with penalties assessed if a performer went over a specified time limit.

Looking At Hollywood

LESLIE CARON BLAMES CAREER IN SEPARATION

HOLLYWOOD — Leslie Caron came into my office and gave me a glowing interview about her happy marriage to Peter Hall and their two beautiful children. Soon thereafter they announced their separation in London with the old chestnut about career problems. From an unimpeachable source, I learned that Leslie was in Chicago last week — incognito in a blonde wig — visiting Warren Beatty. Incidentally, Leslie's parents are here from the Virgin Islands to keep her company.

When I saw Natalie Wood and Arthur Loew Jr., dining out a week or so ago, I thought this romance would never reach the altar. Now the betting in town is that it will be washed, scrubbed, and cleaned within two weeks. You'll be surprised at the name of the replacement.

Despite the flop of "The Ceremony," Larry Harvey's determined to produce and direct another. Has his eye on a script called "The Couch and I."

The Peter Sellers story by Joe Hyams began a 10-week run yesterday in a London paper, which shelled out $45,000 for it. At the 11th hour, Billy Wilder was able to get Ray Walston to replace Sellers in "Kiss Me, Stupid," with Kim Novak and Dean Martin. There also was a matter of a million dollars in insurance involved. I'm sorry Sellers couldn't do the picture, but I'm delighted for Ray. He'll be marvelous.

Lauritz Melchior will marry Mary Markham on June 23 in the garden of his home. His 86-year-old sister from Denmark will fly over for it. His best man will be Karl Lauskotter, an opera star turned professor at the University of Southern California. Loretta Harris, Mary's best friend, will be matron of honor. Lauritz said, "Living alone after my happy marriage of 38 years was too awful to contemplate. Maria (his late wife) and Mary were great friends. Maria always told me, 'Don't ever live alone — you're not geared for it, dear.' "

Dick Van Dyke will have the opportunity to star with Elke Sommer for Ross Hunter in "The Art of Love." The picture Elke was to do with Steve Boyd fell through, so she's free to return to Hollywood which she loves. And we're glad to have her.

Seems most of the cameramen in New York were at the Rainbow room after the opening of "Hamlet." All the prominent stars were present, too, but the photographers ignored them. They only turned their lenses on you-know-who.

William Wyler gave up smoking for eight weeks. Trying to find the right girl for his picture was such a hassle, he went back to cigarets, but swears he'll give them up when "The Collector" is finished. Just before the picture was to roll, British Actress Samantha Egger was booted out, and a big play was made to get Natalie Wood. But they couldn't spring her, so Samantha's right back where she started. According to Wyler they wanted to play it safe with a name, but he tells me Samantha will be one when the film ends.

Pat Boone's wife, Shirley is hospitalized with mononucleosis. She's had it a month and wasn't getting better.

Castle Rock Company Gets Bid on Bridge

Ramsour Bros., Inc., Castle Rock, with an offer of $94,201, was the lowest of five bidders April 2 on a Colorado Department of Highways project to widen a bridge on Colo. 27 south of Fountain in El Paso County.

The bridge will be widened by 15 feet to provide a 10-foot driving lane and a five-foot sidewalk. Completion will be required within three months. Resident Engineer Frank Sollee of Colorado Springs was named to supervise the project.

STEEL UPKEEP

NEW YORK (UPI) — The steel industry says it will spend $1.5 billion this year to keep its plant and equipment in shape for the market battle with imports and competing materials. It has cost the steelmakers $16.7 billion to stay modern and efficient since the end of World War II.

Florida, the world's largest phosphorus producer, supplies 30 million tons annually — one-third of the world's need.

Cost Reduction Everyone's Business

Air Force Cost Reduction monitors from the Rocky Mountain Region were told Friday that the Air Force Cost Reduction Program is everyone's business—from the top commanders to the lowest ranking man assigned on the base.

Lt. Col. Harwell L. Boyd, team chief, AF Cost Reduction Team said, "Each individual must show ingenuity and enthusiasm in order to make the Air Force program successful."

More than 150 monitors from Air Defense Command headquarters, ADC's Air Divisions, Air Force Academy and the Air Force Accounting and Finance Center, Denver attended the one-day Air Force Cost Reduction Seminar held here by the AF Cost Reducation Program experts.

The seminar, hosted by the Air Defense Command's office of the Deputy Chief of Staff Materiel, was held to brief monitors on the new Cost Reduction Program and discuss how to put it into effect.

The Air Force Cost Reduction Program is designed to save money through good management techniques. Basically, the program was instituted to improve procurement and logistics management and reduce operating costs without degrading operational effectiveness.

Col. Boyd in his opening remarks told conferees over one half of the Department of Defense Cost Reduction Program goal is being accomplished by the Air Force. Plans are for the Air Force to accomplish an annual rate of savings of $4 billion by July 1965.

According to the AF Cost Reduction Team Chief, most of the Air Force savings have been in the Materiel Program, however, the new program going into effect on July 1, 1964, will include all areas.

He added, "the cost reduction goal is realistic and attainable if each individual and the Air Force becomes cost reduction conscious."

The Air Force Team Chief said, "Air Force personnel, both civilian and military, must be sold on making cost reduction a way of life."

Following the general briefing, the monitors were broken into seven separate siminars. Each of the rountable seminars covered parts of the 25 areas in the new Cost Reduction Program.

Maj. Gen. Von R. Shoares, acting chief of staff, Air Defense Command welcomed the Air Force Cost Reduction Team and the monitors to the one-day seminar.

Air Defense Command's cost reduction savings have amounted to $8.4 million during the six month period ending December 1963.

This is one half of the goal programmed for the 1964 Fiscal Year which ends on June 30 of this year. Additional Cost Reduction proposals with a potential savings of $5 million are at Air Force headquarters for acceptance.

The Air Force Cost Reduction Team will be at Strategic Air Command headquarters, Offutt AFB, Nev. Monday to conduct a similar seminar. The team is visitng Air Force major air commands throughout April and May conducting seminars to emphasize the urgency of active support of the AF Cost Reduction Program during the balance of the 1964 Fiscal Year.

Lt. Col. Alfred V. Fidrocki, monitor, ADC Cost Reduction Program, served as the ADC project officer for the local seminar.

Legislative Lobyist Has Tribulations

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP)—The tribulations that can pop up in the life of a legislative lobbyist were reflected in an expense report.

17—DANGER! WRITING CURVES AHEAD

Time your reading of this column and compare your speed with that indicated at the end. The expected speed assumes a daily five per cent improvement.

●

Since the beginning of time people have been saying things like "Every man has a right to his own opinion." The everlasting mother - in - law has wailed "Some father he'll make! He can't even drive a nail." And there has always been a teacher to say, "This school has had nothing but trouble since your Algernon enrolled."

If these statements are as old as the hills, let us venerate their age, not their logic.

Generally, the man who defends every man's right to his opinion has never had one. He owns a pet collection of cliches, some inherited biases and a home - grown thickheadedness. An opinion is a conclusion you reach after a fair study of evidence "for" and evidence "against." So what our friend is really saying is: "Every man has a right to his own whatever - comes - into - his - head." The fallacy is trying to palm this off as opinion.

The worried mother - in - law sets out to prove that her son-in-law will make a poor father. She does make a good point: he is an awful carpenter. But she doesn't prove the point she is trying to make.

Poor Algernon came before all the school trouble. Everyone knows that a cause always comes before an effect, but you can't say that everything that precedes the effect is its cause. It's like saying in a political essay, "There was no dope traffic in this town till Mayor Allgood took office," or "We never had a tornado here until coffee-vending machines were introduced."

Try this one out. You hear it every day in the week. "Every man has a right to a living wage." Does he? Think again. Shouldn't that statement be "every man has a right 'to earn' a living wage" or "Every 'fully employed' man has a right to a living wage'"?

Here's a real beauty. "This is a free country, so I have a right to do what I darn well please." The teacher in the first grade tried to get through to this fellow when he raised his hand to ask, "Can I leave the room?" The teacher said what they all say: "You can, but you may not." The teacher was trying to get across the difference between "ability" and "right". Now you have to straighten out your friend and tell him that, free country or not, he is "able" to do what he darn well pleases; he has a "right" to do only what the law, morals and convention darn well please.

In all such statements (and they will appear in the most respectable writing with somewhat more sophistication), ask yourself two questions: "What does he say he's proving? What is he really proving?"

There are other everyday gems of illogic that few ever detect. Let's try more. "This paper is losing patience with those doctors who oppose water fluoridation in the face of the testimony of so many experts." Looks harmless, but it's what is called the "vicious circle." In calling some men "experts" the writer is "assuming" the good of fluoridation — because they are not experts if fluoridation is not all they say it is. The writer is assuming as proved exactly what he's trying to prove.

Somewhat along the same line, but a different fallacy, is the pretty coed who reinforces her case against capital punishment by quoting Marlon Brando and Steve Allen. She would be just as logical if she asked Dr. Albert Schweitzer to make the final selection of this year's top 10 pop tunes. Schweitzer is as much of a hep cat as Brando is a criminologist. No man is an authority once he leaves his field.

In critical reading learn to examine and question general statements, especially the sacred cows most people utter.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Extractions and Dentures In One Magical Operation

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE D. D. S.

Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Grandma had to wait three months after her extractions before she got her false teeth. Gums needed time to heal; they had to be toughened. They had to shrink before dentures could be properly fitted.

But just try getting a youthful, active grandmother of today to give up three months of her social life! And it's quite unnecessary. Modern dentistry with its new thinking and new techniques has eliminated this long delay. Dentures can be placed immediately after the natural teeth have been taken out.

It's really magical; patients awaken from anesthesia with teeth in their mouth!

Impressions of teeth and jaws are taken before the natural teeth are removed. The artificial teeth are constructed to look as much like the natural ones as possible — same shape, size, color and position in the jaw. The way the upper and lower teeth come together can be duplicated if desirable. Improvements can be made in all these departments too.

What about healing of gums, and the toughening process, and shrinkage?

Immediate dentures protect the gums. They act like a bandage. There is usually less bleeding. Food and debris is less apt to get into the sockets.

Dental surgeons are very clever about smoothing bumps left by extractions. The work of a skillful surgeon is something to admire. Even stitches are in perfect alignment. The denture protects thhe surgeon's work.

Of course, the gums shrink. Maximum shrinkage occurs during the first three months. At the end of that time, or sooner if necessary, dentures are rebased. Teeth are kept in the same position; only the pink base material is altered to fill in the areas of shrinkage. Rarely is it necessary to remake an entire denture.

Patients find it easier to get used to immediate dentures. Speech is less distorted. Teeth work better and look better. Facial contours and expressions do not change as much and changes are more gradual.

Unfortunately not every case can be treated in this fashion. Your dentist must evaluate each case and make the final decision.

IRISH DERBY IS LISTED

Art Department Head to Give Faculty Lecture

Lloyd Samuelson, chairman of the Fine Arts Department at Palmer High School, will deliver the last in the school's current series of faculty lectures, Monday at 3 p.m. in the General Palmer Room of Palmer High.

In his lecture Samuelson will answer the question "Why Art?" pointing out that art is both important and relevant in modern society. More specifically, he will show how art can help a student orient himself in the world and how art can help make his life more worthwhile.

Samuelson is well-known in Colorado Springs not only as a teacher, but also as a practicing artist whose painting and sculpture have been exhibited in several major shows. He has been active in art associations and has made speaking appearances at many group meetings in the region.

He attended Antioch College and holds the Bachelor of Fine Arts Degree from the College of William and Mary. He holds a masters degree from Colorado College.
